EDENBORN, AIDING MRS. MEIER, ASKED CLOSEST SECRECY

"It Is Nobody's Business," Millionaire Said in One Letter Referring to Present of Stocks.

DIDN'T WANT HIS VISITS MENTIONED

Wife of Farmer, Claimant to $76,000,000 Estate as Daughter, Saved Correspondence.

Secrecy was insisted upon by William Edenborn, capitalist and railroad owner, in his correspondence with Mrs. Sophie Meier, farmer's wife of Gumbo, St. Louis County, who is preparing to sue for a daughter's share of the $76,000,000 left by Edenborn when he died May 14 at his Shreveport, La., home, aged 78.

"It is nobody's business," declared Edenborn in one of his letters, referring to a gift of stock. And so Mrs. Meier, toiling with her husband, Frank Meier, on their small grain farm overlooking the Missouri River bottoms, kept Edenborn's secrets, expecting that Edenborn would name her as his daughter in his will and make herself and members of her family beneficiaries.

But no will was found when Edenborn died and his widow, formerly Miss Sarah Drain of St. Louis, succeeded to the whole estate, there being no living children of that marriage. Mrs. Meier says she is the daughter of Edenborn by a prior marriage, and offers corresponence to prove her claim. She has retained the law firm of Laughlin, Frumberg, Blodgett and Russell, and John T. Timmons, and they will file suits this week here and elsewhere to establish her claim.

Substance of One Letter.

One letter written by Edenborn to Mrs. Meier refers to the fact that the ashes of a daughter by the present Mrs. William Edenborn and of an adopted daughter, are contained in urns buried on the Meier farm. As an afterthought, Edenborn wrote:

P. S. As I had not said anything to Mrs. E. about having deposited the ashes of the 2 girls out there—though have told her so later—it is best that nothing about my previous visits be mentioned in talking, should I bring her out some day. I tried to have her go with me to visit you and the place, but her folks always kept her at their house. Cut off this part below my name and destroy it after reading.

Intuition or something of the sort caused Mrs. Meier to save the letter, postscript and all. The paper is yellow with age, but the ink is well preserved.

Letter Regarding Stocks.

Another of the letters in her possession is dated at Chicago, June 11, 1900, on the stationery of the American Steel and Wire Co., which Edenborn was a founder. He was chairman of the company's Executive Committee, and his name is at the top of the letterhead, together with the other committee members: I. L. Ellwood and John W. Gates, known as "Bet-you-a-million" Gates. The text follows:

My dear Sophie Meier

I enclose herein Certificates B 628 for 6 shares of preferred stock in American Steel & Wire Co. So far this Wire Co. stock has paid 7 per cent dividends or 1¾ per cent every 3 months.

You have nothing to do but simply put this 6 shares carefully away. I will leave your address with the Secretary of the Co. so he will mail you the check for dividends direct. Now when you get a check you keep it until you go to St. Louis and go to the German Savings Institution and you can get the cash for it.

You are not to speak about this to anyone besides your husband—it is nobody's business, nor is Frank to talk about it to anybody!!!

I hope this will find you and yours in good headth. Nobody knows from me that I have sent this to you. My time is so limited that I could not come out to Gumbo but will do so as soon as I can. Just write "Received" on the paper and mail to me and always mark on any letter you send me the word "Personal".

I remain
Yours truly
Wm. E.

Other letters are in the same hardened vein. Edenborn was very

FIVE KILLED, 40 INJURED WHEN BRIDGE COLLAPSES

200 Persons on Span at West Virginia Town Watching Carnival Attraction When Crash Occurs.

By the Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., July 24.—Five persons are known to have been killed, two others probably fatally injured, and between 40 and 50 seriously injured when a bridge collapsed at Whitesville tonight.

A large throng had been attracted to the town by a carnival and among the attractions was a fire-fighting event which was displayed on the bank of Coal River. The bridge offered a place of vantage and when 200 or more persons crowded upon the span it crashed into the water, virtually without warning.

BEIRUT, Syria, July 24. — Two French aviators, in the operations against the insurgent tribesmen, have met with an atrocious death. Because of engine trouble, they were compelled to come to the ground during a combined foot, horse and aerial operation in the region of Ghouta. They were captured by the rebels after a desperate resistance. In their wounded condition they were bound to the wrecked airplane, which was set afire.

COOLIDGE FISHES UNTIL DARK

By the Associated Press.

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., July 24.—It was after 7:30 o'clock tonight when President Coolidge returned from the fishing expedition, but he and the secret service men who accompanied him brought back 70 brook trout, some weighing 1½ pounds.

Mr. Coolidge went to the same stream on the Rockefeller preserve that he visited a week ago with excellent results. Clambering over rocks and logs, he whipped the stream, until the approach of darkness forced him to abandon the exciting sport and return to White Pine camp.

ROME, July 24. — Augusto Caseletto of Milan was seized by a shark while swimming in the Mediterranean near Genoa today before the eyes of horrified companions who were powerless to save him.

It is many years since sharks appeared off Genoa. Thousands of bathers were terrified by Caselato's fate.

Watch the Suburbs

The growth of a city vertically, is limited. Apartment houses, even if tall as office buildings, cannot shelter all the new families.

The city spreads until the suburbs become a part of it. Thus values increase and wise investors profit.

Do you want a home as well as an investment? St. Louis' beautiful suburbs are not cramped for space. Continual growth will add value every year to your purchase there.

GOV. FERGUSON'S FOE 40,000 AHEAD IN TEXAS VOTING

191 of 252 Counties Give Moody 120,312, Woman Executive 79,887 in Democratic Primary.

SHE DECLARES SHE IS NOT ALARMED

Vote for Other Candidates Negligible — G. O. P. Congressman in Lead for Renomination.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., July 24.—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson tonight trailed behind Dan Moody, youthful State's Attorney General, in the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor on the face of incomplete returns from today's Texas primary, compiled by the Texas Election Bureau.

Returns from 191 out of 242 counties in the State gave Moody a lead of 40,425 votes over the woman whom he seeks to succeed, and a majority over all his opponents in the race of a bare 2000.

A majority of the total vote cast is necessary for nomination, with the alternative a run-off primary next month, between the two candidates polling the highest votes.

Figures for 191 counties gave:

Moody, 120,312; Mrs. Ferguson, 79,887; Lynch Davidson, 37,036; Mrs. Edith Wilman of Dallas, 330; the Rev. O. F. Zimmerman of Morris County, 607 and Mrs. K. M. Johnston, 334. (Mrs. Johnston announced her withdrawal yesterday and threw her support to Gov. Ferguson).

Not Alarmed, Says Governor.

Receiving returns at the Executive Mansion in Austin, Mrs. Ferguson said she was not discouraged or excited. She said the country boxes, where she expects her big support, had not been heard from.

"I have been through elections before, and the reports in favor of Moody do not alarm me," she said.

She declined to state whether she would resign in accordance with her agreement to do so if Moody led her one vote. She said she would make no statement on this until she learned the final outcome, which she did not expect for three days.

Moody Withholds Statement.

Incomplete returns received from Bell County, the home county of the Fergusons, showed Moody in the lead there. Harris County, the home of Davidson, also placed Moody in the lead with early returns.

Moody said that the latest figures received were so near a majority that he did not want to make a statement until more complete returns were received.

Congressional Contests.

Scattering returns in the Democratic congressional races showed the incumbents to be leading. There was a possible close race in the Tenth district, where Congressman Buchanan sought re-election.

Early returns gave Congressman Harry M. Wurzbach, Republican, a good lead over his opponent, Fred Knetsch, who had the support of National Committeeman R. B. Creager. Outside of this Republican race, little interest was manifested and returns from the Republican primary had not commenced to come in three hours after the polls closed, Knetsch conceded loss of Bexar County (San Antonio).

Republican State Headquarters said its reports indicated that Col. H. H. Haines, the Creager candidate for the nomination for Governorship, was leading by a safe margin his opponent, E. P. Scott, of Corpus Christi.

Late tonight Wurzbach estimated his probable majority at 10 to 1 in the whole district. He forecast a complete reorganization of the Texas Republican organization, the control of many county conventions having been swept into his hands, he declared.

The question of whether Creager was to continue to head the State machine was admittedly the prime issue in the fight between Wurzbach and the party leaders. Both factions declared that control of the party in Texas was at stake in this primary.

Heavy Balloting Despite Rain.

Heavy balloting in every section of the state was reported.

Despite rains in North Texas and scattered showers in other sections, reports indicated early tonight that

SESQUI-CENTENNIAL HEAD FINED $4 FOR SUNDAY OPENING

Blue Law Conviction, Before Woman to Be Tested in Higher Courts.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—Erastus L. Austin, director general of the Sesqui-Centennial exposition, today was held guilty by Mrs. Violet E. Fahnestock, police magistrate, of violating the Sunday blue laws of 1794 in operating the exposition on the Sabbath. Mrs. Fahnestock fined him the limit of $4, provided by the law, plus costs of $4.50. The law provides that if the fine is not paid the alternative is six days in jail. Appeals are permitted.

Austin put up a bond of $17, double the amount of the fine and costs, pending an appeal.

The prosecution, as in former cases, was brought by members of the Methaodist Men's Committee. It was testified by Thomas D. Taylor, chairman of the committee, that goods were sold in the exposition grounds last Sunday and amusements were operated on the Gladway.

Tomorrow the concessions on the Gladway, where all the amusements are concentrated, will be operated free of cost to the public. The only charge will be the usual 50 cents admission to the grounds.

9,000,000 U. S. AUTOS ON TOUR

Upward of $3,000,000,000 to Be Spent by Travelers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 24. — Nine million automobiles, carrying 36,000,000 persons will go on long-distance tours during this season, according to a survey made by the American Automobile Association's National Touring Board. The board, whose survey is based on counts made by 815 affiliated motor clubs, estimates that $3,000,000,000 or more, will be spent by the tourists during their travels. This would exceed by $500,000,000 the amount spent during last year's touring season.

American motorists planning trips to Canada were warned by the association to take along their state registration cards. In Ontario alone, an average of 25 cars have been refused admittance daily during the last few weeks because the motorists left their cards at home.

GIRL FAILS TO SWIM CHANNEL

Mercedes Gleitze, London Typist, Lasts Only Five Hours.

By the Associated Press.

FOLKERSTONE, England, July 24.—Miss Mercedes Gleitze, London typist, has failed again to swim the English channel. This was her third attempt. She started about noon and was taken out of the water after five hours after she had covered about 19 miles, though not in a direct course.

Miss Gleitze was followed by a motorboat. As she proceeded the wind increased and the sea became very choppy. Waves broke over her head and drenched all aboard the boat.

EDITOR'S MURDER LEADS TO OUSTING OF POLICE CHIEF

KNOWN AS ENEMY OF THE SLAIN MAN

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

CANTON, O., July 24.—Seranus A Lengel chief of the Canton police department and bulls-eye of the target at which Editor Don R. Mellett aimed his attacks against vice and official corruption which resulted in his murder nine days ago, tonight was "suspended for 30 days without pay for purpose of discipline," by Mayor Swarts.

"My reason," continued the Mayor's order, "is that your lack of control of the police department and your mismanagement thereof has caused inefficiency in that department, and your contact with law violators, and the contact of members of your department with known violators, permitted by you, has made it impossible for the department successfully to enforce the laws."

Was Enemy of Editor.

Until tonight Lengel at least was official head of the many investigations into Mellett's murder, his position there made peculiar by the fact he also was the arch enemy of the editor.

Actually, however, the efforts of the Chief and his men to uncover the assassin, who is supposed to have crept out of the "Jungle"—Canton's foreign section and its crime center—to kill Mellett the night of July 16 have been viewed extremely cynically by the late editor's friend.

For this reason a score of private, county and State operatives, under leadership of J. D. Cleary, personal representative of Gov. Donahey, have come to be looked upon generally as the real motive power for what progress toward solution is being made.

Revives Waning Interest.

As far as surface indications go this seems to be slight. A few women of Canton's so-called "underworld" were questioned today, but without tangible result. Lengel's temporary removal was the outstanding happening, and appears to have done more than anything since the murder to revive Canton's waning interest in the causes of Mellett's death.

This is the second time Mayor Swarts has ousted the Chief of Police. It was an echo of the previous occurrence that was sounded loudest in Mellett's vice campaign when he was killed—an attempt to obtain removal under charges of the two Civil Service Commissioners who voted to reinstate Lengel over the Mayor's dismissal.

Lengel was appointed Jan. 1 1922, and from that time, although it was long before Mellett came to Canton, may be traced the events that ultimately caused his death.

Named Under Former Mayor.

On that date C. C. Curtis, Republican and a lawyer, took office as Mayor of Canton. He promptly appointed his brother, Edward, a clerk, Director of Public Safety and the appointee named Lengel as Chief.

After about a year charges began to be bruited about that Ed Curtis was taking bribe money from the underworld. The Canton Daily News, of which Mellett later was to become editor, investigated and on the strength of its findings induced Lengel, by that time "on the outs" with Curtis, to stage several incriminating raids and gather much evidence against the director of public safety.

The charges and this evidence finally were laid before Gov. Donahey with a demand for action, but meanwhile Mayor Curtis had been elected to a second term. The Governor sent his private investigator to Canton, the two Curtises were taken back to Columbus and in May, 1924, both were the chief factor on which the Governor based his removal orders. Charles M. Ball, president of the Council, succeeded to the mayoralty, the Curtises came back to Canton, down

BORAH BLAMES CHURCHILL FOR BRITISH CARPING

FIRST U. S. OFFICIAL NOTICE OF ATTACKS

Senator Points Out England Claimed and Got Lion's Share of Territories Divided After War.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—European critics of the foreign policies of the United States were reminded today by Chairman Borah of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that people who live in glass houses should not throw stones.

Directing his advice particularly toward London, Borah said that Winston Churchill's "campaign of vilification," designed to obtain the cancellation of war debts, should not be permitted to erase from the world's memory the territorial acquisitions accomplished by Great Britain at the peace table.

"The Earl of Denbigh deplores the lamentable ignorance of our people," Borah continued, "and wants to start a campaign of education, but the American people have sufficient intelligence without any etxraordinary educational exertion to understand how a debtor acts when he does not want to pay what he owes. We understand perfectly that the attack on the United States is the peculiar way they have of asking for cancellation of their debt."

First Official U. S. Notice.

Borah's declaration, made in a formal statement, was the first official notice to be taken here of the recent anti-American agitation which has expressed itself in attacks on American sightseers in Paris, denunciations of the American policies by a section of the Italian press, and other scattered outcroppings throughout most of Europe.

Churchill, who is head of the British Treasury, was declared by Borah to have sought through his recent utterances in Parliament to apply military tactics to the international situation and conduct "a Gallipoli campaign for cancellation." Vilification always has been a part of military strategy, the Senator said, and now it had been brought into play to brand the United States as "Uncle Shylock" and the American people as a nation "void of all sense of humanity or correct principles."

Britain Got Lion's Share.

"What has happened since the war that we should have forfeited our high standing and now be denounced as 'Uncle Shylock'?" he continued. "We attended the Versailles conference, where among other things to be done, the world was to be partitioned. There were about 4,207,392 square miles of territory to be divided among the victors. Of this amount Great Britain secured 3,804,000, France 402,392 square miles. It would seem that Great Britain's quarrel is not with the United States but with France. It was France that got 402,392 square miles.

"Certainly there are no reasons here for calling the United States Uncle Shylock,' whatever reason Great Britain had for complaining against France.

"Indeed, after the war and after the treaty, high officials stated upon the floor of the House of Commons: 'The outstanding feature of the peace treaty is that it puts the British Empire at the highest point that it has ever reached in regard to territorial and world influence.'

"What has happened since the treaty that would impeach our ideals? We had the note of Great Britain drawing 5 per cent interest and due. We canceled the debt to the extent of about 30 cents on the dollar, and we gave her sixty-two years in which to pay.

"Our settlements with Great Britain, Italy, Belgium and the proposed settlement with France, represent a cancellation of $7,000,000,000.

U. S. Not a "Shylock."

"It would seem that under all the circumstances, there is no occasion for charging the United States with being a 'Shylock.'

"But, I do not wish to have it inferred that I am charging that Great Britain has been false to her ideals."

COOLIDGE THINKS TRADE PACTS ALMOST ONLY WAY TO COLLECT SOME DEBTS

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 24.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE is gravely concerned regarding the turn of affairs in Europe, according to a special story to be published by the Syracuse Herald tomorrow from its special correspondent at the Coolidge summer camp on Osgood Lake, describing an interview Edward H. O'Hara, publisher of the Herald, had with the President today.

"The President," O'Hara stated, "indicated that he was gravely concerned regarding the turn of affairs in Europe among the debtor nations of the United States." O'Hara said he was given to understand from sources close to the President "that virtually all hope of payment of certain debts rested in trade agreements."

MELLON MAY DISCUSS DEBT WITH POINCARE

One Person He Is Principally Interested in Seeing, However, Is Daughter in Rome.

By the Associated Press.

DINARD, Brittany, France, July 24.—Andrew W. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, newly-arrived in France, spent the second day of his vacation quietly at this holiday spot near the Normandy-Brittany border line. He was seemingly unmindful of the presence of Benjamin Strong, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank; Montague Norman, governor of the Bank of England, within reach in London; Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, reported at a Dutch seaside resort, and Premier Poincare, quoted as desirous of talking with him informally regarding the American-French debts.

Secretary Mellon plans to motor to Rome by easy stages through Britanny and the Pyrenees, but keeping his itinerary a secret in order to avoid newspaper men, cameramen and politicians. He may perhaps regale himself by attending at a number of local religious fetes of a picturesque character now being celebrated in Brittany.

Through Theodore Rousseau, of the Guaranty Trust Co., who accompanies him. Mellon let it be known this evening that the one person he was principally interested in seeing in Europe was his daughter, Ailsa, now in Rome with her husband, the American Vice-Consul, David K. E. Bruce. He will not visit Paris until after he has seen the young couple in Italy, and then, if M. Poincare wishes a conference with him, he naturally would not refuse.

Others with Secretary Mellon are Clarence Mackay and Paul Mellon.

The Secretary is not perturbed by the appellation which the Communists have conferred upon him, "Emperor," in their Paris organ L'Humanite, but insists that he is making his tour incognito. He declares that the debt affair is out of his hands and up to the American and French Legislatures to ratify or reject.

TWO CONVICTS SLAIN AFTER STABBING PRISON OFFICER

Kansas Penitentiary Guards Frustrate Escape of Men Armed With Wooden Revolver.

By the Associated Press.

LANSING, Kan., July 24.—Ernest Hardwick, a Kansas City robber and Robert W. Edwards were killed by guards tonight when they attempted to escape from the State penitentiary here after they had stabbed Capt. R. B. Manatt, veteran prison officer. Hardwick was shot by Edgar Ransom, a Negro guard, and Edwards by other guards who came to Ransom's aid. Manatt is in a serious condition in the prison hospital.

The attack and attempted escape occurred just a few moments before the prisoners, who were in the yard, were to have been locked in their cells. Hardwick, Edwards and two other prisoners, armed with three knives, made from old files, and an imitation revolver whittled from wood, appeared in Capt. Manatt's office and forced him to take them to the prison telephone office, where three operators were seized and bound and the telephone wires torn from the switchboard.

Manatt then was marched to Ransom's post. "We're coming to fix some wires," Hardwick told the guard. Ransom did not hesitate when he saw Capt. Manatt with the prisoners, but opened the door to his tower. Hardwick made a leap for Ransom, shouting, "I want that gun." The prisoner pointed the wooden revolver at Ransom, who fired twice from the hip.

POINCARE PLANS RISE IN INDIRECT AND OTHER TAXES TO RESCUE FRANC

New Cabinet Agrees in Principle on Program to Be Submitted to Chamber for Approval.

WAR DEBTS ISSUE IS SIDE-TRACKED

Policy of "Restoration From Within" Decided On—Premier Wishes to Consult Secretary Mellon.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 24.—Premier Poincare's new Cabinet has agreed on the principles of a financial rehabilitation program which will be submitted to Parliament for approval.

An official communique issued after the first meeting of the 13 members of the Poincare "Ministry of National Union" this afternoon, made the announcement.

The principles are understood to include the increase of indirect taxation, and a slight increase in the direct levy on acquired wealth, in order to follow the plan of "restoration from within," rather than resort to the aid of credits obtained abroad.

Seven of the 13 Ministers are known either to have taken a stand publicly against ratification of the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement in its present form, or who are likely, in view of their past political associations, to side with Poincare on a showdown. These are said to be Poincare, Painleve, Herriot, Leygues, Tardieu, Bokanowski and Marin, and Sarraut and Faillieres and the other members of the Cabinet are expected to concur.

Debt Terms to Be Sidetracked.

Therefore, ratification of the interallied debt agreements will probably be sidetracked temporarily, notwithstanding the fact that various spokesmen have predicted that both accords, with the United States and Great Britain, would be ratified in a short time.

Poincare's first act on assuming direction of the Ministry of Finance was to instruct all agents throughout the country to hasten the publication and distribution of the new tax lists for 1926, and to send out notices encouraging taxpayers to make provisional part payments.

"It is important that this example be followed everywhere," say the instructions. "No refusal to accept such partial payments upon the pretext that the tax list has not been published will be tolerated on the part of collectors."

Poincare took over his duties as Finance Minister today. Briand was back at the Foreign Office and wheels of the new Government began to run smoothly after the hiatus caused by the downfall of the Herriot ministry.

Poincare greatly desires to talk with Andrew W. Mellon, the American Secretary of the Treasury, over certain phases of the Franco-American debt settlement agreement, which he says are presenting difficulties to ratification. Mellon is in France. He has stated that he is simply on vacation and desires complete rest.

To Reduce Floating Debt.

It will be the government's endeavor to allay the fears of capitalists. It purposes to run the state on a strictly economic and businesslike basis. It will begin reduction of the floating debt as soon as possible.

The Echo de Paris says there will be a light tax on acquired wealth. The bulk of the resources, however, will bed rawn from a revision of existing taxes and the creation of new ones, preferably indirect, as giving an immediate yield.

While the new administration has been received by the general public with something like enthusiasm, the moderates criticise Poincare for including Edouard Herriot, and the radicals criticise Herriot for joining Poincare. There has been no organized opposition to the ministry except from the Socialists.

There was another attempt last night at baiting visitors to Paris. Foreigners were hissed, going on sight-seeing tours in busses. A large force of police quickly scattered the demonstrators.

While the Bourse was closed today the franc showed steady improvement on unofficial quotations. It was quoted at 9 o'clock at 41.75 to the dollar, and 204 to the pound sterling, as against last night's official closing of 42.87 and 208.25, respectively. At 10 o'clock the quotations were 41.12 to the dollar and 200 to the pound; at 11 o'clock, 40.87 and 198.75 and at noon 40.91 and 199.

PLAN PROSECUTION OF DRY CHIEF WHO DRANK 'EVIDENCE'

Federal Authorities at San Francisco to Take Up Case of Ned M. Green With Grand Jury.

HE DENIES DOING ANYTHING ILLEGAL

"I Have Given Honest Administration; I Am Regular Human Being, Not Religious Fanatic."

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 24.—New M. Green was suspended today as prohibition administrator for Northern California and Nevada on orders from Washington and his supply of liquors with which he has entertained guests in his hotel room here was seized.

Following his suspension by Garrard B. Winston, Acting Secretary of the Treasury, pending investigation of charges of misconduct, Green was visited in his room at Hotel Whitcomb late today by Government agents who demanded the liquor in his possession.

"You can take anything in the room you want," Green said. He turned over a varied assortment of liquors which almost filled a bureau drawer.

"Some of that stuff may be pre-Volstead stuff and some of it may not," he said. "Don't tell anybody, but it isn't anybody's business.

Not Against Law to Have It.

"It isn't against the law to have liquor in your home or to offer it to your guests."

Charges against the dry administrator will be taken before a Federal grand jury Monday. George Hatfield, United States District Attorney, announced he would seek Green's indictment on charges of misappropriating liquor seized by the Government and with misconduct in office.

Col. Green answered that he welcomed indictment and trial because, he declared, it would establish he has not been in possession of governmentally controlled liquor and has not been guilty of misconduct. A trial, he said, "will clarify a situation which puts me in a very bad light."

"I have had under my control liquor valued at more than $2,000,000. If I was crooked I could order a barrel or two sent around to the homes of friends. But no one can accuse me of having broken that trust.

"Should Have Been Suspended."

Advised that he had been suspended pending the outcome of charges against him, Green said today, "I should have been suspended long ago."

Sam Johnson, chief aid to Green, who has been named to succeed him, said today that he would be willing to serve as the prohibition chief only so long as the investigation is under way.

Asked if he believed in prohibition Green declared: "I believe in prohibition firmly because of its economic benefits to the nation, but it is unfortunate that the temperate have to suffer for the sins of the intemperate. I do not believe that there will be any modification of the dry law.

"As for myself, if any friend or stranger calls on me I will offer him a drink and take one with him if it gags me. I still insist that I have done nothing against the law. There were several wild spots in that interview printed by a morning paper today. It would indicate that I have admitted all of the charges against me, which I emphatically have not done.

"I am being crucified by friends and foe. I did not come out here with a long nose to snoop into other people's affairs to see whether they had liquor or not. I came here to stop the smuggling of liquor—to stop it at the source—and you will have to admit that I made considerable progress. I have given an honest administration. I am a regular human being, not a religious fanatic."

Wouldn't "Snoop Around."

Green said he told Gen. Andrews, in charge of national prohibition enforcement, that he would not "go snooping around, making grandstand raids." He was appointed by Andrews. His administration, he explained, was in keeping with military dignity, common sense and the will of a community in which there were "more wets than drys."

"We got at the source," he added. "We have destroyed more stills, three times as many as were destroyed in any previous administration."

Green offered newspapermen a drink and not one reporter moved toward the bottles.

"Have you a right to offer it?" they asked.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—"I drink—what of it?"

That is the answer and the attitude of Ned M. Green, accused by Federal authorities of misconduct and irregularities in the office of Prohibition Administrator for Northern California and Nevada.

It was no solitary sipping of the "evidence" in which this nominally dry officer, by his own admission, indulged. He admits that he gave parties which depended for their liveliness on liquor, and that the supply of liquor depended on the thoughtfulness of employes of the prohibition enforcement office in leaving quantities of seized intoxicants on his office desk or in his hotel room.

Not that he blames his assistants or intimates that they tempted or trapped him in any way.

Accepts Responsibility.

"I am responsible," Green said. "My employes acted on my orders, and I don't want any suspicion of misconduct to attach to them. They were not doing anything without my knowledge.

"As for those who are investigating me, more than half of them are just as guilty as I am. If they were honest, they would have to admit that they, too, drink and attend wild parties. I'm no prude and don't want people to consider me so. I'm a good sport."

Green, when visited at his hotel room by a reporter, opened two dresser drawers and showed bottles containing what appeared to be liquor.

"That's the liquor that I drink, and that I have served at parties here, parties that men and women attended," he said. "That much is true, and any time the investigators or the grand jurors want to come here and see it, they are welcome, and if they want to try it, they may.

Told Where Liquor Came From.

"I would find the liquor here or in my office, and I supposed my subordinates left it for me. It showed a fine spirit—showed they liked me. And when guests asked me where the liquor came from, I told them.

"I'm no lily," Green continued. "Clarence Linn, my chief legal adviser, talking with me this morning, wanted me to claim that I never drink or go on parties, and to deny everything.

"I told Linn I didn't want that kind of defense. I don't want to be known as a lily, a prude. I don't want people to think I am that kind. I told my subordinates that when they were questioned, they should tell the truth and should not perjure themselves in my behalf, as men might be prompted to do by the spirit of loyalty of soldiers to their officers.

"I expect to come out of this a little dirty. You can't get into a fight and keep clean. I've had a lone fight for 10 months. It's about time someone got in some blows on me. I'll retaliate when my time comes."

No Blond, "Unfortunately."

This seemed to point to a claim of enemy-making official activity, but instead of encouraging Green to proceed along that line, the reporter asked him about reports that a blonde woman had attended his parties, or whether "Lady Bob" Montgomery, subpenaed as a grand jury witness, had been there.

"There has never been a blonde woman in my room, unfortunately," the administrator replied. "As for the lady mentioned, I have seen her twice in the hotel lobby, have never spoken to her, and she has not been in my room.

"No charge of graft has been made against me, and none could be," Green said in reply to a question. "I drink—what of it? Nothing worse than that can be laid against me."

The administrator was asked if he intended to resign.

"No, not until this blows over anyhow. Of course, I don't intend to make it my life work, but I am not going to quit under fire."

Green denied issuing liquor to a hospital physician and then receiving prescriptions for it, as charged by investigators.

Green Confirms Interview.

The interview was given out shortly after Green returned from a conference with Dr. A. H. Briggs, State superintendent of the Anti-saloon League. Its correctness was later affirmed by Green to the Associated Press.

Green came into prominence recently as the author of a plan to federalize state and municipal officers as Federal prohibition enforcement agents. Although the plan was approved by President Coolidge, it was not carried out.

ABUSE OF U. S. IN BRITAIN AIMS AT DEBT CANCELING

Discerning Britons Say, However, That Churchill and Rothermere Press Are Going at It Wrong.

By EDWARD PRICE BELL.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright 1926.

LONDON, July 24—Cancellation of Great Britain's debt to the United States is the object underlying all of Winston Churchill's recent speeches in the House of Commons and all the abuse of America now a daily feature of certain British newspapers, especially those which issued from the genius of Lord Northcliffe and which at his death passed into the hands of his brother, Lord Rothermere.

Churchill's antipathy to America is notorious. His bent for fishing in troubled waters is equally notorious. He has embarrassed every government of which he has been a member, and he is profoundly embarrassing to Prime Minister Baldwin in these surpassingly difficult times.

Rothermere Changes Policy.

Of Lord Northcliffe's settled policies in his newspapers was that of friendship with the United States. He knew not only its power but its wish to do the right thing according to its lights. No editor under the Northcliffe regime slurred the United States.

Lord Rothermere has constituted himself Don to the American people. He aspires to instruct them in these astoundingly intricate matters through the mediumship of Americans traveling in the British Isles and on the continent of Europe. He asks the holiday makers to sit at his feet and then on reaching home to impart to their fellow citizens truths hitherto withheld by a sordid press from a really fair-minded and generous nation.

This educational enterprise is in full swing. Thus far, however, in his black type displays of "cold facts" Lord Rothermere has omitted to inform the traveling Americans and likewise his own readers how much money the city of London and sterling holders generally, have made as a result of Prime Minister Baldwin's debt settlement with the United States. As sterling rose following the funding of the debt, financial Great Britain reaped a magnificent harvest.

It is scarcely a subject, one may conjecture, that Lord Rothermere would wish to flaunt before the British people, because the majority of them held no sterling to receive the benefit of the appreciation flowing from Baldwin's financial policy.

There are other gaps in Lord Rothermere's financial curriculum for touring Americans. He does not discuss what might have happened if Baldwin had refused to settle with America. He does not tell Americans or his own readers that in the circumstances suggested instead of the pound being able at this moment to look the dollar in the face, it might be hiding its head somewhat after the manner of the franc or the lire.

Ineffectiveness of Abuse.

In a word, Lord Rothermere did not discuss the benefits accruing to Great Britain because of the Baldwin settlement, while ostentatiously exhibiting its disadvantages. He, like his political coadjutor, Churchill, seeks to shame or bully the United States into cancelling the British debt. Both these two men are too proud to admit that their nation is carrying, or trying to carry, a load too heavy for its broad and patient shoulders.

Britons in general just as Frenchmen in general do not want to pay America. They feel in every fiber that America did not do her full share in the war of democracy and to fix upon their children and their children's children the galling burden of the American debt would be not only economic folly from every point of view, but a moral and historical outrage. But Churchill and Rothermere, greatly to the chagrin of their sagacious compatriots, official and unofficial, are going the wrong way about pressing their case. They do not realize that abuse will retard rather than quicken any American disposition to reopen the debt question.

All Expect Reopening.

That this question, however, must be reopened no discerning Briton or American this side of the Atlantic has any doubt. America has asserted triumphantly the principle of the sanctity of international obligations. All her debtors, with Great Britain leading, have come to her and said: "We recognize our debt and are willing to pay as much as we can." When France makes a settlement the circle will be complete.

Then, in the judgment of the good judges over here, America may well say: "It is time to open an entirely new chapter. We do not want to depress the living standard of the world. We do not want to check the recovery of the world. We want to hasten the revival of universal purchasing power. We want an end of international bitterness and the threat of new wars.

"We know our power. We yield nothing to either dialetic cleverness or blackguardism. But we are not fools. We cancel the debts in the interests of humanity, of which we are a considerable part."

This is the true view as the ablest observers here see the situation. Talk of a possible European combination against America is dismissed as visionary. Frenchmen hate Englishmen. The Germans distrust them and draw even closer to America. If an orgy of violence broke loose in France tomorrow, Englishmen would be slaughtered along with Americans, and probably before Americans.

Prime Minister Baldwin when he settled with America, averted many possibilities of danger. If let alone he will save Anglo-American solidarity, the one sure hope of democracy. Meanwhile for Americans the words are—serenity, sanity, objectivity. We have everything to gain by keeping cool; everything to lose by becoming heated.

'Don'ts' for U. S. Tourists Win Parisian Approval

Unpleasantness Could Have Been Avoided If Americans Had Followed the Advice.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, July 24.—The New York World's series of "dont's" for American tourists in France has been reproduced by all the Paris papers.

"Wise advice," comments the Soir, while La Presse says the counsel is ironical, although if American tourists had followed the advice given the regrettable incidents of the last few days would have been avoided.

Le Temps devotes a front page editorial to the subject, describing the "dont's" as "wise and witty," and comments on the impartiality of the advice and the friendly feeling for France it manifests.

"As a matter of fact," adds Le Temps, "American tourists are far from meriting the reproaches showered on them. They buy, eat and drink, and leave us their dollars, thus helping to compensate our adverse trade balance. If manifestations such as have happened during the last few days, continue, there is danger of our guests leaving our cities and beaches for other countries which undoubtedly ask nothing better than to attract them."

Le Temps reminds Parisians of their city's reputation for hospitality and recommends a return to the traditional tact and courtesy toward foreigners. It asks foreigners, on the other hand, to enjoy the privileges the exchange confers on them without too much ostentation.

Many other papers give the same advice to American and British visitors who, they say, are partly to blame for the recent manifestations because of the arrogance shown by some of them and their open contempt of French money. At the same time they exhort Parisians to be calm and moderate.

Meantime the sight-seeing bus service through Paris, which has been the center of some of the demonstrations, has been suspended. Tourists had begun to boycott them anyway.

FOUR 'DON'TS,' OR HOW AMERICANS ABROAD CAN KEEP OUT OF TROUBLE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 24.

FOLLOWING are the four "Dont's" recommended for American tourists by the New York World (July 22):

DON'T boast in cafes that American currency is the only real, honest-to-God money in the world. It isn't.

DON'T fret too much in public if a dinner which costs 70 francs on Monday costs 125 francs on Monday next.

DON'T grumble if a customs official on the Swiss-Italian frontier wishes to know how many cigars you are bringing with you, and don't call his interest meddlesome.

DON'T confide to your fellow passengers on railway trains that America is the most generous of creditors because America has canceled all that part of the debts which nobody can collect.

EDITOR'S MURDER LEADS TO OUSTING OF POLICE CHIEF

One of Curtises Indicted.

Soon Gov. Donahey poured oil on the situation by ordering a grand jury investigation of civic conditions here. Indictments followed, charging Ed Curtis with accepting bribes, and two of Canton's "jungle" characters with offering them. They were Harry Bouklias and Harry Turner, said to be respectively the moonshine liquor and gambling concession aces of the city.

Bouklias and Turner, at the trial in 1924, turned State's evidence on a promise of immunity and the jury convicted Ed Curtis. After months of futile appeal he began, July 6, 1925, a term of two to 10 years in the Ohio State penitentiary at Columbus. The pair of informants against him were placed on parole for five years but kept out of jail.

It was during Ed Curtis' effort to escape service of his sentence that Don Mellett came to Canton on Jan. 11, 1925, from Indiana as business manager of the Daily News. For some time he watched the passage of events as a spectator, then about the time Ed Curtis entered jail, he was appointed editor of the paper.

Bitter Primary Fight.

A bitter Republican primary fight was on, with C. C. Curtis again seeking the mayoralty nomination, with Ball as his opponent. Mellett editorially espoused the cause of the Democratic candidate, and between his help and the Republican primary split, Swarts was elected. He became the only Democratic official in the administration.

The day after Swarts took office last January, Mellett launched the final and fastest phase of his vice crusade. He assailed vice conditions generally and their grip on the police department in particular. Rapidly his attacks on Lengel grew more and more pointed.

He sent out reporters to buy liquor and printed a list of places where they bought it. He employed operatives to trail down bootleggers to their homes and places of business of many residents outside the "Jungle" and published the names of those visited.

Tactics of Editor.

He made allies of two or three "honest" cops and printed what he found out from them about corruption in the department. The caliber of the alleged corrupt operations of the police may be judged from the fact that reported "honorariums" seldom exceeded $15 or $20.

He learned that Bouklias and Turner were back in business and "compelled" the prosecutor to bring them in for parole violation, and their arrests marked exactly the end of the first month of his new, intensive campaign.

Seventeen days later or Feb. 19, the pair began service of sentence of 18 months each in the penitentiary, and Canton's "underworld" was brought sharply to the realization that Mellett's vice crusade was no mere matter of printed words.

Chief Once Before Suspended.

Feb. 23, Mayor Swarts dismissed Chief Lengel on incompetency charges and the latter promptly filed an appeal with the Civil Service Commission. A few days later the home of the star witness against Bouklias was set on fire, Mellett countering with a ringing announcement that "the clean up drive has only begun," coupled with a demand for radical changes in the police department.

For nearly two weeks after March 13, the Civil Service Commission's hearings of Lengel's appeal occupied the center of the stage, with Mellett applauding vigorously at each touch against his foe. Much startling testimony was adduced, including that of a policeman in the Mellett camp, who told of alleged wild parties attended by his fellow officers at the resort of "Jumbo" Crowley, king of the Canton underworld and leader of the "Jungle." A confessed bootlegger told of supplying liquor to six members of the police department. Nevertheless, Lengel was reinstated April 7 by a vote of 2 to 1. Mellett returned to the fight undismayed, induced another friendly policeman to file charges against the two commissioners who put Lengel back in office and was fighting for their dismissal when he was killed.

STOP CRYING AT U. S., SAYS BRITISH EDITOR

J. L. Garvin Wonders Why Churchill and Mellon Couldn't Keep Row Quiet.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 24.—In a long article dealing with the debt question, J. L. Garvin, editor of the Sunday Observer, asks why the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Winston Churchill, and the American Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon, cannot leave "this ugly international controversy" alone, "which, unless controlled, threatens to flare like naphtha."

"There are steady hands and decent hearts enough on both sides," the editor continues. "Let them work with might and main to stop Europe screaming at America and America sermonizing to Europe. The obvious course for both Churchill and Mellon as statesmen is either to talk about this miserable business privately or not talk at all.

"When Europe cries 'Shylock,' America cries 'sponger.' If American credits are wanted there must be civility as well as stability."

"Stick to It Like Men."

Remarking that the European nations in concert may be driven to diminish their imports from America, Garvin repeats the belief that cancellation of the debts would have been the best policy, but adds "the nation signed the Baldwin agreement; let us stick to it like men."

The Sunday papers devote much space to the debt controversy and to speculation on the possibility of Mellon's meeting Montagu Norman, Governor of the Bank of England, and French statesmen.

The Sunday Times, which is not associated with the Daily Times, comments editorially, deploring the controversy which has arisen, but at the same time declaring that Churchill "knocked the bottom out of" Mellon's and the American Treasury's contentions concerning the commercial pact of the debt.

"If incorrect statements have been made," says the Sunday Times, "they must be answered, but it is important that Americans, both as spectators and targets of this fresh outburst should not mistake its meaning. We are not attempting to evade our obligations.

"We can see, and it is useless to blink at the fact, that the American attitude is responsible more than any other factor, for the present disorganization of the world."

FORD LOSES SUIT TO HAVE NAME TAKEN OFF CIGARS

Court Also Rules Lincoln Products Co., Should Be Permitted to Retain Trade Label.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Henry Ford has lost a fight to have the name of his automobile eliminated from a brand of cigars and stogies. Denying application of the Ford Motor Co., to cancel the registration of the brand by John A. MacAdoo, of Charlotte, N. C., the Patent Office has held that a corporate name can be registered as a trademark when used on goods differing from those manufactured by another corporation of the same name.

"It must be remembered that the word "Ford" is not necessarily confined to the corporate name of the petitioner," the decision said. "It is a common word of our language, used not only as a name for many persons, but also as a common noun and as a verb."

The decision also held that even though the Lincoln Products Co., manufacturing automobile parts, might be confused with the Lincoln Motors Co., owned by the Ford interests, it should be permitted to keep its name, inasmuch as its products do not compete directly with the products of the Lincoln Motor Co.

DETOUR TRAIN TO AID THREE INJURED, ONE OF WHOM DIES

Crew Rush Victims Hit in Auto to Brookfield, Mo.; Baby, Flung 20 Feet, Uninjured.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BROOKSFIELD, Mo., July 24.—Three persons were injured, one fatally, and a baby, 8 months old, thrown 20 feet in the air, fell into soft mud, apparently unhurt, when Burlington train No. 10, Carrollton to Burlington, Ia., struck an automobile near Hale. The train made a detour, to this city to get the injured persons, Mr. and Mrs. Glendon Godsey, and Godsey's brother, Rex, all of whom were unconscious, to a hospital here.

Rex Godsey, 20 years old, a shoe factory worker, died shortly after reaching the hospital. The condition of the other two is critical.

After the accident the baby was not found until searchers, who were passengers from the train, heard it crying. All the victims live here. The train was delayed two hours into Burlington by the detour, but the crew received commendation from officers of the Burlington railroad for their prompt and decisive action.

CHINESE WAR DELAY TARIFF CONFERE

U. S. Envoy Deplores Lack Unity in Reply to Pro From Canton Offici

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, July 24.—John V. MacMurray, the American minister to China, has addressed a note to the recent protest of Chen, Foreign Minister of the tionalist Government against resumption of the conference at Pekin. The American minister deplores the heartening lack of unity among Chinese, as shown by Canton other similar protests, which have per the joint efforts of the friendly powers to effect readjustment in their treaty relations with China.

The American minister assures the Canton Foreign Minister that any readjustment under consideration has in view the benefit of the whole of China and not of any individual military or political faction.

The tariff conference at present is suspended until autumn.

The conference has dragged since October 26, 1925, without concrete results. The recess was taken April 11, when the Chinese Government was dissolved as a result of civil war.

Silas H. Strawn, of Chicago, the chief American delegate, told the Associated Press that since the time the foreign envoys have been waiting "in hope that there might be some form of Chinese Government with authority to renew negotiations."

"The work of the conference has been delayed many months longer than should have been required," Mr. Strawn said. "Although I was very much to return home, I will not leave until our delegation has done everything reasonably possible to give the Chinese people the benefit of the tariff revenue their representatives think the foreign trade will bear."

China has demanded tariff autonomy and the powers agreed to incorporate in a treaty recognition of China's right to freedom of action in tariff matters, after January 1, 1929.

Last week the Canton Foreign Minister addressed a note to American officials in China protesting against the resumption of the tariff negotiations between the foreign delegates and a re-constituted Chinese delegation representing the Government at Pekin. He also cabled to Senator William B. Borah appealing to him to "assist the forces of modern progress in the country by moving the immediate recall of the American delegation

COUNTY GROUP OPENS ITS FIGHT ON ANNEXATION

Committee Opposed to Plan Outlines Eight Objections in First Statement of Campaign.

PLAN TO ORGANIZE PRECINCT BODIES

These Will Be Utilized to Spread "Fundamental Points" of "Educational Program."

Organized opposition to the Board of Freeholders' plan of annexation which will be submitted to the voters of St. Louis and St. Louis County Oct. 26, has been begun by the Committee Opposed to Annexation, a county organization which was formed shortly after the freeholders agreed on their plan.

After a meeting yesterday at committee headquarters, 7816 Forsythe boulevard, B. F. Bush, president of the committee, issued a statement embodying eight objections to the plan. The committee members are organizing precinct sub-committees in the county and plan to use the "eight points" in what they term a "general educational campaign."

Chief Points of Objection.

The committee's "points" are described as "obvious, self-evident and fundamental objections," chief of which is the large farm area the city would annex, the abolishment of present towns, the loss of road building funds, possible increase in taxation and the possibility that county residents may be called on to share the burden of the city's bonded indebtedness.

The eight objections follow:

"1—It would enlarge the area of the City of St. Louis from 61 square miles to 548 square miles, more than 70 per cent of the annexed territory being farm land. This would give the City of St. Louis the largest area of any municipality in the United States. It would be an experimental form of government. Its effort to extend the city's fire, water, light, street and sewer facilities over an area which extends more than 20 miles beyond the courthouse in the City of St. Louis must result in failure. This is the opinion of public officials, who are entirely familiar with the city's resources.

Says It Would Disrupt Areas.

"2—It would abolish cities within the County of St. Louis, about 10 in number, all of which are organized as cities of the third and fourth class, and which maintain their own municipal organization, including police, schools, streets, water facilities and public utilities. These various municipalities are organized to meet civic demands and the municipal government of each is in close and immediate contact with the individual citizen, which obviously makes for the most satisfactory and efficient type of government. Consolidation with the City of St. Louis would remove direct local contact; would give the county six votes to the City's 28 in municipal affairs, thus creating a hopeless minority in matter of county welfare.

"3—Under the Charter of the City of St. Louis the people of St. Louis County would be deprived of any legal representation. Although aldermen in the City of St. Louis are named in the wards in which they reside they are elected by the voters at large. Thus a candidate may receive a majority of his own ward and fail of election because of majority given his opponent in other interested wards.

Effect on School Districts.

"4—It would abolish all school districts in the county with various school boards which now govern the same. All public schools, including the 12 high schools in the county, together with all school properties, would be under the sole control of the present Board of Education of the City of St. Louis. The intimate contact of school boards with pupils and school patrons in each district provided a proper educational system.

"5—It would place upon the property owners of the county a greater share of the burden of paying off the authorized bonded indebtedness of the City of St. Louis, which now is more than $100,000,000. This does not include the present deficit in the treasury of the city. The bonded indebtedness of the City of St. Louis, which has reached its constitutional limit, was incurred for public improvements to be made solely within the present limits of the city and it is quite plain that the county area will not receive any benefits therefrom.

"6—The City's plan, if adopted, would mean a tremendous increase in the present assessed values of the county real estate. The governmental and economic needs of the County are small compared with those of a large city. To meet the City's demand for money, any property under the plan proposed, would be assessed at practically its market value. This would mean a corresponding increase in the amount of county taxes for which the county taxpayer would receive no adequate return.

Contend Farmers Will Suffer.

"6.—The City's plan would mean a levy of a city tax upon the farm land of St. Louis County, for which the farmer would receive nothing in return. The City tax would be devoted to purely city purposes in which the rural communities would not share.

"7.—By destroying the present municipalities in the County it would deprive these localities of the power to establish and maintain their own sewer system by vesting the authority to establish and construct sewers in the hand of city officials. The present wholly inadequate sewer facilities in many parts of the City of St. Louis make it evident that the adoption of the City's plan of annexation would mean gross neglect of the county area as to sewer improvements.

"8.—The City's plan would include more than 350 square miles of farm lands under the regulations of city ordinances. This would result in making municipal government impractical as to the county area. It is apparent that no form of municipal government, such as the present City of St. Louis requires, could be made applicable or adaptable to the vast farming region of the County."

Woman Who Seeks Share in Edenborn Estate, Trees Marking Graves on Her County Farm

MRS. SOPHIE MEIER of Gumbo, St. Louis county, who will sue this week for a daughter's share of the $76,000,000 left by William Edenborn. Pictured also are the cedar trees on her farm which mark the grave of a daughter of Edenborn and the present Mrs. William Edenborn, with the grave of a niece who died after being adopted by the Edenborns. Mrs, Meier asserts she is a daughter by a prior marriage.

$90,000 LIQUOR CARGO SEIZED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The British Auxiliary Schooner Mulhall was seized off Fire Island today with a cargo of whisky and malt valued at more than $90,000 and brought into port. The five members of the crew, including Capt. Chesley Anderson, were held on board ship.

Anderson told coast guard officers he cleared recently from Halifax, bound for Havana. While passing Fire Island, he said his vessel was pursued by a coast guard cutter, but he did not surrender until a threat to shoot was made.

voters had marched to the polls in great numbers.

The rains in the rural section where the great Ferguson strength lies, were accepted as unfavorable to the Governor's cause.

Gov. Ferguson went to Temple with her husband, who did most of her campaigning, and her younger daughter, Miss Dorrace Ferguson, to cast her vote. Her final statement was that she was confident of overwhelming victory.

Mrs. Dan Moody was denied a vote because she had relinquished her residence in Abilene, Tex., when she married the Attorney-General, and has not resided in the capital, the legal period. Moody voted at Taylor, while Davidson was at his home in Houston.

In San Antonio the forces led by Sheriff James Stevens filed an injunction suit against Democratic Chairman Thurman Barrett to force him to turn ballot boxes over to the county clerk. Barrett had announced he would send the boxes to a local hotel where the votes would be counted under his direction. The court denied the injunction.

Fight in G. O. P. Ranks.

In Dallas a spokesman for the anti-Creager Republican faction charged that the regular Republican organization headed by R. B. Creager, National Committeeman, was holding a secret primary and that some of the following of Congressman Harris M. Wurzbach, who is fighting the regulars could not find the polling places. The regulars denied this.

Col. H. H. Haines, of Houston, supported by Creager and E. P. Scott, Corpus Christi, supported by gubernatorial contestants. Republican leaders estimated that 30,000 votes would be counted in that party's initial attempt at a State-wide primary.

SESQUI FAIR FACES $4,000,000 DEFICIT

Funds Said to Be Far Short of Bills That Have Accumulated.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24. — Citizens of Philadelphia may be called upon by the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition to make up its financial deficit, which was reported today to amount to $4,000,000.

While exposition officials insisted that they would not know the actual amount of money necessary to meet outstanding obligations until a firm of certified public accountants completes an audit which was begun several days ago, reports current in City Hall were that only $2,000,000 is available in cash, while bills have accumulated to the amount of $6,000,000.

It is said that the executive committee of the exposition at its meeting Monday night will be given some startling figures. A large portion of the unpaid obligations of the association were incurred during the six weeks of rush construction work.

Neither Mayor Kendrick, who is president of the exposition association, nor other Sesqui officials would deny the report of financial difficulties but the Mayor appeared worried as he discussed the situation, remarking that when he started on his trip through the midde west recently to boost the exposition he "was happy at the thought that finances had been entirely straightened out."

"But the first thing I heard when I got back Wednesday," he added, "was that more money is needed. The mere fact that bills have accumulated, however, doesn't mean necessarily that we owe as much as the bills total. Just because a bill may be for $150,000, say, is no sign that we will pay that much.

Difficulty Due to Rush.

"You see the whole difficulty has been caused by the rush to get the Sesqui completed. Director Biles put every available man to work that could be found, and there has been no time to check up on the bills. A contractor may submit a bill for $100,000, for instance, but before it is paid, we want to receive the report of the auditors."

The Mayor said he believed approximately $1,000,000 of the $2,000,000 councilmanic exposition loan passed a few weeks ago is still available and that a substantial fund also is on deposit with Drexel & Co., earmarked for certain items.

"I am not worried a bit," he added. "Criticism now is unfortunate, for the Sesqui is going over big. I feel confident that if it becomes necessary to appeal to the citizens for support, they will respond nobly."

PREDICTS DEMOCRATIC MAJORITIES IN CONGRESS

Representative Oldfield of Arkansas, Says Economic Pressure on Farmers Is Cause.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 25.—Congressman William A. Oldfield, of Batesville, chairman of the National Congressional Committee, today gave out a prediction of early complete Democratic control in both houses, based he said, on an intimate tour of the entire nation.

The best the Republican party can do in the fall elections is to retain what it has, Oldfield declared. He pointed out that the Democrats need only 35 seats in the House and nine in the Senate to obtain majorities. Democratic vacancies, he said, are to be filled chiefly in rock-ribbed Democratic states.

Traditions handed down from the Civil War affecting the politics of the farmers of the nation, may be changed this year and a new party alignment formed, he hinted. "It is not politics but downright economic pressure, and suffering that accounts for the bitterness of the farmers toward the Republican party—a bitterness that can only be guessed at by those who haven't actually visited the agricultural sections," he asserted.

BANK BUYS SECURITIES OF PECHAN, MISSING REALTY MAN

Notes and bonds pledged with the Jefferson-Gravois Bank by Thomas F. Pechan, missing real estate dealer, to cover a loan were sold yesterday at foreclosure at the courthouse. The securities of a face value of $28,150, protected by real estate deeds of trust were bought by the bank for $22,975.

The bank also put up at auction a $15,000 note of Pechan's brother, Andrew Pechan, on which $3300 balance is due. This note is secured by a deed of trust. This also was bought by the bank for $3229.

George A. Held, president of the Jefferson-Gravois Bank, who was present at the sale, told a reporter that the securities were valuable and there was no cloud on them.

17 PERSONS KILLED BY POISON LIQUOR; OTHERS BLINDED

Seven Fatalities Reported From Buffalo, N. Y., From Wood Alcohol—Police Conduct 50 Raids.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 24. — Four men and one woman are dead here from the effects of wood alcohol poisoning. Deaths of another man and a woman are attributed to the same cause and two men were in hospitals today, blind as a result of the same poison. A saloonkeeper and his wife, and an alleged alcohol purveyor were held on homicide charges.

The following deaths have been positively attributed to alcohol poisoning by the medical examiner:

K. Verne Jenkins, 38, who died suddenly on Friday.

Anthony Korsak, 40, also died Friday..

Mrs. Helen Dillott, 43, died today.

Albert Leslie, 47, died on Thursday.

William Pylzanien, 35, died today.

Those whose deaths also are attributed by the police to alcohol poisoning are: Stanley Wrubel and Mary Gillman. The two blinded are Frank Gernak and George Sokesilwicz.

The trio under arrest are Joseph Banas, described by police as an alleged bootlegger in alcohol; Joseph Sucharski, saloon-keeper and his wife Carrie. All were charged with homicide.

Two of the victims who died and two who are blind are alleged to have bought the poison liquor in Sucharski's saloon.

Coincident with the wave of deaths from bad liquor, Federal dry agents tonight began a series of raids in all parts of the city and suburbs. About fifty places were visited, 125 prisoners were taken and thousands of bottles of liquids, chiefly beer, were seized.

Arrest 5 in Poison Liquor Case; 1 Dies; Deaths Total 10

By the Associated Press.

HAMILTON, Ont., July 24.—Five persons were arrested today in connection with a steadily increasing list of deaths by poison liquor, and within a few hours one of the prisoners himself died of alcoholic poisoning. His death was the ninth in the last three days.

The persons arrested were William Maybe, his wife and two sons and Bert Dangelo. All but the latter, against whom only a technical charge of vagrancy was placed, pending investigation, were charged with selling the poison liquor. Shortly after his arrest, Maybe became ill and died.

"The death of Mrs. C. Foreman of Hamilton later in the day raising the total to 10. The seven who died today were Mrs. Foreman, Maybe, George Hill, James Johnson, and Thomas Lyon of Oakville, and Mary Dushere and Paul Finka of Hamilton. Three men had died previously in Allanburg."

Officials of the Ontario license board and the Attorney-General's Department are trying to determine whether the same shipment of poisoned liquor was responsible for all the deaths. They also are investigating any possible connection between the Ontario poisonings and those in Buffalo, where four are reported to have died from drinking wood alcohol.

DETROIT TEACHER, 77, TO WED MISS EMMA WILKINSON, 65

Bride-Elect Until Recently Resided in St. Louis, Future Husband's Third Venture.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., July 24.—Edward A. Horsington, 77 years old, of Detroit, appeared at the county clerk's office here today with Miss Emma Wilkinson, 65, of St. Louis, Mo., and signified their intention of marrying.

Horsington, formerly a salesman, is now teaching in the public schools of Detroit. His application for license states he has been married twice before. His bride has never been married.

They told the clerk they would be married here immediately following issuance of the license and the usual five-day wait.

thrifty and business-like, and his letters reflected his traits. When he notified Mrs. Meier that he had deeded the county farm to her, he made it a condition in writing that he would be permitted to visit the place at any time, either for a vacation sojourn or to visit the graves of his dead children.

Mrs. Meier is now 51 years old, and Meier a few years older. When they moved to the farm a quarter-century ago it was timberland. It is almost all clear now. The yellow frame residence faces on the picturesque Wild Horse Creek road. A vegetable garden, a fruit orchard and cattle barns are close to the house and farther away the wheat shines in the sun.

Fifty yards west of the house is the graveyard. It doesn't look like a graveyard. Just a small square of ground, raised a few inches above the surrounding terrain, with two curving cedar trees to mark the spot. A stone brought from another part of the farm has been dropped where a tombstone should be. The patch is sodded, but without flowers.

No Flowers at Graves.

"I wanted to plant some flowers," remarked Meier to a Post-Dispatch reporter who went out there, "but Mr. Edenborn said 'No.'

As for Edenborn himself, his epitaph is written in "Who's Who in America." Unlike his business associate, the celebrated "Bet-you-a-million" Gates, Edenborn avoided publicity throughout his life, but he finally succumbed to the extent of an inch of space in "Who's Who."

In that inch, it is related that he was born and educated in Prussia; came to the United States in 1867; married Sarah Drain of St. Louis Oct. 5, 1876; was a mechanic in St. Louis, 1869-71; president St. Louis Wire Mill Co., 1877-1882; later president Consolidated Steel & Wire Co. until 1898; vice president and member of executive committee of American Steel & Wire Co., 1898-1901; member executive and advisory committees of United States Steel Corporation from 1901 to 1904, and a director until 1909; president of Louisiana Railway & Navigation Co. from 1903 on; vice president of Louisiana Central Construction Co., 1897-1913; president Pittsburg & Southern Coal Co.; director Urania Lumber Co. of Louisiana; St. Louis Iron & Machine Works of Missouri, Metropolitan Bank of New Orleans, and president American Musical Supply Co. of New Jersey.

Concluding Eulogy Modest.

And this brief autobiography of William Edenborn, the German immigrant boy who founded his fortune in the barbed wire business in St. Louis and became one of America's richest and least-known citizens, concludes with this modest eulogy:

PUT UP $15,000, BUT FAILED TO GET STOCKS

Complaint of One Client of M. R. New & Co.; Another Receipt Only for $4500.

Complaints have been made to the Better Business Bureau concerning nondelivery of stock to clients of M. R. New & Co., stock brokers, who opened an elaborate suite of offices in the Stock Exchange Building last month and operated there until last week when its license to do business in Missouri was suspended by blue sky Commissioner Stockard.

A St. Louis lawyer has informed Dwight Holmes, financial manager of the Better Business Bureau, that a client had paid $15,000 to New & Co. for stocks three days before the suspension of business, and since has not received the stock, nor has he been able to get information from the company or locate the officers. Holmes made inquiry at the company's offices and was told by a telephone girl there that "everybody's gone."

Receipt Only for $4500.

F. C. Harris Jr. of 5356A Nottingham avenue, left $4500 with the firm July 8 for certain stocks which he says he has not received. He did receive from a messenger boy a receipt for his money.

Harris wants his money back and has engaged an attorney to bring suit.

Morris Schneider, listed as vice president of the company, told the Post-Dispatch that he knew nothing about the company and had no interest in it, and that if his name was used as an incorporator it was without his knowledge and consent. Schneider is manager of a downtown jewelry store and a brother-in-law of Maurice R. Newberger, president of M. R. New & Co.

Report as to Newberger.

Schneider, whose wife is a sister of Newberger's wife, said Newberger, who had been in the women's apparel business, came to St. Louis from Denver several months ago. Newberger and his wife stayed at the Claridge Hotel until this week, when they checked out, giving a New York hotel as a forwarding address. Newberger had told Holmes he was going to New York to make proper brokerage connections, lack of which was one reason for the order suspending the company's license.

Postoffice Inspector Noah is cooperating with Holmes in the investigation. If the company fails to deliver stocks purchased by customers, or to return the money, Holmes said, the matter will be presented to the United States District Attorney.

RAIDERS FIND LIQUOR IN SHOE STORE BOXES

Proprietor, 65, Arrested — Grandson Held for Offering $21 Bribe to Detectives.

The shoe boxes on the shelves of Judge Bonner's shoe store at 2309 Chouteau avenue were taken down one by one and examined last night by Detectives Knackstedt and Drewes of Laclede Avenue Police District. Forty-four of the boxes yielded a half pint of whisky each.

Bonner, who is 65 years old, waited with his grandson, Amos, 21, while the search progressed. At the conclusion the raiders reported, the grandson drew them aside, proffered $21 in bills and said:

"This is all I have. I don't want to see my grandfather disgraced. Won't you let him go?"

Both men were arrested, the grandfather charged with possession of intoxicating liquor and the grandson with attempting to bribe. They live at 4105 Finney avenue.

William Wood, 27 years old, proprietor of a rooming house at 4055A Chouteau avenue, was arrested last night after two detectives and two policewomen had reported he sold them two cans of homebrew during a visit to his establishment. A search of the place disclosed 82 quarts of beer and a small quantity of alcohol and whisky, Detective Sergt. Coakley of the rum squad reported.

K. K. K. APPROVAL NOT MUCH HELP FOR WILLIAMS

Its Strength Said to Have Dwindled in Last Two Years From 100,000 to About 12,000.

GERMAN COUNTIES ALL AGAINST IT

Grand Dragon's Approval of Senator Came as Set-Back When Tide Had Set in His Favor.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 24.—Just when the full force of the State administration had been thrown into the Republican senatorial campaign and through its driving organization methods had begun to turn the tide in favor of Senator Williams and away from David M. Proctor, the Ku Klux Klan has injected itself into the fight, threatening to undo what has been accomplished for the Senator and generally upsetting the campaign plans for the final week.

It became apparent in many sections of the State several days ago that the tide was turning for Williams, whose campaign slumped following his opening speech in California, Mo., a month ago. A week ago came the indorsement of Williams by the leaders of the Missouri Farmers' Association, which means several thousand votes. During the week the State job holders under Gov. Baker were thrown into the field for Williams in such numbers that Jefferson City looked like a deserted village. Indications of the effectiveness of their work became increasingly evident. From county after county the word came that the local Republican organizations were on their toes and that all the devices known to practical politicians were being brought into play for the Senator. Signs appeared that the campaign fund, which has been in process of accumulation, was being used, Williams campaign cards appearing in store windows and in virtually every place around the countryside where they could be tacked.

Governor's Go-Getters Active.

There are several hundred appointees under the Governor, and with few exceptions each was appointed because of his ability to deliver votes in a primary or an election.

This organization drive, aided by Proctor's record, which was anything but astisfactory to the dry and woman vote to which he was particularly appealed, had its effect. Proctor was losing ground while Williams was gaining. The impression was growing that Williams would be the nominee.

Then came the Ku Klux Klan approval of Williams' candidacy. From the standpoint of practical political effect the Klan indorsement is very much more likely to injure Williams than to help him, and this for several reasons. The dry forces of the State are active for Proctor, who has the indorsement of the Anti-saloon League and the W. C. T. U. The issue which obtained the indorsement of these organizations for him would make him the logical choice of the Klan in the absence of any reason to choose his opponent because of religious questions, which do not enter into this campaign.

There is little probability that the advice of Dr. William M. Campbell, grand dragon of the Klan, to Klansmen to vote for Williams will carry many votes to him. In fact, Dr. Campbell did not order his followers to support Williams. He merely advised them to do so, and added, in effect, that they could do what they pleased.

But even if every loyal Klansman in the State saw fit to follow the advice, it probably would amount to little in Williams' favor because the Klan is not at all the organization it was only two years ago. According to a Klansman active in the affairs of the organization who talked confidentially, the Klan had approximately 100,000 members in good standing at the time of the Baker-Nelson campaign for Governor in 1924. This number he said had dwindled to approximately 12,000.

Dissensions have arisen within the organization. The Kansas City Klan is said to be practically nonexistent because of internal dissensions. Thousands of members have stopped paying dues and have been dropped from the rolls. It is said that there are only three Klan branches in the State of any real force—in St. Louis, St. Joseph and Joplin. There are skeletons of organizations in many other towns, but they have ceased to function effectively. If this is the true condition of the Klan—and all available information indicates it is—then it can exert little, if any, force affirmatively.

But what the negative effect on a candidate its officers approve would be is entirely different.

Two years ago Dr. Arthur Nelson, Democratic nominee for Governor, was accused of having joined the Klan. He had the Klan support and while he denied privately that he ever had had any connection with the Klan he delayed a public announcement until so late he could not overcome the opposition which had grown up. His Republican opponent, Gov. Baker, denounced the Klan, a stand which turned defeat into victory for him.

The Williams organization has been fearful of the attitude of the radical wets in St. Louis and in the German counties along the Mississippi and Missouri rivers. Confidential reports from its scouts indicate that Blodgett Priest "wet" Republican candidate, would receive a big vote in this district and organization efforts have been directed strongly toward bringing this vote into line for Williams as it is realized that every vote that goes to Priest is a vote which Williams would receive if Priest were not a candidate.

Story of Klan Indorsement.

A Klansman in touch with the inner circle of the organization, made the statement to me that the decision to approve Williams was reached last winter at a conference in Washington at which William F. Zumbrunn, national attorney for the Klan, Dr. Campbell and others were present.

At that time, it was said, it was the belief there would be no occasion for Klan participation in the primary, as it was expected Williams would have no serious opposition there and that the Klan would be brought into play in the general election for Williams and against Harry B. Hawes avowed foe of the Klan and all its works, who was looked upon as the certain Democratic nominee.

The action was decided upon notwithstanding that Williams, as head of the Resolutions Committee of the last Republican State Platform Convention, had prepared the anti-Klan plank which was adopted. At that time Williams was not in the Senate and there were no indications that he ever would be. After his appointment, however, there came up for his approval the recommendation of county committees of a number of persons for postmastership. In some of these protests were filed objections being made that the men recommended were members of the Klan. When Williams replied that he would follow the recommendations of Republican County Committees, he was informed in several instances that the Klan controlled the county committees. His reply to that was that Republicans in each county selected the members of the committee and if they did not want Klansmen they could elect persons who were opposed to the Klan.

Such anti-klan Republicans as will be driven from Williams by the klan support will, of course, either go to Priest or remain away from the polls. Their votes for Priest could amount to nothing more to them than protest votes, unless the anti-klan strength should spread to unexpected limits and accomplish the nomination of Priest, which is almost beyond imagination.

Priest and his campaign manager, Hugh K. Wagner, were able to figure on paper to their own satisfaction before the klan outbreak that Priest would win, but it might be said nobody else could figure it.

They were relying largely on the strength they thought Priest had developed in St. Louis and the German "wet" counties. There is no reasonable basis from which one could figure the vote Priest might expect in St. Louis. The Republicaon organization supporting Williams might have been able to hold it down to 10,000, or the organization might not be able to control it at all and it might go to 35,000.

Survey of Four Counties.

A survey last week of Cole, Osage, Gasconade and Franklin counties, in which possibly a majority of the voters are of German birth or descent, and where the "wet" are considerably in the majority, led to the belief that Priest would run well in those counties, and might even carry them, though in most of them the Republican organizations were functioning effectively for Williams.

It appeared reasonably certain that Priest would carry Gasconade County and might carry all four counties, though there was nothing to indicate he could expect a majority of any size in any of them, with the possible exception of Gasconade.

But since the klan action, his vote through that section may go to any size.

On the Democratic side the klan indorsement of Willis H. Meredith against Hawes for the short term in the Senate, probably will have little effect on the situation, as Hawes has been known as the leading and implacable foe of the klan through several campaigns, while Meredith has been in favor with it in previous campaigns he has made for other offices. So far as the Hawes-Meredith campaign is concerned the klan has given its members no new information, though its recommendation probably will stir up some strife within the party.

Williams Says He Has Asked Only for G. O. P. Support.

Upon his return to St. Louis from St. Joseph yesterday, Senator Williams issued this statement:

"I have read the statement reported to have been made by Dr. Campbell of St. Joseph concerning my candidacy. I have neither sought nor accepted the support of any organization in the State of Missouri, except the Republican party and I confidently expect to receive that."

Willis H. Meredith, Democratic candidate for the Senate short term, indorsed by the Ku Klux Klan, made this statement to the Post-Dispatch, by telephone from Charleston, Mo.:

"I am glad to have anyone say that I live up to my platform and practice what I preach. Everyone knows that I am not a member of the Ku Klux Klan or under obligation to it, as the Klan opposed me for Attorney-General of Missouri in 1924 when it indorsed my Democratic opponent who was on its red ballot and was supposed to be a member of the Klan.

"I am running on a platform of law enforcement and I am glad to get any votes from people who stand for the ideals I do — I don't care who they are or what they are."

INDIANA PROSECUTOR HALTS FIGHTING EDITOR'S PAPER; FOILED BY DALE'S SON, 8

Threatens Prosecution of Newstand Owner If He Persists in Offering Publication Containing New Attack on County Officials.

By the Associated Press.

MUNCIE, Ind., July 24.—An attempt to stop the sale of the Post-Democrat, a weekly newspaper published by George Dale, who gained nation-wide attention following an appeal to the United States Supreme Court after a three-year fight of contempt of court charges in Indiana, was made by William Ryman, deputy prosecuting attorney of Delaware county here today.

Ryman, accompanied by three policemen, called at the Reed newsstand and warned Arch Reed, the owner, that if he continued the sale of the Post-Democrat he would be prosecuted. The policemen said Ryman asked them to go with him as witnesses.

After consulting his lawyer, Reed stopped the sale of the paper, but an eight-year-old son of Dale immediately established himself on the sidewalk in front of the newsstand and he soon sold out his supply of papers.

Articles recently appeared in Dale's paper, in which the acting deputy prosecutor was attacked, and in today's issue, Dale charged that Ryman, as deputy prosecutor, prevented the grand jury from making an investigation of the case of Alpha Holaday, Muncie salesman, released recently from the Atlanta prison where he served a term for using the United States mails in a scheme to defraud.

Dale is now on $1000 appeal bond preparing to take his case to the United States Supreme Court. He was sentenced to six months on the Indiana State farm three years ago, following his published charges that the Ku Klux Klan exercised control over court and county officials.

The Indiana Supreme Court recently upheld the decision, but granted the appeal. Dale returned from Chicago, where he gathered funds to take his fight to the United States Supreme Court.

STORY OF 4-YEAR FIGHT ON EDITOR SENT TO PRISON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MUNCIE, Ind., July 24.—George R. Dale, Muncie editor, who has fought the Ku Klux Klan and the vice ring in Muncie four years, and has been reduced to penury by so doing, has won the first leg of his long battle. The recent action of the Supreme Court of Indiana in allowing a writ of error transferring to the Supreme Court of the United States the case of the editor who was fined $500 by Judge Clarence W. Dearth in the Delaware County Circuit Court and sentenced to 90 days' imprisonment for contempt of court will, in the belief of Dale, enable him to show up the actual conditions in Muncie which he opposed, still opposes, and which led to his conviction.

But the greatest surprise came before Dale won his victory in the State Court. That was when in the middle of last month Judge Dearth became convinced the charge Dale had been pressing four years, that Muncie was the pest hole of vice and that the underworld was protected by Klansmen in city and county offices, was not groundless and decided to do a little investigating on his own hook. Then surprise No. 2 came when Judge Dearth asked Mrs. Dale, the wife of the editor whom he had opposed, fined and sentenced many times, to organize the women of the city to aid him in his campaign against the underworld.

Judge Takes Up Fight.

In open court Judge Dearth summoned Sheriff McAuley and Chief of Police Art Jones and informed them that the town and county was "rotten with gambling, bootlegging, wanton women and vice of all kinds." This smashing blow to the leaders of the Republican organization which elected Judge Dearth dazed his supporters but they countered with promises to clean up. But Judge Dearth assured them if action were not taken at once he would summon a special grand jury and fix the blame. Later he threatened impeachment proceedings against McAuley and Jones. His next move was to take personal charge of the police department.

With a special detail of policemen Judge Dearth visited many of the gambling places and disorderly houses. He ordered them closed and they obeyed until he was out of sight. In court the next day he reported he had found nine gambling houses and that the city was overrun with women driven from other cities.

Despite the fact that Dale has lost everything he owned, totaling about $15,000 in cash, besides his home and that the attacks on the officials and the klansmen who control the affairs of the city and county, have made the last four years the most strenuous in the editor's long life, he is fighting on, trusting that he will be able to muster enough money to carry his case through the United States Supreme Court.

Dale published the Post-Democrat, the only Democratic weekly newspaper representing the Democrats of Muncie, Delaware County and the Eighth Congressional District. He launched the paper Jan. 15, 1921, and after a close study of the conditions in Muncie decided it was the most iniquitous town south of Chicago, that it was decadent politically and that the Ku Klux Klan not only controlled the city, but held most of the important offices not only in the municipality, but in the county, as well. In 1924 he launched his attack.

He openly charged that the police were fostering crime, that criminals were safe in Muuncie, that women driven from other cities were permitted openly in Muncie, that the klansmen had fulls control and that gambler shared their profits with city officials. Through his columns he enlisted the help of self-respecting citizens urging them to rally to his aid in cleaning up Muncie.

Many of the citizens responded, bu the Ku Kluxers were in power, and any attempt to bring about changed conditions seemed futile. Then things began to happen at the office of The Post-Democrat. Machinery would be put out of commission, the ink tampered with, copy stolen and other trivial attacks to cripple the newspaper, and each issue would make further demands on the city and county government, the police in particular, to restore law and order in the city. But the Klan had taken over Indiana and Muncie became the hotbed of Kleagles where plans were incubated to bring more members into the order.

From time to time Dale's children—he had seven—were attacked on the streets, threatening letters reached the Dale home and Mrs. Dale was intimidated. But the Dales fought back and paid no attention to the notes. All were busy aiding Editor Dale in publishing his paper. When it was apparent that Dale intended to hold his ground and continue publication of the Democrat the merchants who advertised in the Post-Democrat were visited by klansmen. Many of them were threatened that if they continued to advertise in the paper "something would happen." Many withdrew their advertising and the income of the paper decreased.

But the Dales kept on. Finally business reached the stage that the income was almost nil and the Dales were forced to sell their home to keep the paper running.

Attacked by Masked Men.

Violence was next resorted to and in March 1922 Dale, while walking near his office with his 18-year-old son, was attacked by three masked men. Each of the assailants carried a revolver and a blackjack and they rained blows upon the elder Dale and his son. Finally the elder Dale wrested a revolver from one of the men and shot him through the abdomen. He then knocked down another of the trio. The assailants carried their wounded to an automobile and fled. Although Dale is certain the man he shot died, the police never acted.

According to Dale, the grand jury was in session at the time, but the then district attorney, was a klansman and no effort was made to investigate. Three policemen who attempted to learn the identity of the three men who attacked Dale were discharged from the force. Dale says the Mayor, who was a klansman, was given orders at a Klan meeting to dismiss the patrolmen. These orders, he says, were issued by the Prosecuting Attorney and a Deputy United States Attorney, both of whom were dismissed from the service later for their action.

The Klan then had the Sheriff —who, according to Dale, was a klansman — appoint 400 deputies, who patrolled the streets with revolvers in their holsters and Dale's life was threatened. When he started to carry a revolver for his own protection he was arrested for carrying concealed weapons and was convicted by a Klan jury.

Next he was arrested on a liquor charge and indicted.

He said in his newspaper that the liquor charge was a plot concocted by the Ku Klux Klan and that the Judge, Prosecutor, Sheriff, grand jury, jury commissioners and police department were members of that organization.

Fined for Contempt.

He was taken into court, charged with contempt in the publication he had made, by Judge Dearth, who fined him $500 and sentenced him to 90 days' imprisonment. Before leaving the bar, Dale reiterated his charge orally and offered to prove that every word he had published was the truth. Judge Dearth immediately imposed a second fine of $500 and another 90 days' imprisonment. The crowd cheered as Dale was led off to prison.

After he had been kept in prison three days his bond was accepted and he was released, but only to be rearrested. The court held the answer in the first contempt case to be direct contempt. He was resentenced, this time to three months on the prison farm and fined $500. After being in prison 90 days he was released by a Supreme Court order, but upon arriving in Muncie was indicted for libeling the distributor of a Klan paper and later was sentenced to five months. Finally, after the case had been appealed, one of the contempt charges was reversed and the other affirmed. The libel case still is before the Supreme Court.

In having the contempt appeal transferred to the Supreme Court of the United States Dale feels he has won more than an individual victory. In the argument it was shown that at the trial before Judge Dearth in the lower court Dale was not given an opportunity to engage counsel.

It was shown also that in the State Supreme Court that the truth which Dale had offered to prove to the lower court, was not a defense and judgment was affirmed wherein Mr. Dale was charged with contempt for making the publication.

In the assignment of errors the Supreme Court of the United States will be asked to pass upon the seventeen points grouped around these four principal issues: The liberty of the press, truth as defense, the right of the Ku Klux Klan to superimpose its obligation upon judicial officers to the exclusion of the laws of the State and the United States, and the right of the courts, under the guise of "inherent power" to fabricate the offense of contempt of court, ex post facto, out of conduct which at the time of the occurrence was not obnoxious to any law of the State.

But while the appeals were being made in the courts the Post-Democrat continued its attacks on vice and lawlessness.

A Sample of Dale's Attacks.

In one of Dale's last editorials he said that right across the street from the Court House "Timber" Littlefield is running a protected crap game, naming the official, who, he said, was protecting it. It is here and at other places that 'our boys' are being fleeced and turned into criminals. On Adams street, between Walnut and Mulberry, Brownie and Bob Hinshaw hold forth. They also are missionaries for 'our boys.' Craps, stud poker, horse books, baseball pools are specialties at Brownies. Further down on Walnut street, Art Stout and Daddy Mille are running big gambling games under municipal protection.

"Some of 'our girls,' or at least the girls favored by the Hampton administration and the political machine are to be found at Reba Fenwick's, South Walnut Street, who voted for Hampton and who boasts that she had Sam Goodpasture fired from the force."

Dale wrote "The Post-Democrat ventures the hope that [illegible] will have more sense than to [illegible] himself to be led around by the nose by a lot of cheap [illegible] and bootleggers. These police violators are generally 'squealers' who, to save their own hides, will go on the witness stand and tell everything they know when the squeeze comes. * * * [illegible] does not need a voting unit composed of gamblers, prostitutes, poison liquor venders and [illegible] pool touts. By voting solidly for Hampton they insured his election. The only coin they will accept in payment is police protection."

On the front page of one issue under the heading "A Fine Bunch Indeed," Dale wrote: "While looking into the protected vice situation in Muncie Judge Dearth might turn the spotlight on another grafting outfit," then called the names of the members of one of the municipal boards.

"Next week the Post-Democrat will give facts and figures which should prove to the most skeptical that the crookedness in the police department is more than [illegible] he promised, and concluded:

"With so many good jails and penal institutions short of help the Post-Democrat insists that Judge Dearth take a stand against the grafters of the city and county administrations.

"Running a few unfortunate women out of town and letting the big fish remain will not hurt the grafters."

FORD TO HAVE ROSE GARDEN CONTAINING 10,000 PLANTS

Engages Massachusetts' Woman Expert to Lay Out Plot in Michigan Home.

By the Associated Press.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., July 24.—A magnificent rose garden cultivated by a woman here has so captivated Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford that the automobile manufacturer has engaged Mrs. Harriet R. Foote, the owner, to lay out one of 10,000 bushes for his Dearborn (Mich.) home.

The greater part of the bushes, which will include several hundred varieties, will be products of Mrs. Foote's garden which, with its 800 types, has long been one of the show places of the North Shore. Mrs. Foote, the widow of a former rector of Michael's Church, met the Fords when they were here last summer.

WILL INSTALL LIGHTS FOR AIR MAIL FLYERS

St. Louis-Chicago Route to Have Revolving Electric Beacons Every 10 Miles.

Work on the installation of lighting system for the guidance of night-flying aviators on the Chicago-St. Louis air mail route will be begun next week, Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, contract carriers, announced last night.

The money for the lighting work is to be supplied out of a $800,000 appropriation for equipping all the contract routes with night flying equipment. The quota of the Chicago-St. Louis route is $47,000.

Maj. Robertson returned yesterday from a conference of mail contractors at Washington at which each was allowed to specify the equipment he thought necessary for carrying out delivery of mail after dark.

Revolving Beacons.

Under his specifications the Chicago-St. Louis will be marked by 24 revolving 24-inch electric beacons placed approximately 10 miles apart and visible for 30 miles so that flyers will never be out of sight of two of them except on foggy nights.

In addition the route will have seven emergency landing fields, each marked by electric boundary lights and beacon, and equipped with a telephone. The fields will be in charge of caretakers paid by the government and will be so placed that with the four regular fields on the route pilots will have landing places available approximately every 25 miles.

As a further aid to the carrying of mail through the difficult weather of the winter months, the United States Weather Bureau, within two weeks, will install a meteorological station at Lambert-St. Louis Flying Field, Maj. Robertson announced.

Business Increasing.

A meteorologist who will be stationed there permanently will take daily soundings of the air and furnish for flyers the same weather information as is furnished at army fields. The Robertson pilots also have available the reports of a Government meteorologist at Maywood Field in Chicago.

Robertson said last night that the mail was rapidly increasing in daily volume so that with the help of a $100-a-day guarantee of the St. Louis Clearing House Association the service is breaking even on its operations. The Clearing House Association yesterday renewed its guarantee for an additional 45 days to insure retention of the service.

SENTENCED TO HANG FOR HOLDUP MURDER

Millard Abel Found Guilty of Slaying Man in Kansas City Parking Station.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 24.—The death penalty was imposed today on Millard Abel, 25 years old, an ex-convict, formerly of St. Louis, who had been on trial for a week on the charge of slaying Harry T. McConnell, an employe of the Fred Harvey system, in a parking station, May 8. Four men were indicted for the murder. Besides Abel there were Richard Miller, an attendant at the parking station; Carl Benson of St. Louis, another ex-convict, and Earl L. Abel of St. Louis, a brother of the defendant and manager of the station.

Miller, alias Decatur Leake, former St. Louis saloon keeper, was captured in Kansas City. Letters found in Millard Abel's room indicated he had lived occasionally at 4215A Olive street, St. Louis, and Benson was captured in a raid on a rooming house at that address.

Records show that Millard Abel has served a prison term for a highway robbery at Black Jack, St. Louis County, and Benson has served a term for highway robbery in Jefferson County, near Hillcrest Station.

Child, 3, Killed Under Motor Bus.

LET'S GO!

This is the season of the "wide open spaces"; the season when the cares of business are put aside; when youth, maiden and grown-ups seek relief from the monotony of everyday life by indulging in the pleasures which Mother Nature alone can provide.

Even the poorest people have their outings and praise without stint is due those who thoughtfully arrange for them.

The monotony of life is what dulls it and makes it lose interest; relief from this monotony renews ambition and spurs us on to greater accomplishments.

LOST ARTICLE
Advertising

When concentrated in the Post-Dispatch is almost certain to re- store the article if it is found by an honest person, because the Post-Dispatch is the recognized Lost medium of St. Louis invariably consulted by persons who find lost articles. It is also a fact recog- nized by St. Louisans that many lost articles are advertised ex- clusively in the Post-Dispatch. Each week the Post-Dispatch prints TWICE as many LOST and FOUND ads as the next St. Louis news- paper. If a lost article cannot be recovered through the Post-Dis- patch it is, as a rule, not recovered.

TRIES TO DECAPITATE WIFE WITH KNIFE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

METROPOLIS, Ill., July 24.—After virtually decapitating his wife, C. B. Logan, 53 years old, of New Liberty, who recently was released from the State insane asylum at Anna, is held in the Pope County jail at Golconda, charged with murder. Only the appearance of their 8-year-old son, Fred, prevented Logan from decapitating the woman with a pocket knife last night, the boy told officers. Mrs. Logan was 50 years old.

The child said that his father had been quarrelsome at the supper table. The boy left the room and when he returned found his father kneeling over his mother's body on the floor and endeavoring to decapitate her with a large pocket knife.

Logan fled from the house, but was captured and bound by neighbors when he attempted to return to the scene of the crime. When officers arrived from Golconda and Metropolis they forced Logan to view his wife's body. He broke down and later signed a confession.

A mental test probably will be made before Logan is tried for murder. He was held to the grand jury by the Coroner's jury last night. Four children, three boys and a girl, were left motherless by their father's act.

HIGHER TAX INDICATED FOR PUBLIC UTILITIES

State Commission Making Tentative Assessments, but Does Not Disclose Sums.

By the Jeff. City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 24. — Tentative assessments of the property of public utilities and common carriers operating in Missouri, for 1926 taxes, are being made by the State Tax Commission, preliminary to hearings for the companies before the Tax Commission on the assessment valuations to be recommended to the State Board of Equalization.

While the Tax Commission has not disclosed the tentative figures compiled so far, the upward trend of public utility assesments in recent years, coupled with the depleted condition of the State's general revenue fund, point to increased tax valuations for some of the utilities.

The Commission now is working on tentative assessments of the telephone and telegraph companies. Others to be taken up later are the steam railroads and terminal companies, street and electric railways, bridge companies, pipe line companies and electric light and transmission line companies.

Burden on Larger Companies.

Approximately 100 telephone companies are operating in Missouri. Valuations of the smaller companies will be changed but little this year, it is understood, but increases will be made in the assessments of some of the larger companies, including the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. Improvements and additions by the larger companies will be the basis of these increases, it was said.

Assessments of the public utilities totaled $457,319,009 last year. This covered all the property of the companies except land and buildings materials and supplies and a few other items assessed locally. The principal assessments were railroads and terminals, $283,441,493; street and electric railways, $68,233,100; electric light and transmission companies, $40,522,078; telephone companies, $35,172,210, and oil pipe line companies, $16,239,720.

Total to Exceed $4,750,000,000.

The total assessed valuation for the State, for 1926 taxes, will be in exces sof $4,750,000,000. The State Board of Equalization last March fixed the assessed valuation of real estate and personal property at $4,100,582,325. In reaching this figure the Board of Equalization increased the assessment of city and town real estate $115,402,341 over 1925, and erduced farm land assessments $11,204,449.

Gas companies, ice and steam heat plants now are valued for taxation entirely by local assessors, but the State Tax Commission plans to submit a recommendation to the next Legislature for transfer of the assessment of such companies to the State. This would place all of the utility companies in the State under assessment by the Tax Commission and the State Board of Equalization.

Electric light and power companies and electric transmission line companies were brought under the Tax Commission and State Board of Equalization for the first time last year. Their first year under the State Boards resulted in assessment increases averaging about 50 per cent more than their former valuations by assessors.

Warrants for Two Treating Cancer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., July 24.—Warrants charging Dr. S. A. Persons and Harry M. Hoxsey, officers of the Hoxide Cancer Sanitarium here, with practising medicine without a license, were issued today. A local Justice issued the warrants, on complaint of the State Board of Education and Registration. The institution several months ago filed suit for $100,000 damages against the American Medical Association, for statements made in an article which appeared in the association's journal.

35TH DIVISION AERIAL UNIT READY FOR CAMP

All-St. Louis Organization Will Receive Two Weeks' Training in Bridgeton.

The Thirty-fifth Division Air Unit, all-St. Louis National Guard organization, will go into camp for two weeks' training at Lambert-St. Louis Field, Bridgeton, next Sunday.

The unit, organized three years ago, held its two previous annual encampments at Nevada, Mo., with the State infantry troops. Due to an adverse report concerning the condition of the flying field at Nevada it was decided to conduct this year's camp at Lambert-St. Louis Field, the organization's home station. A regulation army camp will be established at the field including tents, kitchens, and shower baths. The drilling of two wells on the grounds was recently completed, insuring adequate water-supply for all purposes.

The training schedule, prepared by Major C. Ray Wassall, commander, will include reconnaissance and formation flying and aerial photography, lectures, and athletics. Local civic and fraternal organizations have volunteered to provide entertainment features each evening during the encampment period.

A recruiting campaign will be conducted this week by members of the organization for additional personnel. At present 12 officers and 50 enlisted men have signified their intention of attending the camp and it is desired to get additional men having the necessary qualifications for both the observation squadron and the photo section, which comprise the unit. Those wishing to apply for enlistment are requested to report at Lambert Field today, or at the unit office, 200 South Theresa avenue, tomorrow night.

The equipment of the organization includes 9 JNS training planes, 2 DH-4's, a TW training plane, mobile machine shops, trucks and motor cycles. The present equipme will be replaced next October by three Douglass and five AT-180-horsepower observation ships of the latest type.

Maj. Wassall will be assisted during the camp by Lieuts. George Palmer and Benjamin Griffin, regular army pilots.

40 IN ANTI-KLAN MOB FACE JAIL

Iowa County Attorney Threatens to Call Troops to End Rioting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CORNING, Ia., July 24.—Anti-Klan demonstrations here during the last 24 hours have developed a tense situation, County Attorney Ed Fackler said tonight. He added he would appeal for State troops in the event of further trouble.

Investigation of last night's disorders, in which a mob of about 75 persons attempted to waylay a large group of Ku Klux Klansmen on their way to a meeting, will lead to information being filed against more than 40 citizens, Sheriff Coakley said. The Sheriff said charges of mob violence and inciting a riot would be brought against the demonstrators before the grand jury in September.

HOG PRICES LOWER IN TRADE FOR WEEK

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	32,921	30,151	34,103
Hogs	63,327	53,403	49,262
Sheep	15,959	22,803	14,594
Horses and mules	692	456	337
Totals	112,899	106,812	98,596

Hogs closed lower for the week at the St. Louis National Stock Yards, lambs higher and cattle steady to 75c to $1 lower. There was no particular change in horses and mules. Swine receipts were liberal, cattle fairly large and sheep and lambs an average. The horse and mule run was increased by the addition of Western consignments to the total. The combined total of all livestock for the week aggregated 112,899 head, an increase of 6,000 both a week ago and a year ago. Cattle and calves alone numbered right at 33,000 head. Native and Western steers and fat light yearlings ruled strong and active the forepart of the week, but a reaction on the close eliminated the early improvement. All classes of cows were under pressure every day following Monday and closed at the low level of the year. Beef grades declined 50c in a dull trade and canners and cutters stumped 75c to $1. Bulls were steady up to the closing trade when irregular declines of 25 to 50c or more were inflicted. Stocker and feeder cattle proved steady to 25 to 50c lower in a quiet market. The loss was principally in cows. Veal calves advanced 75c Monday to a top of $13 and maintained this level throughtout the period. Southern canner yearlings, however, slumped 50 to 75c, closing at $4.25. Steer and yearling quality was fairly good in the native department. Several hundred cars of steers cashed in a spread of $8 to $9.75 per cwt. and numerous consignments of light yearlings sold between to latter price and $10.50 which was the top. Weighty beeves registered high in this class at $10.25. Range steers totaled better then 150 cars, with Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas contributing. Prices were in a spread of $5.25 to $8.75. In the light yearling department heifers topped at $10.50 and sales of this class were also recorded at $10.25, $10.20 and $9.90. Beef cows on the close had stumped to a $4.50 to $6.50 range, with most sales around the $5 mark. Cutters rested at $3.25 to $4.25 and canners at $2.50 to $3, with an inferior kind quotable down to $2. Heavy beef bulls finished at $5.75 to $6.25 bolognas $5 to $5.75 and canners and cutters $3.50 up. Stocker and feeder steers ranged from $4.50 to $7.50, with most centering in the $6 column.

Hog Run Liberal.

The past week was featured by a rather liberal midsummer run and a sharp decline in the hog market, part of which was regained towards the close. The week's supply locally totaled 63,000, against 53,000 the preceding week and 49,000 corresponding week last year. Eleven principal Western markets reported 468,000 hogs for the past week, against 444,000 the preceding week and 414,000 corresponding time last year. The local offering for the week included an unusually large proportion of medium to heavy weight swine, well finished and carrying splendid quality. Corn has been abundant at reasonably prices and drouth fears, high in prices so the farmers found it highly profitable to make their hogs good and heavy this season and saved the cream of the crop rolled to market this week. Perhaps the hot wave had the effect of forcing some of the corn fed swine in from the country. Market opened on a steady to firm basis, then for three days there was a very sharp decline, ranging from 75c to $1 on the lighter kinds and $1 to $1.25 on the medium to heavy weights. The last two days of the week saw a marked betm in recent and the market recovered 25c to 50c of the decline, leaving the trade around 50c to 75c lower than on the previous week's close, the lighter grades of hogs 200 pounds and down showing the least loss and the heavier butcher kinds the most. Packing sows and stags were hit for a 75c to $1 break. Strong weight pigs in extra good demand, but light pigs were somewhat neglected towards the close. The week finished with good to choice hogs of various classes selling as follows: 120 to 180 pound pigs and lights, $14.10@14.25; assorted lots up to $14.25; 180 to 210 pound hogs, $13.65 to $14; 220 to 240 pounds, $13.30 to $13.60; 250 to 280 pounds, $13 to $13.30; 260 to 280 pounds, $12.75 to $13; 280 pounds up, $12.25 to $12.75; packing sows, $10 to $10.75; stags, $9 to $10.50.

The week's supply of sheep both here and throughout the West has been fully up to the season's average. The supply totaled 15,900 against 22,800 the preceding week and 14,800 corresponding time a year ago. The local market for the week ruled steady to 25c lower, with 200,000 head against 186,000 the preceding week and 146,000 the corresponding time last year. Buyers have taken hold of the offering readily throughout the entire week and active markets were the rule from day to day. The big end of the offering consisted of native lambs with Southwest lambs second in point of numbers and Southerns occupying third and last place. Practically like the movement of Kentucky and Tennessee lambs is about over for the season. The general lamb market opened to the week with an advance of 50c to 75c, this applying to all grades both choice and common. The offering of mutton sheep has been small and during the week to day, hardly enough getting in to interest buyers or test out prices. Generally it has been a 50c to $1 deal in the days asses, prices showing no change from last week's close. Breeding ewes have been offered sparingly and there are a fair demand. Quotations: Slaughter stock—Good to choice lambs, $13.75@14.25, medium to good, $12.75@13.75, plain to medium, $10.50@12.75; choice clipped lambs, $9.50, skips, $3.50@7. Good to choice yearling wethers, $10@12.25, plain to good, $8@10. Good to choice handyweight mutton ewes $5.50@6.25, medium to medium mutton ewes $4@4.50, choppers and bucks $2@3, canners $1@2. Feeding lambs $5@7.50, thin to fair kids $2@4.

Horses and Mules.

Horse and mule receipts the past week at approximately 700 head, consisted largely of range consignments that sold at special sale Tuesday. The clearance of the Western stock was good and prices were fair considering the dry weather in many sections and the busy farm season. Inferior to medium grades were pronounceately lower than the halter broke kinds. The former, numbering about 400 head, ruled in a practical range of $12.50@51 per head bulk, $15@30. Halter broke offerings ranged from $25 @75. Preference was given the little horses, thin in flesh, were hard to sell so as to make expenses. Native horses and mules were in small supply and prices averaged about steady.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review today says:

"Strength in the stock market of late has been followed by weakness with such promptness and weakness by strength that it is not possible at this moment to say in what direction prices are moving. Such sudden reversals of trend are interesting for the light they throw on the character of the trading.

Most of the buying that has lifted stocks during the last two months may be traced to individuals or institutions of wide means that have re-entered the market in the confidence either that the market could hold its position on intrinsic merit or that a demonstration wisely staged would draw the public in again. Shrewd speculators in the market have known for weeks that the tide of business was better than had been expected, and this they reckoned would restore sentiment. Certainly the barometers for the initial six months inspire confidence in the immediate future when read at their face value. That is why the average man finds himself nowadays ignoring the bad news but listening attentively to the more cheerful predictions. He has not become fully convinced that all is well, but he soon will be unless a real storm cloud gathers.

Says Corn Basis $1.45.

"Most of our troubles here and overseas are political at the moment, rather than economic; at home they center in the activities of the corn growers and abroad in the difficulty of unified efforts by France to stabilize her currency. When the Des Moines delegates met this week to urge Government aid to raise the price of corn they overlooked several simple laws in economics. In agitating the cause they failed to recognize that certain corn growers are the victims of circumstances that the administration is as anxious as they to correct. It is true that $5 cents is not enough for a bushel of corn, but very little of the commodity has been marketed at that price. Most of the crop has been or will be marketed in the form of hogs, and for them the farmer gets $14.50 per 100 pounds, which is the best price in six years. On the basis that 10 bushels of corn will produce 100 pounds of hogs, that would represent $1.45 instead of 85 cents for a bushel of corn. The short corn crop in 1924 produced a scarcity of hogs, so that when a bumper crop came the next year the farmer was short on hogs but long on corn. The former naturally fell in the price and the latter rose. As the normal relationship between corn and hogs is restored the problem will lose its present serious aspect.

Decline in French Franc.

"Notwithstanding the succession of governments that have promised new things for France since the war and subsequently failed, fresh confidence goes out to the Poincare cabinet of political veterans that will present its plans to the Chamber of Deputies next Thursday. The decline of the franc to a new record low level of 1.93¾ this week, or to about a tenth of its parity, is the inevitable consequence of continued inflation that soon must be checked if the franc is to be saved. Note circulation this week at 55,005,856,000 francs reached the highest point in the history of the Bank of France and came uncomfortably close to the legal limit of 58,500,000,000 francs set on Dec. 4, 1925. The rally in the exchange on the announcement of the new government reflects a faith that the united efforts of the best French statesmen now may adopt some acceptable plan of stabilization.

Some Political Problems.

"Still another political problem came to the surface this week, when certain British commentators endeavored to draw comparisons between the British and American plans for debt settlement. Circumstances surrounding the negotiations in the two countries were so different that persons who set out to show that one country has acted less selfishly than another will find in the end that they have only embittered feelings, without arriving anywhere. The various political complications that have come to the fore this week present problems, but the business community expects, apparently, that they all will be untangled. Certainly the shadows on the political horizon have not discouraged industry in this country, for simultaneously reports of good omen have been flowing in from different sections of the country. At this season of the year industrial activity always is lower than during the spring or autumn periods, but trade is more active than usual in the key industries."

Week-end Markte Lower.

"Professional selling directed against the motors, the equipments and some of the specialties brought out considerable realizing on long stock in the market today. Pool operators displayed a little discouragement but nevertheless they attempted to move their favorites up a notch or two despite the bear attacks. The failure of the market to follow through on recent rallies has dampened some of the bullish enthusiasm, so it was not difficult for professional traders to ferret out technical soft spots. On the whole, however, the market was not over-active, largely due to the fact that many traders have been driven by the heat out of the city for the week-end.

FRANCE'S PROBLEM IS NOT FINANCIAL BUT POLITICAL

American and British Bankers Would Find Little Difficulty in Evolving Scheme for Rapidly Restoring Credit if French Nation Co-operated.

Special Wireless to the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, July 24.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review of week says:

"All concerned not only with the good Anglo-American understanding but with a desire for improvement of the European economic situation must deplore the recent attempts of a certain section of the British and French press to confuse economic problems with European debts to America.

"Obviously the extent of Europe's external debts which were the inevitable outcome of the war, is a serious handicap, but the point is that France might have used the fact as an impetus for prompt dealing with the currency crisis and stabilization of currency, and Britain might have used the same circumstances as an impetus for greater industrial effort.

"Self-pity is a bad sign, whether for the individual or nation. The deterioration of political life, with the increased tendency to fear democracy and pandering to votes, partly explains the French vacillation in currency reforms. Power and prestige of the British bankers are largely responsible for the early curbing of our inflation and the restoration of the gold standard. In France, however, the power and prestige of the bankers are a less potent influence.

"The Daily Mail continues its anti-American policy on the European debt question, but the Express publicly declared today that while it was opposed originally to the terms of the British debt settlement, it considers the subject should not now be revived or anything done to disturb Anglo-American relations. This declaration, however, is exceedingly tardy.

"Needless to say, the best quarters here, and doubtless on the American side, dismiss the whole controversy as beneath contempt.

Debt Question Reviewed.

"The general ethical aspect of the war debts is open to argument. Not so, however, the definite contracts by respective European Governments. Britain's prompt funding was due to simple recognition, primarily of the necessity for maintaining her credit; secondarily, to a desire for the closest terms of friendship for America.

"All this refers to the Mail and similar agitation. When America gets the full text of Churchill's reply to Mellon there will be found nothing to take exception to.

"French currency and British industrial problems really constitute the chief point of interest for autumn, and we shall doubtless worry through with ultimate resumption of coal output.

"Doubtless trade union extremists really are tending to destroy their cause and the Government probably hopes for the situation to be solved through the triumph and reassurance of the power of genuine labor. It is difficult to say yet whether such hope is justified.

"It is impossible to gauge prospects of French developments, for the situation has gone so far that temporary trouble is feared under any regime."

Co-operation Necessary.

"British and American bankers would find little difficulty in evolving a scheme for rapidly restoring the French credit and security stabilization of currency. All such schemes, however, would presuppose acquiescence and co-operation of the French nation and it is chances in that direction that out-siders cannot accurately gauge.

"Present indications suggest a comparatively stagnant two months here, unless there is early and complete solution of the coal crisis, in which case trade will recover, with possibly rather firmer money rates."

Weekly Metal Review

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The outstanding feature in the steel market during the past week was the growing evidence that the industry as a whole is not experiencing the curtailment of business and production which usually accompanies the midsummer season, consequently the trade was very optimistic, and while efforts to advance prices in some directions met with little success, values as a whole displayed decided stability.

Pig iron was in fair demand with some business for fourth quarter delivery, and prices were steady.

Copper was considerably stronger during the week, with a liberal tonnage sold to the trade for electrolytic delivered, consumers also specified so heavily against shipments that one large producer reports 60 per cent of its entire tonnage for that month suggesting that unfilled orders for finished products have been booked. The improved situation in steel circles.

Tin continued dull with but slight fluctuations in prices. Despite bullish developments in London and expectations of favorable monthly statistics, offerings of spot and July metal have been liberal. Lack movement into consumption continued for big consumers' needs appeared to have been anticipated some time back. Lead advanced further with inquiry good for last shipment. Producers are reported to be well booked up for that month.

Zinc was only moderately active, but prices were well maintained reflecting the continued strong ore situation.

Antimony was strong and higher on an active demand due to unsettled conditions in China, which were expected to affect both production and shipment.

LOCAL STOCK MARKET QUIET DURING WEEK

ST. RAIN REPORTS CAUSE UPTURN IN COTTON

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Rain reports caused another big upturn in the cotton market today. Some of the latter deliveries reached new high prices for the same in the first hour, with October up to 17.84c, January 17.78c and May 18.13c.

At the best level, the market was 32 to 36 points over the previous close, part of which was lost in the last half hour unloading and realizing, so that final prices were 14 to 32 points net higher.

The effect of yesterday's rather bearish Government report, indicating crop of 15,368,000 bales, seemed to have disappeared today, in view of the further rain news from the Southwest, and the market, after opening six to 13 points higher, continued its advance until almost $2 a bale had been added to the levels prevailing at the close on Friday.

Besides showers and heavy rains reported at many places in Texas, with indications that there might be further precipitation over the week-end, the tropical storm in the West Indies, gave bear traders a good deal of concern, as it was impossible to judge how it might develop over Sunday. Equally noteworthy as a bull factor was the increase of activity in cotton goods circles, with large sales reported at Fall River and the New Orleans meeting of cotton manufacturers about crop conditions as a result of insects and persistent rains has extended to the buyers of cotton goods.

Improvement in the general political situation was not lost sight of either, and the buying during the forenoon was attributed to big Wall street interests, who had not heretofore been prominently identified with the market.

A Dallas wire called attention to the spread of thurberia weevil from Arizona, causing uneasiness in West Texas, West New Mexico and Oklahoma.

CRUSADER WINS CINCINNATI DERBY; SETTING RECORD

Cardinals Drop 11-Inning Game to Giants, 5 to 3

RHEM'S EIGHT-BASE WILD THROW SENDS KELLY AND JACKSON ACROSS PLATE

By J. Roy Stockton.

Charles Flint Rhem made an eight-base wild throw yesterday afternoon, the extremely wild toss handing a ball game to the New York Giants 5 to 3 and dropping the Cardinals a game further behind the league lead, which was seized by the Pirates by virtue of their double victory scored while the Reds were losing to Boston. Hornsby's men are now three and a half games behind the Pirates and the Reds, who are virtually tied for first place, though Pittsburg is in front by a few percentage points.

Rhem's wild throw was one of the wildest, woolliest and most costly wild throws in the history of St. Louis baseball. The score was tied in the eleventh inning when the Giants went to bat and Kelly led off with a single to left. Long George stopped at second on Jackson's single to center and of course the logical thing for the Giants to do was to sacrifice. The task for the Cardinals was to break up the sacrifice, to prevent Kelly from reaching third base was essential, to prevent long George from scoring on a sacrifice fly or infield out.

It Looked Simple But—

The play that was coming was plain to every one. And when McMullen bunted and the ball went straight to Rhem, there was a wild cheer, for the bunt was so straight to Rhem and hit so soundly that it looked like a simple matter to toss to Bell and force Kelly at third. It even appeared possible that there might be a double play on the attempted sacrifice. Certainly, it appeared, the attempt to advance Kelly had failed.

But Rhem was so eager to make the play to hurry it so there might be a chance for a double play that he did not wait to aim. He fired away with all the strength in that strong right arm. The ball sailed wide of the target and high. Bell had no chance to catch it and the ball crashed against the grand stand wall and caroomed out into left field and before Blades could chase it down and return it Kelly and Jackson scored and McMullen raced all the way to third. Thus Kelly made two bases on the error, Jackson three and McMullen three, which made it an eight base wild throw.

After It's Too Late.

That was the ball game. Rhem settled down and struck out Scott and on Mueller's grounder to Hornsby McMullen was nailed at the plate. Frisch then lined to

Pirates Take Lead, Winning Doubleheader

Pittsburg Defeats Brooklyn, 12-8 and 3-2—Wright's Single Breaks Up Game.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, July 24. — Pittsburg ousted the Cincinnati Reds from first place in the National League race today by winning both games of a double-header from Brooklyn by 12 to 8 and 3 to 2, while the Braves defeated Cincinnati. The Reds now trail the champions by five points.

The initial fracas turned out to be a free-hitting affair, each club registering 15 safeties.

In the closing battle, the Pirates' winning run came in the ninth when Wright's single scored Waner.

McWeeny was forced to retire from the box with the score tied on account of being hit by a batted ball in the sixth inning.

Judge Albright Scores Upset—6500 Attend Closing of Madison Track.

"Get-away" night at the Madison Kennel Club track, on the Collinsville road, last night, was made a memorable occasion when the winner of the second race on the program paid the record price of the season, $94.40 for $2. Judge Albright, an imported dog, owned by W. T. Askew, making his third start of the meeting, was the winner. He went to the outside at the stretch turn and ran completely around the pace makers, four of which were bunched on the rail, fighting for position. It was the first time in three starts that Judge Albright had gotten his nose in the money.

A crowd of about 6500 persons bade farewell to the track. A special fireworks display was held at the conclusion of the night's races.

BUD TAYLOR GETS VERDICT OVER RYAN ON FOUL

Low Blow in Third Round Terminates Bantamweight Bout—Crowd of 9000 Attends.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., aspirant to the world's bantamweight championship, today was given the referee's decision over Tommy Ryan of McKeesport, Pa., on a foul in the third round of a scheduled 10-round contest at White Sox ball park.

In another 10-rounder Billy Petrolle of Fargo, N. D., knocked out Johnny Adams of San Bernardino, Cal., in the eighth round.

The show, comprising four 10-round bouts, was the second staged in Chicago since boxing became legal in Illinois, and drew a crowd of 9000 to 10,000 fans.

Ryan was guilty of fouling Taylor twice before delivering the third foul blow. In the first round Ryan drove a sweeping left hook into Taylor's groin and Taylor sank to the floor of the ring in pain. He insisted on continuing, however, and swarmed all over Ryan for the rest of the round.

In the second round Referee Mike Bartley warned Ryan for hitting low and in the third, after a furious mix-up, Ryan sent another left hook to the groin and Taylor doubled up in pain. Physicians, after examining Taylor, ruled that he was in no condition to continue. Taylor and Ryan each weighed 119¼.

The final bout between Petrolle and Adams was a whirling of action from the start until the eighth, when Petrolle knocked his opponent out with a right to the chin.

The punches that sent Adams to the floor were a left hook to the body, followed by a right to the chin. Staggering and groggy, Adams fell an easy victim to a finishing right hand punch.

For seven rounds they mixed like a couple of longshoremen, with Petrolle having the edge. He inflicted heavy body punishment and in the fifth had Adams on the verge of falling to the floor.

JOE GLICK DEFEATS RAY MILLER IN CONEY ISLAND RING

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 24. — Joe Glick, New York junior lightweight, outpointed Ray Miller, of Chicago, in a 10-round match at the Coney Island stadium tonight. Miller weighed 130¾, Glick one pound less. Glick outgeneraled and outpunched the Chicago boxer in six of the 10 rounds. Glick opened a cut over Miller's right eye in the ninth round with a straight left.

Eddie Anderson, Wyoming "cowboy," won a judges' decision over Arnold Ryan of Brooklyn in a 10-round semifinal held after the main go. Anderson weighed 130¾; Ryan 129¾.

BROOKLYN PURCHASES OUTFIELDER HENDRICKS

The Dodgers paid $15,000 in cash for the outfielder and sent Pitcher Ray Moss to the Pelicans on option. Another pitcher will be transferred outright to the Pelicans at the end of the season.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., July 24.—With the signing of Malcolm Goldie today the management of the Bethlehem Steel soccer team is assured having his forward line of last year intact to start the 1926-27 season. The forward line to which probably one or two more players will be included, comprises Goldie, Rollo, Archie Stark, Johnny Granger and George Jaap.

The Browns' New $125,000 Star

FRED SHULTE.

Shulte, Bought by Browns, Cost Otto Borchert, Owner Of Milwaukee, But $1500

Youngster, a Man of Model Habits, Signed First Contract Shult, but Brewer Magnate Made Him Add Another Letter to His Name.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 24.—Fred Shulte, the prize of the American Association coveted by seven major league clubs, who was sold to the Browns by the Home Brewers of this city, Friday, represented an investment of only $1500. The Browns gave three ballplayers and cash to obtain the Milwaukee ace.

This year is his first as a regular, although he became the property of the local club in the fall of 1924, when he was obtained from the Waterloo, Ia., club of the Mississippi Valley League. He is 22 years old and resides in Belvidere, Ill. In the off-season he is a member of a professional basketball team.

When Fritz received his first Milwaukee contract he signed his name S H U L T. Otto Borchert, who, for many years was a traveling salesman before he bought the local club, discovered the new Brownie star. The Brewers' owner advised the recruit to sign his first Milwaukee contract Shulte.

"Why?" inquired the player.

Borchert Knew His Eggs.

"Oh, for business reasons," answered Borchert. "Don't you know that one of the game's greatest outfielders was Frank Schulte of the famous old Cub team? Think of it, another Schulte in baseball. Why, when you develop into a star you'll be worth more to me than if you are known as Shult." Freddie complied with his employer's request and the box scores have carried Shulte ever since.

"The boy is just one year behind schedule. He should have been in the big league this season," said Jack Lelivelt, local manager, recently.

In 1925 Fred was permitted to idle his time away on the bench. He gave promise of becoming a real star at the Brewer training camp, but injured an ankle in the opening series of the season at Columbus. He did not hit his stride again until fall.

Lelivelt gambled with Schulte at the start of the 1926 season. Finding himself without a capable second-baseman he decided to convert Freddie into an infielder. But he was a disappointment. His infield play also affected his batting and it was decided to return him to the middle garden. And there he has remained.

Crusader had to be extensively worked with to obtain forward place early, was carried slightly wide by Boot to Boot first turn, but went to within range of Carlaris in next furlong and after being reserved to last quarter, sprinted into command quickly and drew away rapidly through stretch. Display, fractious at barrier, was forced wide entire trip but came fast final half mile. Boot to Boot was a forward factor throughout and held on well although tiring. Carlaris had good speed for a mile but tired badly thereafter. Rhinock was not good enough. Chicago showed some early speed.

$2 mutuels paid: Crusader, straight $3.60, place $2.60, show $2.40. Display, place $6.60 show $4.00. Boot to Boot, show, $2.80.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, July 24.—Hail Crusader! The mighty son of the mighty racer and sire, Man o' War, came out of the East and triumphed, this afternoon, with supreme ease over the best 3-year-olds that could be mustered at Coney Island race track.

Following closely in his wake came another Eastern-owned horse, Display, while the consistent Boot to Boot, which has figured as a strong contender in every Derby start he has made, landed in third place. Trailing the trio was the Tia Juana "wonderfully advertised," Carlaris.

Added laurels for Crusader came when he displaced the former mile and a quarter track record by negotiating the distance in 2:02, which was one-fifth of a second better than the former mark.

Winner by Three Lengths.

The S. D. Riddle representative was master of those he met. He left no doubt of it by the handy manner in which he performed his task. He had a margin of three lengths over Display, the latter hard urged beating home Boot to Boot by half a length. The Bradley starter was the only one of the field of seven to suffer from interference.

This was partly the fault of Albert Johnson who took him back sharply off Carlaris in the stages and when he attempted to move up.

He met some interference from Display. It might have made some difference in the result between the two, but he was no match for Crusader.

Carlaris could not go far in advance of his field today. As a matter of fact, it was a question if Boot to Boot could measure strides with him in the early stages had Johnson so desired.

Carlaris Quits Early.

Boot to Boot raced within a length of Carlaris in the first half mile and after three-quarters of the trip had been run, Crusader readily passed him and all during the stretch it was only a question of how far Crusader would be allowed to win by, Sande having him in restraint all during the last sixteenth. Carlaris shot his bolt after six furlongs, confirming opinion that he is a sprinter. He weakened badly when urged hard and retired steadily in the last sixteenth.

Display delayed the start but he was away on even terms, though Boot to Boot at once jumped into the lead, but he gave way to Carlaris as Johnson sensed that it would be suicidal to keep pace with the Big sprinter. Crusader also was under restraint and when the real racing began, Carlaris was completely lost in the shuffle. His showing was decidedly disappointing in view of the extensive advertising he has had.

It is probably as well for his admirers who were indulging in loud match talk against Bubbling Over, that the pair did not meet. It would have been mighty costly for the Carlaris contingent.

Crusader Best 3-Year-Old.

Crusader by his performance today at once took rank at the top of the 3-year-olds heap and it is doubtful if he will be displayed for the remainder of the season, unless Bubbling Over makes a speedy recovery from his present ailment and Bagenbaggage recovers in time to match strides with the Riddle crack in the American Derby.

Crusader is destined for Chicago to race there next Saturday in the American Derby and on the same train will go Display. Carlaris is also expected to start in the event, but it seems folly on the part of his owner to race him a mile and a half in view of his dull race at a mile and a quarter.

A banner crowd was on hand to view the races, but it was not commensurate with an attendance that should have attracted a meeting of Crusader and Carlaris. Crusader, by his victory, added $20,150 to his earnings.

Reputation Out of Money.

The Cincinnati Derby was on a program with seven other races. The sport on the whole was spectacular and brought several upsets by defeats of favorites. Reputation's downfall in the second feature was a severe blow as well as a costly one. He failed to get part of the purse.

There were no incidents to mar the racing. The mutuel ticket dicted yesterday, as were several officials. Their cases will come up for a preliminary hearing Monday.

Tiger Flowers Defeats Huffman

Bout at Los Angeles Characterized by Wild Swinging.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—Tiger Flowers of Georgia, middleweight boxing champion, won the referee's decision over Sailor Eddie Huffman of Los Angeles in a 10-round bout at Ascot Park here late today. The negro titleholder's crown was not at stake.

The champion caught a right to the jaw in the third round and went down for a count of seven, but weathered the round under a furious attack by Huffman, who could not muster a knockout wallop.

Flowers weighed 167 pounds and Huffman 171½.

Ringsiders gave Flowers six or seven of the ten rounds. Huffman a couple and one in doubt.

The bout was characterized by some of the wildest swings ever unleashed in these parts. Both men were long on this haymaking style, but, as in most other exchanges, Flowers had the advantage.

The bout was fought under a broiling sun before a crowd roughly estimated at between 15,000 and 20,000.

BAD BREAKS ROB ROOKIE OF A VICTORY

Two Fluke Hits Give Red Sox Two Runs in Ninth—Hargrave Poles Homer in First Contest—Scores 14-9 and 5-5.

By Burt Whitman,
Sports Editor, the Boston Herald.

BOSTON, July 24.—The Browns loosed a miscellany of pitching at the Red Sox in the first game this afternoon and lost, 14 to 9, but in the second contest, Ernie Nevers, the California Hercules, only a novice in the big league pitching circles, hurled his Missouri pals to a 5-5 draw.

The game was called at the end of the ninth to let the Browns catch a train for the West. And the tough part of it was that the Sox made two runs in their ninth, largely due to a stumble by Sisler at first base.

Accordingly, the Browns have taken four out of six games from the cellar Sox in this stand and feel that they are coming along in this American League world. They almost had that second game tucked away when Manager Sisler, who was erratic in the field all day, deprived Nevers of a merited victory and his first in the big league.

Hargrave Poles Home Run.

Ballou, Falk, Vangilder and Wingard toiled here and there during the first game and five runs off Ballou in the first and four off the same athlete in the sixth, were big incidents in a loosely-played contest. Each team made 15 hits and two errors and used four pitchers.

The Messrs. Heimach, Wingfield, Ruffing and Harriss toiled for the Red Sox. The first named was quite all right until the sixth when, after two were gone, the Browns collected five runs. The top thrills of that splurge was a homer over the left field wall by Red Hargrave, with two friends on base.

But the Browns could not stand prosperity and Ballou, overlong in there in view of the things the Sox were doing to him, took it on the chin in the second half of the sixth for four runs. Two were out in this inning also when the Sox began to function. Flagstead's homer over the left field wall was the first run. It broke the six all-tie and then three more runs scampered across the plate in jig time. It appeared all day as if the Browns were a bit don't-carish.

Bennett Bats and Singles.

The Sisler men went into their eighth facing a Sox lead of 11 to 8. Things looked black for Boston when Pinch Hitters Bennett and Schang came through with singles off Ruffing.

Harriss relieved Ruffing and walked Melillo, jamming the bases with none out. It appeared like one of those large innings, but Harriss fanned Rice and then Sisler bounded into a double play.

Second Game.

Three runs were made by the Browns in the sixth inning of the second game, due to a pass off Wiltse to Rice, Sisler's infield single, an error by Haney on McManus' hot roller and Schang's double to left, all of which gave them a 5 to 3 lead.

Nevers had been outpitching Wiltse, but the beans were spilled in the last of the ninth. The score was 5 to 3 then. Regan was out, Sisler to Nevers, a good bit of covering on the part of the latter. Then Shaner batted for Haney and walked. Stokes flied to Williams and two were out.

Fitzgerald batted for Wiltse. He hit the ball towards first, just a bit off the bag. Sisler usually makes soft music of such chances, but this time he sort of slipped as he went for the ball, and when he had recovered himself—he had to make a hurried toss to Nevers, who raced over to cover, and Fitzgerald just barely beat the play. It was called a base hit, but was so close that Fitzgerald was spiked on the play and Herrera had to run for him.

Breaks Against Nevers.

Flagstead's single to center, a hot one, let Shaner score and Herrera reached third. Rigney bounded one to deep short. McManus cut over for the ball, could not get it, but obscured Gerber's vision just enough to cause the latter to lose the sphere. It was scored a base hit and Herrera scampered over with the tieing run. Then up came big Bill Jacobson, former Brownie. He pounded a warm grounder to McManus. Marty fumbled it but recovered in time to drive forward and tag Flagstead for the final out.

The announcement had been made that the game would be called at six o'clock to let the Browns catch a train for Cleveland and as soon as Flaggy was tagged out the umpires signified that it was 5:50 and too late to start another inning. Then the merry chase for the exits started.

It rained two inches here this morning. The weather was threatening before and during the game. There was a light rain fall in the second game, but the Sox management wanted to play.

A Year of Young Tennis Players At Wimbledon Says Helen Wills.

With Many Youthful Stars Coming to the Front Abroad the Outlook for America Is Rather Doubtful, the Champion Points Out.

By Helen Wills.

NEW YORK, July 24.

WIMBLEDON this year was a most interesting place from the viewpoint of a young tennis enthusiast; in fact, it was a young player's year, so to speak.

Miss Betty Nuthall, Miss Eileen Bennett, Miss Bouman, Mlle. Contostavlos, Miss Fry, Senorita d'Alvarez and Mlle. Vlasto made a young and charming galaxy of tennis stars.

A list of entrants such as this goes to show that girls are becoming proficient at the game much earlier than formerly. It shows, too, that it is possible to become skillful in tennis in a comparatively short time. Few of those mentioned above have been playing longer than six or seven years.

Betty Nuthall.

THE youngest girl who has ever been allowed by the committee of the All-England Club to participate in the championship tournament is Miss Betty Nuthall. She is 15, tall for her age, and strong. Her hair is beautifully golden, and hangs free to her shoulders. She is quite the old-fashioned girl, with rosy cheeks and clear blue eyes. Her tennis shows promise, and should, if she continues to improve at the rate which she has in the past, find her a place among the best women players of England.

The winter on the Riviera, with the wonderful opportunities for practice which the frequent tournaments there offer, was responsible for Miss Bennett's excellent showing at Wimbledon. Miss Bennett is 19.

During the tournament play in Southern France it was evident that her game was one with a great deal of promise. It has not far to go until it becomes first-class.

Against Miss Fry, on the Centre court at Wimbledon, she played a very impressive game, and seemed the logical winner until nearly the end of the third set, where her confidence was shaken by the longer tournament experience of her adversary.

England's Junior Tennis Queen

BETTY NUTHALL.

This 15-year-old girl has participated in the last two Wimbledon tournaments, and by her performances in these major events she is already listed among the leaders of international tennis. That Betty will one day enjoy a place in sport comparable to that held by Suzanne Lenglen and Helen Wills seems certain.

Clever Dutch Girl.

A NEW figure at Wimbledon and one who furnished a pleasant surprise, was Miss Bouman, the youthful, fair-haired Dutch girl.

In talking with one of the Dutch team I learned that she does not play tennis regularly while at home, and takes part but rarely in the tournaments in Holland. She plays for a while and then does not touch her racquet for weeks at a time.

This is, indeed, unfortunate, for she is one who has natural ability for the game. Her style is patterned more upon a man's game than a lady's.

Her balls are played forcefully and have fine speed. Her service is excellent. With more practice she would become a most skillful player. Her temperament is ideal and her disposition, like her hair, is fair and sunny.

American Outlook.

THE others, Mlle. Contostavlos, Mlle. Vlasto, Miss Fry and Senorita d'Alvarez, are young enthusiasts of the game who were well known to tennis followers, but Wimbledon found each one of these an improved player.

With so many youthful players in England and France, America, by comparison, has, at this time, a rather doubtful-looking future in women's tennis.

There are only one or two young girls who are playing well, and certainly none who could hold their own with the best of those I have mentioned.

Carlaris Entered In Ohio Derby

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., July 24.—Some of the best 3-year-olds in training are entered in the Ohio Derby, $10,000 added, at Maple Heights, July 28. Two handicaps also are on the get-away card.

Those named to start in the Derby, over a mile and a quarter, include Boot to Boot, Carlaris, Display, Cartoon and Brazen. More than 60 were nominated.

At the conclusion of the Maple Heights meeting, many of the stables will move to the Thistledown Track here, where a 15-day meeting opens July 29. The Flintstone Memorial Handicap, for 3-year-olds at a mile and a sixteenth, with $15,000 added money, is the big race on that program. It will be run Aug. 7.

Ban Johnson Acts to Keep Cobb from Delaying Games

Orders Umpires to Call Check on Tiger Leader After Protest From Griffith.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Orders have been issued to American league umpires McGowan and Connolly, now in Washington, to call check on Ty Cobb, fiery manager of the Detroit Tigers, when he indulges in tactics which delay games. The instructions, from Ban Johnson, president of the league, followed a protest telegram from Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, over Cobb's activities of yesterday which featured the two hours and forty minutes it took to play a nine-inning game.

The umpires did not disclose the exact nature of their orders but a telegram from Johnson to Griffith assured the club president that the arbiters had been directed to see that Cobb's outbursts were restricted.

Takes Role of Peacemaker.

The fighting spirit of the Tigers was in evidence again today but Cobb's part largely was that of peacemaker. He ended a wordy battle between Pitcher Earl Whitehall and Umpire McGowan over ball and strike decisions, and later again ran to the plate from the dugout to separate Outfielder Fothergill and McGowan.

Just before Cobb arrived Fothergill clinched his fist and stepped close to the umpire, but no blows were struck. Fothergill was banished from the game, over the protest of Cobb. Umpire Connolly then hastened to the scene and Cobb was waved back to the dugout.

"The Georgia Peach" spent most of the time in the coaching boxes, "riding" Alvin Crowder, Washington pitcher making his big league debut, but the rookie settled down after a dubious first inning and hurled a good game.

Trouble With Own Players.

Yesterday's game was marked by public criticism by Cobb of two of his own players, Catcher Woodall and First Baseman Blue. Blue was banished by Cobb when he pushed the manager aside to end the argument.

Cubs Held to Two Runs, Lose Twice to Phils

Carlson and Mitchell Pitch Wonderful Ball and Win, 2-0, 3-2.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 24.—The Cubs were defeated twice today by the Phillies, who won the first game, 2 to 0, and took the second 3 to 2.

Chicago was unable to hit Carlson safely in the curtain raiser and Mitchell was most effective in the twilight session until the last inning when three singles netted the home team its only tallies of the day.

A crowd of 23,000 saw the games.

Jones and Osborne pitched well enough for Chicago but their opponents were a bit stronger. The games were well fielded and the results hinged solely upon the pitching.

SENATORS HOIST 1925 PENNANT, THEN LOSE TO TIGERS, 3-2

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Detroit made enough runs in the first inning of today's game with Washington to win, 3 to 2. Crowder, former Birmingham pitcher, hurling his first game for the Senators, was touched for eight hits, four of them in the first frame when the Tigers scored all their runs. Whitehill yielded seven hits.

Before the game, the Washington club hoisted the 1925 American League pennant with a ceremony in which Postmaster General New took part.

star players, but of the lot Shulte is the most colorful and sensational. Henry J. Killilea, local attorney, and former owner of the Boston Red Sox, an intimate friend of Phil Ball, was the first to tip the Browns off to Schulte.

"I have seen baseball players for more than 30 years, but I am not exaggerating one bit when I say that Shulte is the best of them," said Killilea.

"Until last summer I thought Taylor Douthit of the St. Louis Cardinals, who was loaned to Milwaukee was the most promising young outfielder I had ever seen since my brother Matt and I owned the Red Sox. But I changed my opinion when I saw Shulte."

Shulte will need a press agent upon his graduation to the big time. He is not a loquacious lad. His answers to sport writers always are laconic. But above all he has no bad habits, does not smoke or chew and will never qualify for the role of Romeo.

Thevenow, so that if it had not been for that wild throw, that eight base error, the Giants would not have scored and the Cardinals would have had a chance to bag the game and remain only two and a half games out of first place.

McGraw's men overcame a three run lead earlier in the game to tie the score. Southworth walked in the second inning, went to third on Bell's single to left and scored while the Giants were executing a double play on O'Farrell's grounder to Frisch.

Bottomley Triples.

Then in the fourth Bottomley opened a bombardment with a triple down the left field line, great base running and a bit of luck enabling Jim to reach third. Southworth then tried to draw his bat back from a bad pitch, but the ball hit the wood and popped down the third base line, past Lindstrom and was good for a double, scoring Bottomley. Southworth advanced on O'Farrell's infield out and scored when Thevenow singled to center.

Heine's Single Scores Run.

Two were down in the fifth when the Giants started their drive to victory. Florence drew the first pass off Rhem and stopped at second on Fitzsimmons' single to center. Heine Mueller then cracked a single to center, scoring Florence. Frisch drew another pass, filling the bases but Young ended the rally with a grounder to Thevenow on which Frisch was forced at second.

Young bunted in front of the plate to start the eighth inning and beat it out and when O'Farrell threw low past first, Young took an extra base. He advanced on Lindstrom's sacrifice fly to Southworth and scored on Meusel's single to center. Kelly then came through with his third double, a blow to right center which scored Meusel with the tying run.

games in which he was hit safely. Lester also singled in the sixth, giving him a .500 percentage for the day.

About 12,000 persons attended.

The fans are waking up to the fact that there are some brilliant stars on the Cardinal roster. Southworth, Bell, Bottomley and Thevenow were applauded when they went to bat and O'Farrell's great throwing was cheered.

Hornsby went hitless in five times at bat, failing to get the ball out of the infield. He is handicapped during convalescence from an operation for a carbuncle and the crop of boils is not yet out of the way. However, he continues to play a fine game in the field.

Heine Mueller got one hit in six times at bat. He fouled to Bell, hit into a double play, singled to center, forced a man at second, grounded to Thevenor and grounded to Hornsby.

Terry batted for Fitzsimmons, the starting pitcher, in the seventh inning and singled to left. In the first game of the series, Terry batted for Catcher Florence and hit a home run. Fair pinch hitting. However, Kelly is a better first baseman, which accounts for Terry's riding the bench.

Two of the three Cardinal errors were costly. The third was a fumble by Thevenow, which was nullified by a double play in which Tommy was middle man.

Umpire Sweeney had a bad day behind the plate. Three low balls bounced against his shins and ankles.

John Scott finished the game and was credited with the victory. He allowed only one hit in five innings, and that was a scratch hit to deep short.

Haines to Hurl Last Home Game

Jess Haines probably will pitch against the Giants this afternoon in the final game of the series, with Kent Greenfield due for McGraw's team. The game will close the stand at home, the Cardinals departing tonight for Philadelphia, via Massillon, O., when an exhibition game will be played tomorrow afternoon.

It was an unfortunate game to lose yesterday, as the defeat overshadowed a brilliant performance in the field and some fine base running by the Cardinals.

Bottomley showed speed and daring in turning his hit into a three-bagger in the fourth inning.

In the ninth, Frisch walked with two down and tried to steal. He had a big lead and the pitch to Young was a slow ball. However, O'Farrell's throw was perfect and Thevenow, after taking the toss, did not have to move the ball to lay it on Frisch, catapulting into the sack.

In the tenth, Young led off with a single, an infield hit which Rhem deflected to Hornsby. Lindstrom sacrificed him to second, but Young strayed off the bag and was out on Rhem's perfect throw to Thevenow, who again did not have to move the ball to touch the runner sliding back to the base.

Yankees Defeat White Sox, 7-4; Increase Lead

Victory Is Fourth in Row for New York—Homer for Koenig.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The New York Yankees made it four straight from the Chicago White Sox by winning today's game, 7 to 4. This was the first series the New Yorkers have taken since their present home stand against the western clubs. Koenig's circuit drive with one on in the seventh sewed up the game for the Hugmen.

The Yankees increased their lead to nine games as a result of the Athletics' victory over Cleveland.

The Quincy club, which has decided to go to Philadelphia for the national regatta Aug. 5, 6 and 7, placed in every event of the day.

The St. Louis Rowing Club crew took the opening event, the barge race. The South Side Boat Club of Quincy finished second, with the Central Rowing Club crew third. The time was four minutes and one second.

The single skull honors went to A. Warga of the Lincoln Park Club. He finished ahead of W. Slack of the Baden Rowing Club and G. Bussong of the South Side Club of Quincy, respectively, in five minutes and 58 seconds.

There was a thrill for the crowd of some 5000 in the third contest, which the Lincoln Park No. 1 won after a hard battle in the junior four shell.

The events were scored as follows:

Junior Barge—St. Louis Rowing Club, 25; South Side, 15; Central, 5.

TWO RECORDS FALL IN SWIMMING MEET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 24. — Two world swimming records were broken at a meet here today by contestants of the Illinois A. C. in a 100-foot tank. Arne Borg of Sweden shattered his own mark for the 400-yard free style by covering the distance in 4:31 against his old time of 4:34 3-5, set at Detroit in March, 1925.

Robert D. Skelton bettered his own record for the 400-yard breast stroke with a time of 5:48 4-5, against his former mark of 5:55.

Johnny Weismuller, also of the Illinois A. C., swimming 100 yards free style against time, was clocked in :52 1-5, which was within one-fifth of a second of his own American record established at Seattle, in August, 1925.

After Defeating White in Singles, He Tosses Off Service Game When Losing Doubles.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLINE, Mass., July 24.—William T. Tilden II., king of American tennis, scaled the heights of victory and plumbed the depths of defeat in the brief span of two hours on the Longwood Cricket club grass courts today. He defeated Lewis N. White, of Austin, Texas, 6:3; 6-4; 6-3, in the Thirty-fourth annual Longwood bowl singles. White took revenge in the finals of the men's doubles. Paired with Louis Thalheimer, with whom he holds the National clay courts doubles title, the unhurried Texan was largely instrumental in sending Tilden and his youthful partner, A. L. (Sandy) Weiner, down in a stinging straight-set defeat 7-5; 6-0; 6-2.

The singles match showed Tilden at his best, but the doubles saw him out-generalled and literally outgamed. In the singles he broke his opponent's service once in the first set, again in the second and twice in the third. In the doubles White was invincible on service, was the deciding factor in taking two games of Tilden's delivery and failed to show any signs of surprise when the champion deliberately threw his last service game for a love set.

White, although hopelessly outclassed in his dual match, fought every step of the way, while Tilden, decisively on the wrong end in the doubles, gave more an exhibition of temperament that bordered on peevishness as White and Thalheimer played through his partner to win.

Twenty-five earned points to 18, 23 placements to 13, and a dozen fewer errors told the story of Tilden's dual triumph. Although the lanky Philadelphian's bullet-like serve was not in evidence to any extent, the peculiar twisting hop on his second delivery resulted in more than a score of nets and outs on service on the part of his Southern opponent.

A heavy rainfall early in the day left the footing on the grandstand courts a bit uncertain and White had difficulty in keeping his feet in the first set. Tilden abandoned his shoes in the middle of the second set and played the rest of the encounter with his feet encased in two pairs of heavy sox.

Three other titles were decided in today's finals. Miss Elizabeth Ryan, of Santa Monica, Cal., considered second only to Helen Wills among the nation's women players, defeated Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., 6—0, 2—6, 6—3, in the women's invitation final.

John Doeg, also of Santa Monica, took the state junior singles title from Berkley Bell, of Austin, Tex., in a gruelling encounter that ran 6—4, 3—6, 6—1, 1—3, 9—7, while Malcolm T. Hill and Henry L. Johnson Jr., of Waban, kept the state junior doubles title at home by drawning Bell and 14-year-old Warren Coen of Kansas City, 6—4, 6—2, 6—8, 6—2, in the last match of the day.

WRAY'S COLUMN

The "Bills" Are Coming.

BIG BILL TILDEN, victor in the Longwood Tennis singles, yesterday, gave evidence of a quick return to the form which for years has made him invincible—whenever he saw fit to be so.

William received sundry slams that well-nigh dismounted him from his pedestal, during the winter and spring.

The world cried "thumbs down" on William, forgetful that Big Bill has a habit of relaxing when nothing is at stake; and that his mind was bent on his career as an actor, not as a tennis player, at that time.

Now, with the big stuff at hand, William is buckling down to his task of retaining his supremacy. Of course, Big Bill does not capitalize his reputation; but it is highly probable that the movies and the spoken drama would not be so financially keen for Bill, if it were not for his position at the head of tennis.

Therefore, late this month, look for Big Bill to be himself. That means look for France, or whatever other challenger bobs up to finish a strong second in the Davis cup series.

Alone Against the World.

FOR, Little Bill, as well as Big Bill, is coming strong, out on the Coast. Here is one player who has no worries as to capitalizing his stuff. Like Bobby Jones he neither writes nor submits to $10,000 a year interviews. He conscientiously is an amateur as well as a great tennis player.

And when Little Bill and Big Bill are RIGHT, there is nothing more to be said. The enemy will be lucky to take one match, either singles or doubles, if this pair alone go to the first line defenses.

If, to salve some of the second-string members of the Davis cup squad, other players than the Bills are introduced into the line-up, France or Australia, whichever wins the interzone final, may take one match.

We pin our faith to the two Bills. No other country has developed any men in their class, as yet.

Scene Shifting Westward.

DOLP of Portland (Ore.) and Stein of Seattle (Wash.) played in the W. G. A. final at White Bear Lake links yesterday. Another jab into the Athletic vitals of Chicago, which must stand by and view far-west golf stars carry off a middle-west title.

The far-west considering its population, is playing the most prominent part in the nation's athletic affairs. This goes for rowing, tennis, athletics and perhaps football and golf.

Indicating that they have something besides climate and oranges on the West Coast.

Why, Harry!

HARRY DEMPSEY is sore. You don't know Harry? Well that's pa's name for William Harrison "Jack" Dempsey, champion fighter of the world.

Harry is not sore at his own name, but at the name of one Clements, who is blocking Tex Rickard's plans to give him a title fight with Gene Tunney.

Dempsey has himself to blame for the complication. Jack Kearns, his manager, would not have gotten Jack or Harry into a corner out of which nobody could move without a lawsuit.

Dempsey went around signing contracts with persons who seemingly were merely using him. They could not handle the contract themselves, so peddled it to a third party, Clements, who himself has not shown any signs of producing the half million dollars cash needed to start the wheels of progress moving.

As a result of his haste and his bad judgment in trying to act without an experienced advisor, the champion finds himself so placed that his title fight is again in doubt.

Sad was the day when Dempsey decided to cut loose from his managerial mooring. It cost him time, money and a perfectly good disposition.

Today a title fight next September hardly seems an even money probability.

BECAUSE of a decision over Ace Hutson, Tommy Cello's friends are talking of him in championship terms.

It appears somebody is stringing Cello. The chances are that Tommy will become as familiar with the rosin as most cellos are.

The Great Uprising.

THE indignant manager and baseball club owner are still in the ascendant. Johnny Morrison is the latest player to feel the managerial swat. Johnny was sick and decided that he was of no present use to the Pirates and went home on the A. W. O. L. plan.

Just then Manager McKechnie broadcasted what he thought about it and how expensive it was going to be to Morrison.

The plan to restore the arrogant baseball player to his proper sphere as a chattel is proceeding with every indication of malice prepense.

Hard Picking.

ST. LOUIS is making a last effort to get into the band wagon with a professional football team, in the Red Grange League.

Professional football in this vicinity has been tried. One trial does not prove a case. But it did prove several things, to-wit:

That St. Louis is not foamed up about the matter to start with.

That the weather conditions are too uncertain to make regularity of play certain.

That the overhead is greater than a reasonable expectation of attendance justifies.

That it is in conflict with soccer football, which has a fair following.

About the Overhead.

THE best attendance at a game here played during the Ollie Kraehe regime was about 3800, paid at a dollar the head. The receipts were not sufficient to football the bills on that occasion and Kraehe lost $300 on the game!

That means the average overhead per team per game, including guarantees, even with the modest conditions under which Kraehe operated, were $4000 or over. Under Red Grange League conditions they would be $5000 and up.

Add to this—

10 per cent, rain insurance.
Park rental.
Transportation.
Hotel.
Employer's liability insurance.

Then figure out a profit for St. Louis. It's a hardy optimism that can see one in this vicinity.

Red Grange himself went over here for a small margin, in a single game. But it seems unlikely that a St. Louis football club, paying $65,000 in salaries for 16 games, could go over the top, when a baseball club, with a salary list of $125,000 has to fight to make money playing 154 games.

Frank Dolp, of Portland, Wins Western Title

Oregon Golfer Defeats Stein of Seattle, 6 and 5, in Final Round.

By the Associated Press.

WHITE BEAR LAKE, Minn., July 24.—Frank Dolp of Portland, Ore., won the amateur golf championship here today when he defeated B. E. Stein, Seattle, 6 and 5. The match ended on the thirty-first hole when they halved it in par five.

Making the afternoon turn with Dolp seven up, Stein took the twenty-eighth with a par four while Dolp needed a five and the next hole went to Stein when Dolp needed an extra stroke.

The Portland star made it six up again when he took the thirtieth, Stein taking five strokes, one over par.

21-Years-Old, An Ex-Caddie

The new Western amateur champion, who will be 22 years old in two weeks, and stands six feet tall, got his customary successful golfer's start as a caddie. He now is an insurance salesman.

He first came into prominence out in the Pacific Northwest five years ago when he won the Portland City championship. That year he participated in the Washington, D. C., and Dayton, Ohio, public links tournament with fair success.

Joining the Alderwood Country club, of Portland, he won the Oregon state amateur championship in 1925 and 1926. He holds his own course record, as well as the record of five other Portland courses.

Brown Defeats Howard Kinsey In Exhibition

Local Player Is Winner Over San Franciscan in Straight Sets, 8-6, 6-4.

By Davison Obear

Wray Brown, local tennis star, defeated Howard Kinsey, of San Francisco, No. 6 in the national ranking list, in an exhibition match on the courts of the St. Louis Country Club yesterday afternoon. Two sets were played, Brown winning, 8—6 and 6—4. Kinsey is on his way home after a three months' tour of Europe and consented to play Brown in singles and in several doubles matches later in the day.

Kinsey had not played tennis since leaving England and was not at the top of his game. He seemed bothered by the high bounce of the balls in the singles exhibition. With the exception of several games in the opening set, Brown played a consistent game, keeping ahead of the Californian during most of the match.

Brown Never Behind.

In the first set Brown ran up a lead of 5 to 2 in games before Kinsey became accustomed to court conditions. Kinsey then began a steady attack, changing the pace occasionally and winning three straight games, making the score to 5-all. Brown was not as steady at this stage of the contest, but finally took the lead at 6 to 5 and 7 to 6, ultimately winning the set, 8—6.

There were a number of close points in the second set. After the score reached 4-all, Brown won two straight games and the set, 6—4. The St. Louis player sent over a number of high bounding shots, somewhat similar to those used by Kinsey at different stages of the exhibition. Brown's overhead strokes were working well in the last two games. Kinsey drove out of court by inches a number of times in the second set, which aided Brown somewhat.

Kinsey had the advantage over Brown in short cross-court shots to Brown's backhand. The Californian also outmaneuvered Brown when he went to the net. The St. Louisan made the mistake of trying too much net play, especially in the opening set. During the past season Brown has not had much competition and yesterday's opportunity was of great benefit to him, particularly on account of Kinsey's unusual style of play.

Three Doubles Contests.

Following the singles match, three sets of doubles were played. In the first contest Brown and Kinsey paired to defeat Joseph Werner, 1921 Princeton captain, and Ethan Shepley, former Yale player. The score of this exhibition was 6—2.

Brown and Werner then took on Kinsey and Shepley for two sets. Despite the warm weather, this proved to be an interesting exhibition. There were a number of interesting rallies, especially between Brown and Kinsey. Considering their lack of play this season, Werner and Shepley gave a good account of themselves in the two sets. Brown and Werner won both sets, the score being 7—5, 6—4.

Kinsey will depart for California tomorrow morning. He is visiting relatives here and this afternoon will attend the baseball game between the Cardinals and the New York Giants. Kinsey will not compete in the big eastern tennis events and the national championships this year, he announced yesterday. He gave pressure of business as the reason.

CIVILIANS BEAT POLICE IN REVOLVER CONTEST

In the second of the matches between the St. Louis Police Department and the civilian members of the St. Louis Police Revolver Club, the Revolver Club defeated the police team by 51 points.

The shooting was over the Eighth District 20-yard range at the standard American target, 20 shots per man, 13 men on each team.

L. S. Beecher was high man of the St. Louis Police Revolver Club, shooting 174 points, and Officer Frank Evans of the Police Department again led the department, shooting 169 points out of a possible 200.

Wins on Foul.

TOLEDO, O., July 24.—Tiger Joe Herman, Cleveland, won on a foul from Homer Le Blanc, Detroit, here last night, the low blow coming in the tenth round after Herman had outpointed Le Blanc in the first nine rounds. Chief John Metoquah, Toledo, shaded Tom Sayers, Detroit, in 10 rounds, and George Sparks of Terre Haute outpointed Mike Moran of Pittsburg in a third 10-rounder.

Tunney Had Better Be Ready I'm Fit for Battle—Dempsey

Gene's Suggestion That Champion Has Case of "Nerves" Arouses Jack — Says He Will Not Fight for Clements.

By the Associated Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., July 24.—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, today issued warning to B. C. Clements, Chicago promoter, that he would not fight for him "if he had $25,000,000," and in the next breath, the champion issued another warning to Gene Tunney, prospective opponent, that he had "better get ready right now, because I'm all set."

"Gene Tunney had better get ready mighty soon, for I am feeling wonderful—better than when I fought Firpo, and what's more, I'm in splendid condition," Dempsey said tonight in answer to a statement given out by his prospective opponent at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., to the effect the champion's "nerves," developed recently, would prove his Waterloo.

Resting in his suite at the Broadmoor Hotel, with Estelle Taylor, his screen star wife, at his side, Dempsey chuckled at the idea of nerves, and said: "Say, have I acted like a grouch out here? Believe me, I feel like a kid, and that's wonderful."

The heavyweight monarch added:

"I never hold an opponent cheaply, and for that reason I have trained faithfully for the bout with Tunney, so faithfully, in fact, that I could go into the ring with any man living, within three weeks, and be ready for the fight of my life. I'm all set.

"You know it's a matter of pride with me to get back into the ring and defend my title. I want to fight and it doesn't matter who is in the other corner. Fans here will admit I'm in wonderful condition, and it is easy to see there is the same power behind my punches and no slowing up in my footwork."

Will Not Work for Clements.

"This man has no contract," said Dempsey, attacking Clements' action in attempting to halt fight operations already set in motion by Tex Rickard. "It is true a $10 bill figured in a supplementary agreement but this was invalidated when the Fitzsimmons contract became void upon the nonpayment of funds.

"If Clements has a contract, I don't know where he got it. I do know this: I wouldn't fight for the man under any circumstances. Why, I fooled around with those fellows for eight months without anything happening. Then Rickard came through and Fitzsimmons, like the gentleman he is, got out of the way. And now comes Clements trying to get some money out of it. The whole thing makes me sore."

Suggests Political Freeze Out.

That politics is chiefly responsible for the present situation is the belief of the champion, following a long distance telephone conversation last night with Gene Normile, his personal representative.

"Chicago seems to be a unit against Rickard," Dempsey said, "and he is having difficulty getting the necessary papers with a clique favoring a 'home town' promoter."

The heavyweight king also said he had heard from his attorney and that he had been assured Clements held nothing in the form of a contract. When told that Normile planned to hold Clements to his word and force him to pay $300,000 by Aug. 5 to bind whatever agreement he has, else declare the agreement void, Dempsey exclaimed: "I wouldn't fight for Clements if he had $25,000,000, although it doesn't matter to me whether Wills or Tunney climbs into the ring."

Clements Prepares to Welcome Paddy Mullins.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 24.—The mathematical genius of Tex Rickard, New York promoter, ordinarily exercised in such simple arithmetic as computation of gate receipts, guarantees and percentages, was focused today upon the geometrical aspects of a Dempsey-Tunney-Wills heavyweight triangle.

And while Mr. Rickard agitated his slate pencil into a white heat without arriving at a solution, B. C. Clements, his rival promoter and himself a mathematician of parts, suppressed what amounted to a sly snicker and remarked that he had been trying to tell Mr. Rickard all week that it couldn't be done.

So saying, Clements set the table for an extra guest, expecting the arrival from New York tomorrow morning of Paddy Mullins, the manager of Harry Wills, Negro heavyweight. Was he chagrined by the statement of Dempsey, emanating from the champion's training camp at Colorado Springs, that the heavyweight champion "wouldn't fight for Clements now if he had 25 million dollars?"

Will Enjoin Dempsey.

Meanwhile Mullins will be asked, upon his arrival here, to register Wills with the lately created Illinois Boxing Commission, to have the Negro licensed as a boxer, and to otherwise make ready for a projected Dempsey-Wills combat here at Soldiers' Field between Sept. 16 and 20.

Dempsey has been notified, said Clements, to take similar steps and to appear here for training not later than Aug. 6.

If he fails to comply, the promoter declared, coercion will be brought to bear in the nature of court action preventing the champion from appearing under the Rickard banner until he has fulfilled his obligations to Clements and the Chicago Coliseum Club, which he represented

CAPTAIN HAL TIES RECORD AT HOMEWOOD

Star of Fairmount Shoulders 130 Pounds and Wins by Five Lengths in Six-Furlong Event.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOMEWOOD, Ill., July 24.—W. R. Coe's Black Maria, which was shipped here especially to start in the initial running of the $10,000 Illinois Oaks, which featured the most attractive offering of the entire Washington Park season, scored a hollow victory in the stake this afternoon, winning in a canter by six lengths. In Bounds was second and Spanish Star, the only other starter a distant last.

The winner went the one mile and a furlong over a good track in 1:54, and earned for her owner $8820. The small field detracted somewhat from the interest in the stake. The winner paid the small price of ten cents on the dollar.

Black Maria broke forwardly and, under restraint for the entire trip, won very easily without being extended at any stage. In Bounds, easily beat Spanish Star for the place.

The crowd was one of the largest of the season.

Golden Top, confidently backed into favoritism to win the second race failed dismally and was beaten off all the way. The race went to H. G. Bedwell's Foretop, which forced the pace and after racing Rushed into the ground drew out to win with ease. Jessie Belle was an easy second while Curieda did just manage to beat Betty Ball for the show.

A. A. Kaiser's sturdy campaigner Captain Hal registered his sixth consecutive victory whe he breezed home the easiest kind of a winner in the third race an allowance affair at six furlongs and incidentally equalled the track record.

The mark was 1:12 3-5, set recently by Senator Norris. Child's Play was second and Bulletin third. The race attracted almost as much interest as the afternoon's stellar event, the Illinois Oaks, due to the presence of Captain Hal in the list of starters. The colt shouldered 130 pounds, and was favored at about 1 to 2 in the betting. Bulletin led him by a short margin to the furlong pole where he moved up, and passing the Bedwell colt drew out to win with ridiculous ease. Child's Play also passed Bulletin in the stretch and beat him for second money. Today's race marked the second winning effort of Captain Hal at this track. Prior to coming here he had scored four straights at Fairmount.

A thrilling finish attended the running of the fourth race, when the first four horses came to the judges noses and heads apart. Thanks to Goldie Johnson's sterling ride, Arabian was awarded the decision with Ocean Current getting the place and Hopeless third money. The winner raced in greatly improved form. He trailed to the stretch where he moved up and with a rush just managed to snatch victory at the end. Ocean Current and Hopeless both stood up well under three winners' onslaught. Fabian, the favorite, was never in the hunt.

CARL MAYS.

With -- Rod and Reel — By — ALEC MERMOD

THE modern fly rod is a delicate instrument, and if you would have it last as it should, some care must be exercised, not only in handling while fishing, but before you lay it aside after returning from your trip.

Many anglers make a mistake by using one tip point continuously. Where convenient, during the day, the tip should be changed, but never use the same tip point two consecutive days. By adhering to this suggestion you will eliminate to a great extent the permanent "set" or bend in the tip point.

While fishing, if you will, once in a while draw the tip through the water, making the strain just opposite to that used when casting, your rod will remain straight for some time.

It is not the taking of a fish once in a while that causes a rod to "set"; it's the constant strain of casting out the line and the harder strain caused by picking up the line for the back swing.

Using Spinner a Mistake.

Another mistake often made is the use of a large spinner, and some even use a piece of pork rind. Still another serious error is to start the back cast before the fly has been brought slowly to the surface.

After a tip joint is once set it is impossible to straighten it so that it will "stay put."

The only way to do is to reverse the guides.

I had two friends in Colorado who were expert trout fishermen and who handled their rods equally well when fishing, but "George" took no care of his rod and bought a new one each year.

"John" took care of his rod (it was he who gave me the idea of drawing the rod through the water), and only bought two in seven years.

Reversed the Guides.

At the end of each season John would go over his rod very carefully, reversing and replacing the guides, rewrapping if the threads showed any sign of wear; every other year the rod would be varnished.

George had an idea that if he hung up the tip joint with a 10-pound weight attached he could remove the set, but this scheme didn't work, for after being hung up for six months the set would appear after an hour's casting.

Ferrules should be kept clean.

In putting the rod together and taking apart do not twist the joints. This tends to break down the fiber and weaken the rod.

If you have a tight joint, heat the ferrule slightly. This very often will answer the purpose.

Two Easy Methods.

Here's two easy methods: If you are alone and find it impossible to take the rod apart in the ordinary way, do this:

Place the rod behind you, holding it just above your knees when in a stooping position, grasp the rod firmly with a hand on each piece close to the joint, back of hands to the front. Then spread legs slowly. In this manner you will be able to exert a great deal more power than when going about it in the ordinary way, besides the pull will be perfectly straight.

If you have someone with you, let each one grasp the rod—one hand on each joint, just as he would if alone. In this way the strength of two men is exerted in an even, straight pull.

Try this next time your rod sticks and see how easy it is.

In former years a wooden velvet form was furnished with each fly rod, with a slot for each joint, but unless this wood was thoroughly seasoned it would twist and warp, and the joints, of course, would be bent accordingly. Many a good rod was thus ruined.

Better Equipped Now.

At the present time only the very cheap rods are put up in this manner.

Good rods come with a light cloth cover with a compartment for each joint and either an aluminum or bamboo tube for the outer cover, or else with the cloth cover with a bamboo tube for the top joints only.

It is not a good plan to keep the rod in this tube, except when carrying to and from your fishing waters, for this container is practically air tight and the wood will sweat.

At the end of the season, when you lay aside your rod, do not place it where it will be exposed to any artificial heat.

A party headed by Henry Strobl and Carl Herrich spent July 4 and 5 at St. Clair, and considering the fact that only one member of the party posed as a real fisherman, they had a very good catch.

Two small-mouth bass were taken weighing 2¾ pounds and 3½ pounds.

But the best catch of all was a 20-pound turtle, taken by Christ Schumacher.

COUNTY NET TOURNEY ENTRIES CLOSE AUG. 5

Entries for the St. Louis County tennis championship will close Aug. 5, according to announcement last night by Andrew B. Lynn of the Kirkwood Country Club, where matches will be held. The tournament will open Aug. 7, the men's singles being the first event on the program. Play in the men's doubles will follow.

The county tournament attracts a large entry from Webster Groves, Ferguson, Maplewood, University City, Clayton and Kirkwood. The courts are open to tennis players residing anywhere in St. Louis. Players may enter through Andrew Lynn, 217 Selma avenue, Webster Groves, Mo.

Mays' Come-back Keeping Reds in Pennant Battle

Submarine Right-Hander Was Counted Out After Showing in 1925.

By Herman Weeke.

"The man who came back." That is the title that belongs to Carl Mays, the submarine right-hander with the Cincinnati Reds. A year ago, Carl Mays was through. He was bothered with a sore pitching arm and it was doubtful whether he would be able to twirl again. It looked like the end of a brilliant career.

At least everyone, except Mays himself, figured he was through. And it was logical to figure that way. Carl Mays in 1925 pitched but 52 innings. He hurled but three complete contests. His record for the year was three victories against five defeats. Mays' arm went wrong early in the campaign. He tried several times to "come back," but his efforts proved "flops."

Then came the 1926 training trip. Carl Mays was one of those to go South with Jack Hendricks. However, nothing sensational was expected from the right-hander. But Carl Mays fooled them all. Right now he is one of the leading twirlers on the Cincinnati roster. He has won 11 games and lost 8. What's more, he has already twirled 13 complete contests, against the three he registered a year ago.

Which seems to indicate that he has turned a complete "come-back" as a major league pitcher.

Off to Bad Start.

Things did not start any too well for Mays in the 1926 campaign. To start with, he was belted off the hill in four rounds by the Cubs. Then he won a well-pitched game from the Pirates. After that, matters went from bad to worse. In four straight outs, May was belted hard. He worked in 21 rounds and in that time was found for 19 runs and 34 hits. Two of these four contests he lost. That did not make it appear as if he would be successful in his "come back."

And then things began to change. Since those four terrible outs, Mays has won 10 games, while losing but five, a winning percentage of .667, one far above the pace which the Reds are traveling at the present time. The submarine righthander's winning percentage for the season is .579.

Which is a pretty good mark for a twirler who a year ago was supposed to be through.

Fine Record Since June 20.

Mays has done some real pitching since June 20. He has won six games and lost only two, during a stretch in which the Cincinnati club has been hard pressed in the National League flag race. In this time, Mays has been one of the aces of the staff. The defeats he suffered were at the hands of the Cubs and the Giants. In this time he has beaten the Pirates twice, and the Cubs, Cardinals, Phillies and Robins each once. In three of his winning efforts he permitted but one run, while against the Cardinals July 6, he gave but two runs and five safeties to win over Grover Alexander in 11 rounds.

For the season, Mays has pitched 160 2-3 innings. In that time, the opposition has put over 44 runs, an average of 4.14 a game. This includes unearned as well as earned markers. The hits off the submarine star total 179, indicating that he has been rather easy to hit, but pretty hard to score upon. Mays has struck out 31 batters and walked 33.

Mays has had quite a colorful career in major league baseball. It was this pitcher who some years ago, while a member of the Boston Americans, caused the split in the ranks of the American League. Then he was sold to the New York Yankees and after twirling some good ball for several years, was waived out of the Johnson circuit and taken on by the Reds. Mays is 33 years of age and has been in the majors since 1915.

20 ENTRIES RECEIVED FOR THREE-MILE SWIM

The St. Louis Athletic Club's fifth annual Meramec River swims are making great headway, both in the number of entries and trophies.

Over 20 entries for the men's race have been received to date and the prospects are favorable for the list to exceed last year's record of 42. A number of the notables of previous races have already entered and many newcomers are among them.

The women's list is increasing daily and it is hoped to exceed last year's list of 20.

Both races will be handicap affairs, as in the previous years.

The men's race will be held Sunday afternoon, Aug. 8. It will be a three-mile handicap, starting from Millsmon's Landing, south of the railroad bridge at Valley Park, and finishing at Stites Landing, Meramec Highlands.

The women's one-mile handicap will start from the lower landing of Pharaoh Valley and finish at Kiefer's Beach, Meramec Highlands.

All participants must make application for registration cards in the Western A. A. U., which may be obtained from Robert J. Probst, 3301 Washington boulevard. Swimmers desiring to enter the races should communicate with Al Winter or Dr. Frank Demko, 1321 South Broadway. Entries can be had at all Meramec River landings.

MISS COLLETT WILL PLAY IN TOURNAMENT

By the Associated Press.

EASTERN POINT, Conn., July 24.—Miss Glenna Collett, national open women's champion, will play in the eighth annual women's invitation golf tournament at Shenecossett next week and try for a second leg in the Griswold trophy. Last year she defeated Mrs. H. D. Sterrett of Hutchinson, Kan., in the final round.

The tournament opening Monday will last until Friday. Already there are 225 entries, the longest list thus far. The Griswold trophy must be won three times by one player, not necessarily in succession, to retain ownership.

Among the other entrants are Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Merion and Mrs. R. H. Barlow of Philadelphia.

PIRATES WILL MAKE NO ATTEMPT TO PLAY SUNDAY TILTS AT HOME

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 24. — The Pittsburg Nationals will make no effort to play Sunday games at home until such contests are legalized or until an overwhelming sentiment favors them, Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss said today in commenting on a movement to inaugurate major league baseball games on Sunday at Philadelphia.

Bike Eliminations Here Next Sunday

Qualifiers Will Be Eligible to Compete in National Championship Event.

By Wm. M. Martin.

The Missouri District eliminations for the National bicycle championship will be run at the Fairground Park next Sunday.

All Missouri and Southern Illinois riders are eligible to compete in these races, which means that an exceptionally large entry will face the starter. As most of these entries are local, the A. B. L. authorities hold the city championships last Sunday with the six largest point gainers qualifying for the state eliminations next Sunday.

A senior and junior representative will qualify and since the inception of the American Bicycle League it has been a local lad to qualify for this honor in each class. The same is expected this year with John Boulicault as the most likely candidate for the senior honors, while Lawrence Murphy and Joe Becker of the Century Cycle Club probably will fight it out for the junior event, with the former the favorite.

Kansas City has eight entries, four senior and four junior, and Belleville has three seniors and three juniors.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Another new name was added yesterday to the roster of the Washington Americans. The latest recruit in President Clark Griffith's campaign to build up another winning machine for 1927 is George Murray, right-hander of the Mobile Club of the Southern Association. It was understood $8000 was paid for the pitcher.

TOWER CAMP, CENTURY WIN IN COMMERCIAL

Wolff of Independents Hurls No-Hit, No-Run Game in Junior Evangelical Circuit; More-Jones Swamped, 30 to 5.

The Home Service took two games yesterday in the Employed Boys' League elimination to win the championship of the Concordia group and qualify for the final next Saturday. The Maplewood Browns won the other semifinal and the two teams will meet for the title.

Home Service defeated Forbes, 4 to 1, in the opener and in the second contest beat the Emmets, 6 to 5, while the Maplewood squad put the Geltz nine out of the running.

Tower Camp, leading the Commercial League by a small margin, defeated Gold Dust 11 to 1 and the second place Century nine beat Pilgrim A. A. by the bigger score of 19 to 2.

Good Game on Tap.

The schedule brings the Towers and Centurys together next Saturday and followers of the pacemakers look forward to one of the best games of the season.

Sunlight made a three-ring circus of its game with More-Jones and won, 30 to 5, scoring 29 hits. Jim Flanagan gave his batting average a nice boost by connecting seven times in seven tries, two of them homers and one a triple.

Wolff of the Independents in the Junior Evangelical League hurled a no-hit, no-run game to beat the Zions' 1 to 0, in five innings. He struck out 10 men.

NINE HOLES HALF COMPLETED IN OSAGE COUNTRY CLUB COURSE

The first nine holes of the Osage Country Club 18-hole tournament golf course are 50 per cent complete with much other work done on fairways, all accomplished within the past three months, which establishes a record in the rapid construction work on a golf course, according to Nelson Cunliff, president.

The rapid progress is due to extra effort being put forth looking toward the finishing of the first nine holes as early as possible, and to the fact that the natural contour of the land on which it is located is ideally suited to the purpose.

The new club building, now in process of construction, is practically under roof, the entire west wing being covered and the balance ready for the roofing. It is expected that it will be finished and ready for the use of members and their guests by the second week in August.

The new swimming pool is proving popular.

English Steel Trade Virtually Dead From The Lack of Coal

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON,

LONDON, July 24.

THE NINE DAYS, as the general strike will apparently be known in English history, during which industry was completely paralyzed for the nine days by the Trades Union Congress, but English industry is now approaching a similar, though less apparent and less sensational, paralysis for lack of coal.

"Essential services" continue, and will continue. Food circulates freely; people can get to and from their work, though in great discomfort, by using the 50 per cent of normal transport still provided. Accordingly, life in London is normal, on the surface. The London season goes on as though nothing were wrong, the glories of Ascot and Wimbledon are not eclipsed.

Look beneath the surface and you find the blackest pessimism in the business community. One after another, the great textile mills, shipbuilding yards, iron and steel works, are closing down for lack of fuel. Sir William Larke, chairman of the Iron and Steel Manufacturers' Association, told me today that for all practical purposes the iron and steel trade is dead. The same will soon be true of all "heavy industry." About a quarter of a million tons of coal a week now comes through the ports, but this is all needed for the "essential" and there is none left over for private industry.

Strike Has Cost Industry A Round $1,000,000,000.

WHAT is the coal stoppage costing Great Britain? There are many answers to that question, and any answer is at best a rough estimate. Five million pounds a day at first, rising to 8,000,000 by the fifth week, and 10,000,000 today is a mean between various figures put forward. If this estimate be accurate, the coal stoppage already represents a loss of $1,000,000,000, direct and indirect. Some of this probably can be made up by increased production of goods to make up for lost time after the wheels of industry turn again, but there are lost markets, both for coal and manufactured goods, that cannot be recovered for years, if at all.

When the nine days was ended by the Trades Union Congress general council calling off the general strike on the basis of the Samuel Memorandum, which promised a compromise peace in the coal dispute, the most pessimistic observers did not think the coal stoppage could long continue. The slogan of the miners, "Not a penny off the pay; not a minute on the day," would surely collapse when the support of the whole of organized labor withdrawn coincidently with the offer of a settlement that meant, in effect, a wage cut of only about 10 per cent for the higher paid workers. This cut would deprive the men of the bonus given over 1921 wages in 1923 on account of the temporary prosperity brought to the British coal trade by the closing down of German mines when the French entered the Ruhr.

Miners Missed Chance When They Refused to Bargain.

BUT the prophets were confounded. The miners refused to budge. So did the owners. To both sides the Government's compromise formula was anathema. The men would not work longer or for less money; the owners would not consent to the Coal Commission recommendations that the industry be reorganized and those pits which cannot be made to pay be closed down. The miners missed their chance when they refused to bargain just after the strike, for Premier Baldwin was then prepared to coerce the owners through legislation. That would not be impossible in England, where Parliament can pass any law it chooses and there is no Supreme Court to upset its laws as unconstitutional.

But even Parliament cannot compel miners to dig coal if they won't go down the mines, and coal mining is the one great occupation in which strike-breaking is impossible. So, as the weeks dragged along and the grip of the stoppage on the nations' economic windpipe grew more deadly, the Cabinet brought in bills for reorganizing the coal industry, and the bill which is now being so bitterly fought by labor making it legal for miners to work eight hours a day.

The last measure, that will probably be law when this dispatch is printed, was introduced because under the present law seven hours is the maximum legal working day in the coal trade, and because the Cabinet appears convinced the eventual settlement will involve longer hours rather than less wages. It is probable that when Baldwin agreed to this course he did not realize the full implications which labor reads into the eight-hour issue. This bill has reunited the whole British labor movement, which 10 days ago was filled with internecine recriminations between moderates and extremists over the calling off of the general strike.

Labor Sees Big Menace In the Eight-Hour Day.

GOVERNMENT spokesmen in the House have been arguing that all the eight-hour bill does is to make longer hours permissible, in case the settlement takes that turn, so that no time shall be lost when the two parties to the coal dispute come together. They point out the enormous loss to the nation caused by a deadlock which must not be permitted to continue a day longer than can be helped.

Labor does not see it that way at all. Labor thinks it has found in the eight-hour bill an issue for a general election, and believes the country is so aroused that every by-election from now on will go heavily against the Tories. The one House of Commons election since the strike, at West Hammersmith, turned a Tory seat over to Labor by a handsome majority, and most labor leaders are convinced that this was the beginning of a labor tide which will compel Baldwin to appeal to the country before the end of the year, and will either put labor back into power or greatly reduce the Tory majority.

According to this view, the eight-hour bill is intended to inaugurate a general attack on short hours, won only after decades of constant struggle and agitation. If the miners are forced to work eight hours, employers in other trades will seek to put an hour on the working day. Herbert Smith, president of the Miners' Federation, is now saying that the men would prefer less wages to longer work, if they have to choose.

If this be true, it is because lower wages may easily be readjusted when the industry becomes prosperous. Experience has shown that it is far more difficult to change working hours in a great industry employing 1,000,000 men than it is to raise or lower wages.

Moscow Aid Now Seen as Political Propaganda.

HALF the unthinking Tories in England, misled by fierce newspaper propaganda, believe the prolongation of the coal stoppage is due to Moscow. How absurd this is, a few figures easily demonstrate. There are 1,000,000 miners striking; the union officials have until recently been able to ward off starvation by providing in cash or credit with local tradesmen about 10 shillings a week for each miner. On this he must support his family, if he has one. This $2.50 to the miner amounts to $2,500,000 a week.

BERLIN, July 24.

LUXURIOUS air pullmans will shortly be placed in commercial operation by the Deutsche Lufthansa of Berlin, and will be used for night flying between Berlin and Moscow. The first of these has already been completed in the factories of the Albatros-Flugzeugwerke. It is a two-motor double-deck giant of the air and has sleeping accommodations for 10 passengers. For day travel the beds can be transformed into seats.

Large windows give the passengers ample opportunity for sight seeing. In addition to the usual conveniences, the planes have hot-air heat. Two pilots will be employed and double controls will be used throughout. In emergency one motor can deliver sufficient power to avoid forced landing. The planes will also be equipped with wireless.

New Indian Race Course Has Four Separate Tracks

RANGOON, India, July 24.—Sir Harcourt Butler, Governor of Burma, recently opened the new race track here, constructed at a cost of about $1,125,000. It is said to be the finest in the East, having all modern improvements. It is the result of four years' work transforming swamp land and hillocks into tracks. The course, which is entirely surrounded with a brick wall, has four different tracks: A steeplechase track, a cold weather track, a monsoon track and a sand track.

About $8,000,000 Lost on the Wembley Exhibition

LONDON, July 24.—The loss on the Wembley exhibition for the past two years amounted to nearly $8,000,000 according to statements made when the exhibition site and buildings were sold to the Beecham trust for about $1,500,000. The cost of building the exhibition was about $15,000,000. The purchasers intend to use the stadium for sports. Other buildings will be sold.

Col. House's Book Belittles Wilson, Dr. Dumba Thinks

Count Bernstorff Opposes Former Austrian Ambassador's View and Corroborates House.

By CONSTANTINE DUMBA,
Wartime Ambassador of Austria-Hungary at Washington.

"THE INTIMATE PAPERS OF COL. HOUSE" stands out among the most interesting publications on contemporary history. House's revelations show—this is my impression—that in the years 1913 to 1916, he had a greater share in formulating the foreign policy of the United States than the President, and that he certainly played his part infinitely better than Wilson.

The President was constitutionally unable to maintain intimate or even friendly relations with Cabinet Ministers, Ambassadors and members of Congress, being cold and aloof in his manner, exclusive in his friendship. House, on the other hand, was master in remaining in close contact with all those persons, who were kept at a distance by the President.

Without House's constant advice and initiative, President Wilson seemed helpless and given to making fatal mistakes. House himself calls him "Bold in words, slow in action," a severe judgment on his chief holding the most powerful executive office in the world.

House Tactful and a Judge of Men.

IF one admits that the art of handling, winning and leading men and of making use of opportunities by determined action is an essential ingredient of statesmanship, it seems undeniable that Wilson sorely missed these qualities, while House, on the other hand, is an excellent observer and judge of men. His frequent journeys to Europe and his extensive study gave him vision and culture. Above all, he has infinite tact, patience, and an unusual gift to handle men, making use of their strong, as well as their weak points.

His excellent judgment and careful sifting of persons eligible for Cabinet positions was of inestimable value to Wilson. House never allowed himself to be guided in his choice by any other than the highest patriotic considerations. His thorough honesty and reliability soon placed him in a unique position. His personality has a particular charm. A slight and delicate looking man, with calm, refined manners, rather than outspoken, he nevertheless inspires confidence at once and puts people at their ease.

I met House repeatedly in the summers of 1914 and 1915. Concerning a conversation we had on September 5, 1914, he gleefully reported to the President: "Last night I had a conference with the Austrian Ambassador. He talked very indiscreetly and, if one will sit still, he will tell all he knows. I sat very still. . . . " (I, 323).

Fooled House With Deliberate Indiscretion.

AS a matter of fact, I had entered that conversation with the full intention of talking "indiscreetly." I never made a secret of my strong condemnation of Count Berchtold's unfortunate ultimatum to Serbia. I wanted President Wilson to know this and am gratified to see that House actually reported to the President all I wished him to hear.

As to discretion, House was a past master in this art. He showed this wonderful gift to full advantage when in spring, 1914, he embarked upon what he calls "The Great Adventure," a plan to bring about an understanding between America, Great Britain, France and Germany.

House had hardly hurried back to America when the war broke out. Both he and Wilson were in favor of the allies. House feared a complete victory of either the allies or the Central Powers. In the first case, he was afraid of Russian dictatorship over Europe, in the second instance he anticipated the overbearing triumph of German "militarism" in Europe, and the necessity for the United States to construct a powerful military machine.

Here I am reluctantly compelled to rectify Mr. Gerard's version of a cable I had sent via Berlin to Vienna, referring to a conversation with Bryan on the purport of the first Lusitania note of Wilson.

In connection with this, House cabled to Wilson from London, under date of May 24, 1915: "Gerard cables me as follows: 'Zimmermann told me yesterday that Dumba, Austrian Ambassador, had cabled him that Bryan told him that America was not in earnest about Lusitania matter.' Of course, Bryan did not say that, but I think you should know

France, Perhaps Richest Nation in Europe, Merely Dodging Taxes, Lloyd George Declares

"The Money Is There Even if Not in Treasury and It Is for French Statesmen to Devise Drastic Fiscal Reform to Rehabilitate Finances of Country"—Case of Caillaux Like That of Necker in 1785.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
War-Time Premier of Great Britain.
(Copyright, 1926.)

LONDON, July 24. (By Cable.)

THE franc, having once broken through the fence, is still at large and wilder than ever. Ministry after ministry is knocked over in efforts to lasso and recapture it. The Briand and Loucheur team was followed by Briand and Raoul Peret; then came Briand and Caillaux. That combination vanished and Herriot came back. When he was butted out of office by the runaway franc in April of last year, it stood at 92 to the pound sterling.

When he was called upon to form his second administration, it was 230. It was assumed by those who did not know Herriot that when he so dramatically turned out Caillaux's combination, he had some plan of his own for dealing with the crisis. He had none and the chamber promptly flung him into the street with merited contempt.

Poincare, Discredited Once, in Saddle Again.

AND now comes Poincare once more with a Cabinet of public safety. The wheel of fortune spins rapidly in political France. But two years ago Poincare was dismissed emphatically by the French electorate for muddling in the Ruhr, and Herriot was then the man of hope. Now Poincare is the center of French confidence and Herriot slinks away dusty and limping from an ignominous fall. Poincare's ministry may well be the last throne of French parliamentarism. The Ruhr fiasco discredited the bloc national. The proceedings of the last 12 months have brought the Cartel des Gauches into derision. France has lost confidence in its Parliament. Poincare may yet revive its prestige.

The exchanges of Europe took a grave view of the fall of Caillaux for the second time and French opinion is seriously perturbed. The crash of a Government is like an every day affair for the man in the French street. He takes less notice of it than he would of a motor accident in the Champs Elysees and much less than he would of a change of cast at the Comedie Francaise. He now barely turns his head to find out who and what has fallen. Briand's ministries seem to be afflicted by a falling sickness. They fell thrice in a few months and the president picked them up and set them going once more, after a little patching and dusting.

This time, it is grave. If Caillaux, with the aid of experts, cannot catch the franc, who can?

Parliament or a Dictatorship?

THERE is a growing conviction that parliamentary institutions stand in the way. Caillaux gave expression to that view with his customary bluntness and courage; hence the proposals for a dictatorship. They failed of acceptance for two reasons. The friends of parliamentarism, on the Left, attacked them because dictatorship is the traditional weapon of the enemies of democracy in France. On the other hand, the anti-republican Right disliked, not so much the idea of a dictatorship as the person who had nominated himself for that role—M. Caillaux. They have not forgiven him for his pacifism during the war, and never will.

So Herriot was given another chance. But he failed and Poincare is to try his hand for a second time. When he quitted the office in 1924 the franc stood at 84 to sterling. When he returned to office it was 220. This time he is fighting, not so much to stabilize the franc as to save parliamentary government in France. It has disappeared in other great Latin countries—Italy and Spain—it has been suspended in Belgium. Will M. Poincare succeed in rescuing it from discredits and defaults in republican France? That is the issue. That is why the fall of the last Briand Cabinet was viewed with alarm not only by financiers but by all liberal politicians throughout Europe. Is Poincare strong enough to deal with so tangled and disturbing a situation?

Likens Caillaux to Necker in 1785.

NOT for the first time a failure to balance the budget has brought France to the brink of revolution. Hence the extreme gravity of the present situation. At the end of the eighteenth century, autocracy was on its trial and failed. Today it is democracy that is confronted with a financial crisis. Will French republicanism succeed where the French monarchy failed? Is France going to join the list of other European countries which have resorted to a dictatorship as the solution of their troubles? Belgium is the last one to do so and it is difficult to see what is to be the alternative of France to the Necker (Jacques Necker, 1732-1804, Finance Minister to Louis XVI) of the twentieth century whom they have so summarily dismissed in Caillaux. Like Necker, Caillaux appears to have been the victim of jealousy and suspicion amongst the other ministers. As in 1785, France herself is prosperous and rich while the treasury is empty. Alas! Caillaux has not been given a chance to exercise the jugglery of Necker which enabled him to exclaim: "What a country, gentlemen, where, without new taxation and by mere imperceptible adjustments, we can sweep away the deficit which has made such a stir in Europe!"

It is not for a foreigner to tell France what she should do in the circumstances. She is one of the richest countries, if not the richest, in Europe so far as the people and her industries are concerned. The money is there, even if it is not in the French treasury and it is for French statesmen to devise some means of drastic fiscal reform whereby the finances of the country can be rehabilitated. But one French Government falls after another and no conclusion is reached. One recalls Mirabeau as saying: "Bankruptcy, hideous bankruptcy, is at your gates. It threatens to engulf you, your property and your honor—and you deliberate."

French Diligent in Tax Dodging.

SOMEONE has yet to convince the French bourgeoisie and the French peasantry that it is for their own good that France's financial position should be restored and that, if the crash comes, it may drag them down as well as the Government. At present, this talk of a capital levy and other drastic methods of raising money is too much for the thrifty Frenchman. He is determined at all costs not to part with his savings to the collector of taxes. He is and has been for some time assiduously converting his cash into something less ephemeral than paper billets. When he does not invest in dollars or sterling securities, he buys furniture, jewelry, anything rather than witness his hard-won earnings dissolving in water before his eyes.

His savings which, when Poincare was dragged out of office two years ago by the falling franc, were worth perhaps 10,000 francs, when he came back yesterday, were worth 4000. That is why he is feverishly converting his money into things of substance and the result has been, paradoxically enough, to produce something like a boom in trade at home.

We have the same spectacle in France as was witnessed in Germany during her financial debacle. But Germany had to resort to most drastic methods and suffer most terrible sacrifices, from which she has not yet recovered, before succeeding in stabilizing her mark.

France Too Busy Watching Neighbors.

FRANCE will not be able to compose her difficulties until she starts to put her own house in order with the aid of her own people. At present, her attention is fixed too assiduously upon her neighbors. She is engaged in speculation as to how much Britain will further help in stabilizing her finances and as to whether Germany will be impertinent enough to demand revision of the Dawes agreement in return for any help she may render in arresting the fall of the franc. And of course the attitude, present and problematical, of America is well in her reckonings. She is speculating as to what concessions America is prepared to make in regard to the money owed her by France and on the possibility of suspension of all her obligations in this direction until her financial wounds are healed. But on the possibility of the French nation attempting to heal these wounds by the application of direct taxation or other drastic internal measures, the French press is discreetly and entirely silent.

It is not so much at home that the decrease of the franc's worth is so evident and disastrous, although there is and has been for some time a growing disquietude on the part of the bourgeoisie and working men as they see looming ahead a still further rise in prices and its corresponding misery for the man on a small fixed salary or wage. But it is when the franc has to travel abroad; it is during its peregrinations in foreign countries that it becomes such a poor and undependable ally and support.

Value of the Franc at Home and Abroad.

THERE appeared the other day in a French paper a very interesting analysis of the value of the franc at home and abroad. For 100 francs, we are told, you can still, in France, have a very good lunch at quite an expensive restaurant; you can purchase four perfectly good chickens in the market; you can go 20 times to the cinema and can pay your fare to the seaside and back; you can buy a good pair of boots. But take your poor 100-franc note abroad with you and you are soon undeceived as to its purchasing capacity. Germany, proud and disdainful with her stabilized golden mark, will only give you two small chickens instead of four fat ones. You could certainly not purchase there a pair of boots for your 100 francs, nor could go go five times to the cinema.

The same disastrous experience would await you in Prague, where you now get for your 100 francs but 90 stabilized kronen and where half a bottle of white wine costs 48 kronen and you must pay 15 kronen for a package of cigarettes.

France is prosperous, but as long as the income tax is known there as "the booby's tax," namely, a tax that only fools consent to pay, French national finance will be bankrupt and French currency will remain in disrepute.

Will Poincare succeed in his second attempt to make his countrymen not only vote taxes but also pay them? The immediate prospect is that he will not even succeed in the first and easier stage of his task.

"The Booby's Tax"

"FRANCE is prosperous, but as long as the income tax is known there as 'the booby's tax,' namely, a tax that only fools consent to pay, French national finance will be bankrupt and French currency will be in disrepute."

Berlin to Erect New Memorial to Beethoven

BERLIN, July 24.—In commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the death of Ludwig von Beethoven, the renowned composer, a Beethoven memorial will be unveiled in Berlin March 26, 1927. It will be sponsored jointly by the city of Berlin and the German State.

This memorial will probably be erected on the Bulowplatz, in front of the Volks-Buhne. A sculptor has not yet been selected. A committee of seven city officials, the lord mayor, the painter, Baluschek, the sculptor Profgerstel, the architect, Ludwig Hoffman, the sculptor, Pro. Klimsch, the State Secretary, Schulz, the Sculptor Constantin Starck, and Prof. Dr. Watzold, will pick the artist.

The artists who will be considered by this committee are Barlach, Belling, Breuer, Ledrer, Manzel, Placze and Scharff. These artists must submit models before Oct. 15.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Wants Organization List.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WE regret print forbids use of the several expressive words we know and could use in answer to John Adams, secretary of the American Union Against Treason, to say we have heard of nothing so detestable and so un-American as the task this purification union has taken upon itself to spy upon the highly respectable American citizens now on a European tour under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. By what moral right and what legal authority does John Adams, its secretary, write: "This union is sending a representative on an American steamship who will report from time to time to it (the union) on the conduct and movements of these American (St. Louis) tourists."

Do these self-appointed guardians, these watchdogs of American safety, know that our Federal Shipping Board right now is dispossessing itself and the taxpayers of the country of its shipping interests because of its inability to compete with other countries' lines granting personal freedom of taste and independence of action?

A list of names, place of assembly, pedigree of the members of this American Union Against Treason; source of funds to provide its representatives with extensive tours to spy on free-born Americans, would afford interesting reading and study. Let's know whose spirit children they are. Perhaps John Adams is only talking through his hat and imagines things. Will he publish that list? Not a chance.

JOHN C. MEYERS.

Preaching From the Pews.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is an interesting circumstance, and one that I do not remember ever having seen commented upon to any great extent, that the man in the pew preaches at the same time that the man in the pulpit is preaching.

I used to think that "Amen" from members of the congregation was simply a pious exclamation called forth by the fervid feelings of the moment, but I am now inclined to think that it is a deliberate utterance, and that these good souls intend by their "Amens" to back up the preacher and to lend to his statements such weight of authority and prestige as these seniors possess, in order to confirm his words in the minds and hearts of their younger, weaker and less enlightened brethren.

I once knew a man to stand while the first verse of "America" was being sung, sit out the singing of the second and third verses, and stand again for the last verse, beginning, "Our Fathers' God." The method of his "madness" was this: He stood while the first verse was being sung to show that he loved his country, and in regard to this sentiment was in unison with the rest of the congregation. He sat out the next two verses to indicate that he did not worship his country as he worshiped his God; and, therefore, made a difference between a patriotic hymn and one sung purely and entirely to the praise and glory of God. He stood again while the last verse was being sung because this verse is addressed directly to God.

Canton's Civic Menace General.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

SINCE the murder of Editor Mellett, Canton, O. (not China), is silent and cowering under the threats of its vice lords. To such a craven estate has degenerated our civic Americanus. If this event had taken place two generations back, the good citizens of Canton would have organized a vigilance committee, rounded up the vicious element, hung its leaders, lashed, tarred and feathered the camp followers and rode them out of town. Our crude ancestors, fortunately, were more democratic than herdocratic; they had not been educated down to a point where they found themselves unable to stand on their own legs. They had enough sense to know that crime, like interest and vermin, once it got a firm hold, was insatiable, and that extermination was the only practical remedy.

Conditions like those in Canton are a rule rather than an exception in every large city of the country. Only a pitifully small percentage of our law enforcement officials are constructively honest. Crooked politics rules, because of the apathy of an electorate which has been educated to believe that material success and the physical gratification it brings is the all important thing in life.

Is it any wonder that we are plagued with civic shirkers and cowards, with fool theories and imbecilic laws or that a large proportion of our population believes that by a fiat of pseudo-science or law we can command Nature to adapt itself to the economic and moral fallacies of a passing hour! Among the many false gods which menace genuine democracy, educational imperialism is not the least.

ABOU'BEN ADHEM.

A CONSTITUTIONAL COLOSSUS.

When a public man displays some of the elements of greatness and wins to himself widespread admiration, he owes to his followers a rather greater consistency and more acute powers of comparative analysis than Senator Borah exhibited in his recent speech at Augusta, Ga.

Surely the South had been guessed to be the last place where the Senator would say anything about nullifying the Constitution. The South holds the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution in a contempt so supreme that it has some of the aspects of grandeur. Yet the Senator from Idaho could with a perfectly straight face stand before Georgians and charge the enemies of prohibition with seeking to nullify the Constitution!

Could they, we wonder, with the same solemnity, listen to this: "Bolshevism in Russia, Fascism in Italy, military dictatorship in Poland and nullification in the United States are all whelps from the same kennel, barking at the same thing—constitutional government"? Or was there not, perhaps, the least twinkle of humor in the eyes of some of those Georgians when the great Idahoan, shaking his leonine mane, pronounced this "the most important issue that a self-governing people can ever be called upon to consider"?

What twaddle! The opponents of prohibition, so far as we know, have no intention of doing to the eighteenth amendment what the South has done to the fifteenth amendment. They propose to bring about its repeal as an unwise and hurtful public policy, and are engaged in the educational processes of convincing the people that it is a mistake. Senator Borah's resentment seems directed at their failure to say at the outset what they purpose doing, as if public sentiment possibly could be reversed upon so distant a prospect as that is. Prohibition itself did not begin with an avowed intention to put prohibition in the Constitution. It worked up to that, and antiprohibition must work up to its opposite. Meanwhile, the antiprohibitionists are not saying what they mean to do, or if some of them do say it they are not seriously taken by their associates. It will be time enough to talk of repealing the eighteenth amendment when the country is convinced of its ineffectiveness. That is going to be a very great task, one to be strengthened at last by the same disillusioned industrial support that prohibition received when the experiment was tried.

There is a further reason why the opponents of prohibition are not taking the position in the fight that Senator Borah thinks they should take. He says nothing about it, but while he was telling the nullifiers of the fifteenth amendment what poor supporters of the Constitution some of us in the North are he no doubt had it in the back of his head. The enemies of prohibition are too busy trying to keep the prohibitionists from nullifying the Bill of Rights, itself a part of the Constitution, to take much thought of how the eighteenth amendment is to be repealed. Except for their vigilance and resistance the prohibitionists would long ago have nullified the constitutional law against search and seizure without due warrant and the constitutional rights reserved to the states. They, and not the enemies of prohibition, would nullify the Constitution, and no one less than the President of the United States has several times taken occasion to warn us lest in our zeal for law we trespass too far upon the rights of the citizen and those of the State.

Senator Borah's reverence for constitutional government is too well known for him to confuse the friends of the Constitution with its enemies in the way he did in his Georgia speech. No other such grave assault upon the Constitution has ever been made or contemplated as that urged every day for the success of prohibition. Every Congress is all but forced to give up such great rights as "the right of castle" that this impracticable reform may be forced upon the people. To make prohibition effective we invade even the rights of other nations upon the seas. Senator Borah knows all this quite well. He knows that no other such lawlessness was ever turned loose upon any country. He knows that if we gave the prohibitionists all they asked there would not remain a shred of that liberty for the preservation of which the Constitution was originally amended. He himself proposed in a bill offered in the last Congress that any officer of the Government depriving us of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution be subject to fine and imprisonment. He also proposed severely to punish anyone interfering with our right to agitate change in the Constitution. That is what the antiprohibitionists are doing. They propose to take out of the Constitution an amendment which has imperiled the whole structure.

If he can straddle the gulf between his Georgia speech and that bill he is indeed the eighth wonder of the world—a veritable constitutional Colossus.

Things are warming up in the midsummer matter of the people of Missouri versus their super-government, the Antisaloon League. Put your money on the people of Missouri.

WOMEN WANT EQUAL RIGHTS.

Congress neglected the women almost as much as it neglected the farmers of Iowa, according to a Washington dispatch which reveals that hundreds of measures, affecting the rights of women, failed to pass, although most of these bills were sponsored by the National Women's Party, which is back of the demand for equal rights for women.

Among the relief sought were bills authorizing an American-born woman to bring her alien husband into this country, outside the quota. That an American-born woman, who lost her citizenship through marrying an alien, be admitted outside the quota; that an American woman shall retain her citizenship when she marries an alien, just as a man does, and that a woman who lost her citizenship through marriage before the passage of the Cable act, shall be allowed to regain it by taking the oath of allegiance, instead of by the ordinary processes of naturalization.

Most people will admit those are reasonable requests, and there can be no doubt that a number of women favor their passage. Yet Congress failed to enact them into law. There were the rush of other business and the campaign's activities as excuse for this neglect, but the real reason lies with the women. The fact is that millions of women aren't especially interested in equal rights, no matter what their leaders may say on the subject. Comparatively few of them have married aliens, and many of those who have are content to let the matter of citizenship rest with their husbands.

It is indoubtedly true that a woman should take the duties and privileges of citizenship seriously, but most of them don't. Since there are ever so many men who feel the same way about it, we need not chide the women severely, but their indifference is the real explanation of the neglect of Congress.

THE BATTLE FOR THE SENATE.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, lately defeated for renomination by Smith W. Brookhart, is well within the limits of the probabilities when he says that the November elections may wipe out the majority now held by the Republicans in the Senate.

The Senate is composed of 55 Republicans, real and nominal; 40 Democrats and one Farmer-Labor member. On paper, therefore, the Republicans have an over-all majority of 14. Actually, by virtue of the independent habits of six or seven of those labeled Republicans, the majority is often extremely tenuous or no majority at all.

One need not be the son of a prophet to see that even the paper control of the G. O. P. is in grave danger of extinction. Thirty-four Senators are to be elected in the fall. Of the seats at stake, 27 are held by Republicans and only seven by Democrats. The seven happen to belong to the solid South, where there is no chance of Republican success. On the other hand, the Democrats have a fair chance of winning at least a dozen of the 27 contests for places now filled by Republicans. Victory in nine of the 27 would give the Democrats undisputed control.

Democratic hopes are running high in Massachusetts, where National Republican Chairman Butler will be opposed by the popular and aggressive David I. Walsh, and in Arizona, Oklahoma, Kentucky and Maryland, all normally Democratic states, where the Republican incumbents were carried to victory on the Harding landslide of 1920. With Pomerene in the race against Willis, Ohio has become a doubtful State. Missouri, New York, Illinois, Idaho, Colorado, Nevada and Oregon are among the other battlegrounds.

The Democrats, in fine, have everything to gain and nothing to lose. They are certain to pick up some seats. They may fail to get complete control and yet, by whittling down the strength of the regular Republicans and thereby increasing the proportionate power of the insurgents, make the President impotent to put any partisan measure through Congress.

Any way you look at it, the prospect is highly pleasing to the Democrats—and perhaps not altogether displeasing to a growing band of Republican statesmen who are expectantly waiting for the President's foot to slip.

Who said King George wasn't a virtuoso? The chief feature of that royal garden party was the deft manner in which he handled a teacup and slender bits of buttered toast with hands encased in white gloves. That surely was a job for a King, eh wot?

WENSLEYDALE VERSUS CHEDDAR.

They say King George and Queen Mary are happily married. We doubt it. We do not understand how a person who is addicted to finely ripe Wensleydale cheese could live amicably with a person who prefers the dry and homely Cheddar. This rift in the royal lute was discovered at the Reading, Eng., agricultural show while the King and the Queen were inspecting a cheese exhibit.

When the King gazed upon his favorite Wensleydale, lusciously ripe, the imperial glands began to excrete the royal gastric juices, and he said, "That's how I like cheese. I am very fond of Wensleydale, but in any case I like it good and ripe." Whereupon the Queen forever alienated the real cheese hounds of the world by saying: "But it's full of little animals, George, and you know it's not good for you like that." And she added that her favorite cheese is Cheddar.

We pass over the fact that they are not little animals but bacteria which raise cheese from mundane levels to odoriferous Parnassian heights. That is a technical point on which Mary was promptly corrected by a bacteriologist who was present. What we deplore is Mary's idea that ripe cheese is not good. That's the kind of a remark one may expect from a Cheddar-eater.

In the name of the lovely twins, Camembert and Liederkranz, of the all-pervading Limburger and the perfumed Brie, we hereby assert that ripe and gooey cheese is good, not only for the stomach, but for the soul. We extend our sympathies to King George as a genuine and discriminating cheese-lover, and consider it not the least tragic aspect of his lot that he is shackled to an eater of Cheddar, which really is not cheese at all.

Senator Fess, who has just been up to White Pine Camp, says the farmers are to get relief, but not along radical lines. Nothing as radical as the tariff.

A GLIMPSE OF FRENCH HISTORY.

Poincare, Herriot, Briand, again and again, the magician, Caillaux, whose purse of Fortunatus, alas, was but a "vectigal of parsimony" and once more Poincare. Not so different from that other procession in which appeared Turgot, De Clugny, D'Ormisson, De Fleury and Atlas Necker.

Great is bankruptcy: the great bottomless gulf into which all falsehoods, public and private, do sink, disappearing; whither from the first origin of them they were all doomed. For Nature is true and not a lie. No lie you can speak or act but it will come, after longer or shorter circulation, like a bill drawn on Nature's reality, and be presented there for payment—with the answer, no effects. Pity only that it had so long a circulation; that the original forger were so seldom he who bore the final smart of it! Lies and the burden they bring are passed on; shifted from back to back and from rank to rank; and so land ultimately on the dumbest low rank who with spade and mattock, with sore heart and empty wallet, daily come in contact with reality and can pass the cheat no further.

Thus France and her finances, toward the end of 1783, as told in the growling eloquence of Carlyle. And anxiety creeps into the news today for the thrifty peasantry of France threatened with bitter loss by the folly and incapacity of statesmanship.

It could be said for Mr. Hawes that except for the good roads he gave Missouri his opponents could not get around the State to tell what a bad man he is.

Mellon, on vacation, wants to forget he is a financier. Winston Churchill is willing to concede that he isn't.

THE FLAPPER'S LAMENT.

(With profuse apologies.)

Backward, turn backward, O time, in your flight,
Make me a wall flower, just for tonight!
Grandma, come back from your bridge club once more,
Lend me the styles that you formerly wore;
Take from my handbag the cigarettes there,
Comb the marcel till there's none in my hair;
Paint from my lips take and rouge from my cheeks—
Where are the sheiks, mother, where are the sheiks?

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years!
I am so weary of hiding my ears—
Rides without recompense, June nights in vain,
Take me and make me a wall flower again!
I have grown leary of synthesized gin,
Weary of four as an hour to come in,
Weary of wearing a sweater and "breeks"—
Show me the sheiks, mother, show me the sheiks!

Tired of the Charleston and auto rides, too,
Mother, O mother, what else can girls do!
Many a summer the grass has been green
Since really long skirts in this town were seen;
Yet with strong yearning and passionate pain
Long I to act as a wall flower again:
I'd be the girl that the loving man seeks—
Where are the sheiks, mother, where are the sheiks?

Come, let my brown hair, just lighted with gold,
Fall to my shoulders again as of old;
Let it drop over my forehead tonight,
Thanks for the buggy ride, bobs are a fright!
Pleased with its sunny-edged shadows once more,
Boys without flasks will be crowding the door;
The way we dress now, we flappers are freaks—
Show me the sheiks, mother, show me the sheiks!

Now that James Branch Cabell has written another charming book, we presume that the New York Society for the Suppression, etc., will soon give the book extensive advertising by endeavoring to have it suppressed. Training the smut searchlights on Cabell's masterpieces of deliciously nonsensical irony is an appropriate occupation for the silly season.

ARTISTIC INTERLUDE.

Greenwich Village foregathers to talk soulfully of art—solid capitals. At these so thrilling meetings, the intellectuals discuss the work of the other intellectuals in the colony, and it is all so thrilling, uplifting, inspiring, and what have you? No one can object to the fact that artists—even amateur artists—have their own little circle. But why take yourself so seriously, Sonia? The first mark of an artist—even an amateur artist—is self-sufficient pride that disdains the encouragement of even other artists. The artist who has not sufficient egoism to enable him to work "far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife" had better quit.

INDIA'S GREATEST PROBLEM.

J. COATMAN in the Atlantic Monthly for July.

A VERY slight acquaintance with Indian affairs will discover the importance of the Hindu-Mohammedan problem. * * * Hindu-Mohammedan rivalry has, during the past few years, shifted its ground from its old base of purely religious fanaticism and unreasoning prejudice to the fields of political and economic struggle. * * * The charge has been made that the British have encouraged communal rivalry on the principle of "divide and rule." This, of course, is demonstrably false, if only for the reason that, as we have seen, the rivalry is as deeply rooted and the numbers of the rivals are so enormous—250,000,000 Hindus and 66,000,000 Mohammedans—that any such encouragement by the paramount power would have led to an explosion utterly beyond its ability to control. * * * The ignorant and fanatical on both sides will not let religious animosities die easily, but the growth of true political parties in which Hindus and Mohammedans can work together whole-heartedly for common aims will be a great and increasing force against fanatical ebullitions. It is in this direction, I am convinced, that the solution of the problem must be sought; and once again I emphasize the vast importance of the rural problem in this respect. The improvement of agricultural methods, the diminution of indebtedness, and the raising of the standard of living in the villages are indispensable preliminaries to the formation of political parties and the establishment of true and abiding Hindu-Mohammedan unity. Here is a tremendous field of work for the leaders and the educated members of both sides, whose active help and sympathy would magnify the effects of government action a hundredfold. * * * There is no obvious or easy solution of this great problem. It ranks with the problem of North versus South in Ireland and with the Negro problem in America.

FIGHTING SNAKES.

From the New York Herald Tribune.

THE Missouri gentleman who offered to drive the rattlesnakes out of Texas with an army of Ozark blacksnakes was disappointed. He began the war with one champion black racer, but when matched with a fierce Texas rattler it retired into a corner and sulked. For that matter, so did the rattler. The Lone State champion just curled up and went to sleep. Dogs will fight, and so will cocks, and fleas and frogs can be made to race, but the snake is a highly uncompetitive critter. He wants nothing better than to sleep in the sun. Blacksnakes, whether in Missouri or New York State, energetically climb trees after birds' eggs, but face them with a man—even with a woman—and they will slink off to hide under the barn. The popular suspicion of the snake as an aggressive animal is just about 100 per cent superstition. Even a rattlesnake never chases an enemy; he cannot jump off the ground, and at his best can hardly strike more than a third his length.

what Zimmerman told Gerard. • • •

The facts in this matter were as follows: I had repeated in my cable Bryan's assertion that the highly excited public opinion in the United States compelled the State Department to make a serious protest. It is true, Bryan had added, that the note was written in a friendly tone and that he hoped that the answer would breathe the same friendly spirit. Then he said that Germany's cessation of unrestricted submarine war should be unconditional, and not dependent upon a vigorous American protest against the British blockade. An impartial reader could not interpret my cable in the way Zimmerrmann and Gerard did.

Zimmermann-Gerard in a Game of Bluff.

Many months later, when I passed through Berlin on my way home, I heard that Gerard had been trying to bluff the German Foreign Office by ostentatiously going in person to the office of the Sleeping Car Co., Unter den Linden, as if he wanted to secure accommodations for himself and his family, in the probable case of interruption of diplomatic relations.

Zimmermann at once determined upon answering bluff by bluff and read only part of my cable, distorting its meaning. But he intentionally omitted to read another cable of mine sent a few days before, saying that the sinking of another liner would mean war with the United States.

Besides, W. Phillips, then Third Assistant Secretary and Acting Ambassador in Brussels, had given me the same answer. This distinguished and well trained diplomatist who is certainly not pro-German, had informed me that public opinion was so excited "that our reply must be serious and categorical." The American Government, more than any other Government, is depending on and is founded on public opinion. My reference to a strong public opinion at the back of an offical demand could be intended only to emphasize the earnestness of the demand.

The sinking of the Arabic, a British liner, with two American lives lost, made the crisis acute. Count Bernstorff, who worked in close contact with House, extracted from his Government the desired guarantees regarding instructions to naval officers, forbidding them to sink a liner without warning and providing for the safety of passengers. But the German Government would not assume the responsibility for, and disavow, the sinking of the Lusitania. Wilson's diplomatic victory was not complete. At last the Berlin Cabinet promised compensation for the sinking of the Arabic, assuming full responsibility, owing to Bernstorff's "patience, good sense and untiring effort," as House puts it.

Denies Gerard's Gossip.

In connection with these developments Gerard reported that Herr von Jagow, Secretary of the German Foreign Office, had told him that Bernstorff, "while not exactly exceeding his instructions....had put the matter in a manner they did not approve....Dumba had been made a noble—von und zu."

This proves what little credit Gerard's tales deserve, for he picked up unconfirmed rumors repeated by the papers and reported them as facts. I never received a title which I could have had long years before I went to Washington, but preferred, according to a tradition of my family, to remain a commoner.

In November, 1915, the Ancona was sunk after warning in the Mediterranean, with the loss of several lives. House at once suggested a rupture with Austria. But Wilson disagreed, and after some hesitation and an exchange of two notes, a disavowal and a promise of full compensation came forth from the Austrian Government.

After the Sussex incident of March, 1916, and the subsequent exchange of notes between Washington and Berlin and Washington and London, the relations between the United States and England were so strained toward the end of 1916 that even the Anglophile House observed it would have been hardly possible to avoid war with England, but for "the criminal and stupid submarine methods of the Germans."

Bernstorff Presses House.

In the meantime, Bernstorff pressed House reepatedly to tell him when Wilson's oft announced mediation would take place. House always gave evasive answers.

In September, 1916, the Presidential campaign set in masterfully organized by House. Since coaching Wilson for his first political campaign, the "Colonel" had successfully turned his attention to international questions. At once, he evinced rare political instinct and foresight, in showing the way to a modification of the Monroe Doctrine. For a mythical protectorate, he wanted to substitute American partnership by proposing a closer co-operation of the American republics. Disarmament was to follow. This bold scheme foreshadows Articles X and VIII of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

House's political astuteness and foresight immensely contributed to Wilson's re-election which was mostly secured by the German vote in the Western states, owing to the promise to keep America out of the war.

House's "Papers" could not but reveal the truth, namely, that he made Wilson President after having chosen him; that he prompted his words and acts, both in home politics and foreign affairs; that he took the initiative in such great legislative measures as the tariff reform and the creation of the Federal Reserve Board.

No Bargain With Allies.

House overlooks the fact that before joining the allies Wilson failed to drive a bargain with them by laying down terms of peace which he deemed just, and which promised to make it permanent. He should have insisted upon being informed of all secret understandings between the allies, excluding, by binding agreements, the immoderate aims and purposes of his warmad partners.

Wilson himself was totally ignorant of European affairs. But House had been in close touch with the European situation for years. At this all-important conjunction he lacked the right vision and statesmanlike foresight, allowing his country to assume all the burdens and sacrificies of a decisive share in the World War without securing adequate influence on the permanent settlement.

It is difficult to see what House really intended in allowing his intimate papers and correspondence to be published. Retiring, reserved, averse to any ostentation or show, anxious only to wield real power behind the scenes for the good of his country, he could not have been actuated by the motive of self-glorification. It is probable that he wished to offer an extremely interesting contribution to contemporary history and to throw in a favorable light his intimate friend Wilson, to vindicate the high character of the much decried President, his sense of justice and righteousness, his impartiality and his ideal purpose with regard to the organization of a durable peace.

Does House succeed in his attempt to raise Wilson to the level of highest statesmanship? I am afraid not.

By COUNT JOHANN VON BERNSTORFF.
War-Time Ambassador of Germany at Washington.

INASMUCH as the records of events, as revealed in Col. House's "Intimate Papers," is practically the same as that set down by me in my book, "Deutschland und Amerika"—of course, mutatis mutandis—I have hardly anything to object to in the House memoirs. It seems to me that the most valuable contribution consists in the fact that it now becomes somewhat easier to solve the psychological question of how to differentiate between the two components of that highly interesting collective House-Wilson personality.

The House books so entirely confirm all that I wrote that I have only little to add to what I have already stated in my weekly Deutsche Einheit (German Unity). In the prefactory note written by the Colonel, he states that "this book written around my papers is in no sense a conventional apologia such as, despite my best intentions, I should probably have written, had I attempted to describe the stirring and controversial events in which it was my fortune to play a part. My chief desire has been to let the papers tell their own story, and for that reason I have preferred to leave their arrangement in the hands of an historian."

Flavor Edited Out.

Those who have had the advantage of knowing House more closely and esteem him, as I, will regret the Colonel's decision because, by handing over his material to Dr. Seymour, who "felt it his duty to assume a highly critical attitude," the memoirs undoubtedly have lost their flavor of originality and directness.

House is a very efficient and good-natured man, without ulterior ambitions but possessing extensive political interests. Always feeling bound to help, he became the supplementary component of a collective House-Wilson personality, ably assisting his friend whose great gifts suffered considerably from the inability to deal effectively with practical questions which, after all, may be expected from a hermit like Wilson.

However, it seems to me as if Prof. Seymour had gone a little bit too much out of his way to represent his hero House as a mixture of Machiavelli and Talleyrand. As a matter of fact, House's real personality is much more likeable than any picture that his memoirs may suggest. In his book, there is a deplorable lack of that modesty and kindness inherent in his real personality. House always hid himself effectively behind his friend, intent upon covering up his friend's failings, which he wholeheartedly tried to compensate.

Services Underestimated.

I have already taken occasion in my book to point out the deplorable oversight of the German Government in underestimating House's three European trips.

His first trip in 1914, before the outbreak of the war, should have served to inform responsible German quarters about the trend of America's foreign policy. From whatever source one draws one's conclusions, be it the books of Tumulty, Lane, Baker, Page, Lodge or House, one always arrives at the same sad conclusion: Germany lost the most important diplomatic passage of arms during the Great War, the very contest which brought about the ultimate decision—America's entrance into the war—because England knew much better than we how to deal with the United States.

In spite of the fact that, generally speaking, our Foreign Office was ably conducted, those in charge, and the nation at large, never discerned that the question of "to be or not to be," in regards to the German empire, was at stake in Washington.

In this connection, it is most interesting to read what House, under date of May 29, 1914, while in Berlin, wrote to the President: "The situation is extraordinary. It is militarism run stark mad. Unless someone acting for you can bring about a different understanding, there is some day to be an awful cataclysm. No one in Europe can do it. There is too much hatred, too much jealousies. Whenever England consents, France and Russia will close in on Germany, and Austria. England does not want Germany wholly crushed, for she would then have to reckon alone with her ancient enemy, Russia; but if Germany insists upon an ever-increasing navy, then England will have no choice."

Warning Still Serves.

How clearly—by and large—House had sized up the situation! Even today this warning is still fraught with grave meaning!

Who can say today whether House's first European trip would have been successful had it been undertaken some time earlier?

The decision between war and peace was in the hands of England and the only issue between England and Germany was the question of naval armament. Would it have been within the power of Wilson to assume the task of mediator, provided those shots at Sarajevo had not brought on the catastrophe?

At any rate, House had been encouraged by Kaiser, as well as by Sir Edward Grey, which impressed Wilson greatly. This may also be the reason that up to 1917, Wilson was absolutely unwilling to believe that Germany alone was to blame, a fact which provoked Page considerably. Just as Wilson had been ready to assume the task which Haldane had been unable to accomplish, he was also ready later on, according to House's report, to mediate for a peace whose conditions, to be sure, depended on the general war situation.

Whenever a friend—be he ever so intimate a friend—takes occasion to act as the spokesman of his superior, the question arises as to how well this friend and spokesman repeated, or interpreted, the opinions and intimations of his superior, and how much there is of the admixture of his own feelings and conceptions.

One-Sided Controversy.

So far as House and Wilson are concerned, the controversy in regards to the extent to which House injected his own personality is much more grave in America because Mrs. Wilson refused to permit the publication of her late husband's letters to the Colonel. The "Papers," published mostly on account of the book of former Ambassador Page, manifest a certain one-sidedness, especially since Prof. Seymour appears to be rather reticent in reference to the contents of Wilson's letters.

By the way, in the light of the House "Papers," Page must be considered chief mourner because his insubordination, long since known, now seems absolutely grotesque.

As far as I am able to check up the facts, recorded in "The Intimate Papers," I must acknowledge that House, in his dealings with me, never expressed anything else but Wilson's very own opinions.

It was my fortune to be a witness to the developments recorded in House's "Papers" and I feel bound to corroborate his narrative with this exception: that I am familiar only by hearsay with his European experiences. Moreover, the difference in the Colonel's and my own nationality naturally accounts for certain divergences of opinion.

That part of the book most interesting to Germans may be divided into three chapters: The first leading up to and including the Lusitania case; the second ending with the Sussex ultimatum, and the third covering the period from the Sussex ultimatum until diplomatic relations were severed.

Up to the sinking of the Lusitania, questions of neutrality together with preparatory attempts to bring about peace, occupy the foreground. The months between the Lusitania and the Sussex incidents were made up of many days, each fraught with the imminent danger of war between America and Germany.

The perilousness of those days becomes much more manifest in House's "Papers" than in my own book. I always felt that I had underestimated the danger of the situation! House's "Intimate Papers" furnish the documentary evidence for my conjecture.

Expecting the war with certainty, House, while in England (and as reported by Sir Edward Grey in his memoirs), already started to negotiate for an intervention on the part of the United States. It was suggested that the allies should request the President to lay down certain conditions, and in case Germany refused to accept these terms, Wilson would probably be prepared to go to war—to be sure, "probably" only!

In following such a course, Wilson and House assumed that they would be in a position to dictate the terms of the peace. On the other hand, if relations with Germany were severed on account of the Lusitania, Arabic, Sussex and other conflicts, Wilson would be forced to join the allies unconditionally, indorsing their unreasonable demands, as later on developed.

The reason why any attempt at intervention ended abortive was because the allies would not be hindered in regard to their war aims. They probably expected that the German U-boat policy would eventually drive America into the war, and were disappointed to see that it was always possible to straighten out conflicts between Berlin and Washington without going to war.

Therefore, during the third chapter, there developed a certain feeling of tranquillity in regard to Germany. Wilson was very indignant over the conduct of the allies because they kept on disregarding the rights of neutrals and because the allies had declined his offer to intervene. Wilson deduced from this that the allies were not interested in a sensible peace, and were therefore not one bit "better" than the Germans. Besides, he felt it incumbent on him to bring about peace as he had been elected as a "peace President," and also because the general opinion in regard to Germany had become perceptibly calmer and was inclined toward peace.

For all these reasons, Wilson decided to follow the "peace without victory" policy, which Prof. Seymour alludes to as Wilson's desire for a "Remis."

In this connection, House explains that he did not have any faith in mediation, his opinion differing decidedly from Wilson's. However, House continued to follow out Wilson's policy and when I was handed my passports, House, in a letter to me, expressed his regret that Germany had inaugurated an unrestricted submarine warfare at a moment when peace seemed so near.

This tends to prove that House did not write me what he himself thought, but rather what was in the President's mind.

Any historian is bound to admit that ex post facto meditations are and necessarily must remain purely hypothetical. However, meditations of this kind enable us to ascertain certain basic facts which assist us in judging possibilities which the past may have held out to us.

To my mind, one of the basic facts supplied by House's book is the recognition that Wilson was even more peace-loving than I have described him. His is the personality that gains most by the publication of "The Intimate Papers of Col. House."

COUNTY WATER CO. ORDERS CONSERVATION

Notifies Users to Curtail Sprinkling Because of Shortage in Some Sections.

The St. Louis County Water Co. has ordered consumers to curtail sprinkling of lawns, gardens and golf links during certain hours so that homes on high ground, especially in the south end of the county, can have water.

The company is supported in its notice by a letter from Dr. Arthur E. Walters, Deputy State Commissioner of Health, who asked the water company to place certain restrictions on the use of water to insure an ample supply for sanitary measures in homes where the pressure had been low during sprinkling hours.

The water company accordingly ordered that no sprinkling be done betwen the hours of 3 and 9 p. m. each day, and at other hours on alternate days only. Adherence to these restrictions, its was announced, would provide ample water pressure in all parts of the county. With the end of hot weather these restrictions will be removed.

Most complaints of low pressure have come from the south end of the county where many homes had not enough water for sanitary purposes in the afternoon and evening. The water company is improving facilities in this area to provide an ample supply of water in future.

MORE RIOTS IN JAPAN OVER RETRENCHMENT POLICY

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, July 24.—Further riots, following on those at Nagano, are reported from various sections of Japan.

In the latest disorder a mob attacked a police station at Mikawa, Tochigi Prefecture, last night. The mob was angered because of the abolition of two police stations under retrenchment orders. Several were wounded and 20 persons arrested. Suspension of police stations caused the riots at Nagano.

Several smaller disturbances occurred in other parts of the country. The Government believes that opposition parties may be instigating the riots.

needed to keep the mining population alive.

The total amount of Russian funds received here for relief, according to Home Secretary Johnson Hicks, whose figures are confirmed by the union officials, comes to $2,000,000. The 10 shillings a head benefit can no longer be paid, in all districts, but even assuming a reduction to eight shillings or $2 a week, the assistance so far given by Russia to the miners, has been enough to keep the strike alive for just one week. The strike has lasted eight weeks already.

The Russian issue, then, is kept alive for political purposes. It is most important, politically, for even the labor leaders know well enough that the purposes of Moscow in feeding the strike is not humanitarian. And the agitation for a breach with Moscow, fostered by the powerful Tory die-hards, would have succeeded had not Baldwin, Balfour and Chamberlain feared the political effect of a rupture based on the remittance of money to suffering women and children. But Russia is not sensibly prolonging the stoppage; no doubt Russia would like to do so, but Soviet financial resources are clearly unable to shoulder such a burden.

When the miners are forced back to work, Baldwin and his moderate colleagues know well enough they must obtain the best terms possible if lasting bitterness is not to be aroused among the whole working class. The almost unanimous response to the general strike called to suport the miners gives warning of that.

But the losses which the stoppage has caused the coal industry have been tremendous, the industry was only able to carry on before May 1, by a subsidy that the Government provided. The future is dark economically, and the immediate political future of the Tory party seems dark as well, for no coal settlement now can be conceived without its terms affording labor the campaign issue that the Tories starved the miners back to work.

THESE CANDIDATES FIGHT ONLY AT POLLS

Aside From That, They Are Friends, Judicial Contestants Tell G. O. P. Woman's Club.

Fourteen candidates for the Republican nomination for various judicial offices spoke before the Republican Woman's Club at luncheon at the Annex Hotel yesterday and demonstrated that theirs is one section of the primary campaign from which personalities have been virtually eliminated. As one of them, running for Circuit Judge, said: "We're so congenial we ride together between meetings and advise each other of meetings. Win or lose, I'm sure we'll have fond recollections of the race."

Probate Judge Holtcamp, the first speaker, recalling that he called on a woman witness to open her mouth hurriedly Friday, to compare her face with a photograph made years before when her mouth was open, remarked: "I don't want you ladies to feel it's compulsory to open your mouths when you go to the Probate Court."

These candidates for Circuit Judge spoke: Byron F. Babbitt, Edwin C. Luedde, Associate City Counselor Dolan, Judge Rosskopf, Judge Killoren, William L. Bohnenkamp, Charles W. Rutledge and J. L. London. Candidates for the Court of Criminal Correction speaking were Fred A. Bottger and Elmer E. Walter. Others speaking were Prosecuting Attorney Schweitzer, seeking renomination; Justice of the Peace William D. Moore of the Ninth District, seeking renomination, and Jason Kawin, one of his opponents; William Fuetterer, running for Collector; William W. Phillips, running for State Senator in the Thirty-second District; Austin W. Briggs and Edward S. Horwitz, running for Alderman of the Twenty-eighth Ward.

The candidates spoke chiefly of their own qualifications and experience. Prosecuting Attorney Schweitzer did not mention his attitude of observing all sections of the Bill of Rights in handling liquor cases.

FOUR ROBBERIES ADMITTED BY OHIO YOUTH HELD HERE

Companion Arrested With Him and Man Named as Aid, Deny Story.

After his arrest late Friday at the Free Bridge, over which with a companion he sought to escape from St. Louis, a youth identifying himself as Kenneth L. Williamson of Dayton, O., confessed four St. Louis robberies, implicating his companion, Walter Costello, 20, of Los Angeles and a St. Louis man who, he says, drove them to and from the robberies, helping them away with their plunder in his automobile.

Costello, who admits serving time in a California reformatory with Williamson, denies the latter's story. So does the accused St. Louisan.

The robberies to which Williamson confessed were those of the homes of Mrs. Isabella Lucas, 4543 Forest Park boulevard, and Mrs. Lucille Ehrens, 4243A Delmar boulevard; the ready-to-wear store of Mrs. Ella Matthews at 1811 South Jefferson avenue and the millinery shop of Mrs. Miriam Rozier at 1909 South Thirty-ninth street. The loot taken was valued at more than $1500.

Judge C. M. Huey Dies.

By the Associated Press.

MONMOUTH, Ill., July 24.—Clinton M. Huey, Judge of the County Court of Warren County since 1918 and candidate for re-election in November, died here today of leakage of the heart. Judge Huey was City Attorney of Monmouth for two terms, and County Prosecutor from 1904 to 1908.

FIRE DESTROYS THREE STORES AND GARAGE

St. Louis Engines Check $60,000 Blaze on Florissant Avenue in County.

Three small stores and a garage in a one-story brick building at Helen and Florissant avenues, St. Louis County, were destroyed by fire at 1 a. m. yesterday, with a loss in excess of $60,000, partly insured.

The fire had gained great headway when discovered and three engine companies of the St. Louis Fire Department devoted most of their work to saving adjoining residences on Helen and Florissant avenues.

The stores destroyed were a Kroger grocery, the hardware store of Mrs. Eva L. Quick, drug store of Frank R. Zimmerman on the corner, and garage of Arthur Mack in the rear.

The Kroger loss was estimated at $10,000, that of Mrs. Quick at $10,000 to $15,000, Zimmerman $10,000 and Mack $3000, excepting five automobiles stored for the night in Mack's place. C. J. Hopper, owner of the building, said his loss would be about $25,000.

WOMAN REPORTS $4000 HOLDUP

Says Two Men Forced Her to Disclose Its Hiding Place in Bedpost.

Mrs. Edward Nachtwei of 3414 Kosciusko street, reported to police at 8 a. m. yesterday that two Negroes stole $4000 from her home at 1:45 a. m., $50 of which she later found in the back yard, where they had dropped it in their flight. She said she recognized them as two men who had been lurking near her home recently.

Mrs. Nachtwei said she had gone to the back yard, leaving the kitchen door open, and upon returning to her bedroom was seized by the Negroes, one of whom came from beneath the bed, the other from behind it, one with an open knife, the other a revelver.

They held her against the wall in the front room, she said, until she told under threats that the money was concealed in a hollow post of the iron bed in her room. The robbers took the money and fled.

In the house with Mrs. Nachtwei were nine of her 10 children asleep. They were not disturbed by the robbers. Her husband, a coal hauler, is away on a fishing trip. The money represented the family savings for three years and was not insured.

Mrs. Nachtwei said her delay in reporting the robbery was due to nervousness and excitement occasioned by the loss. She could not explain how the Negroes knew she had the money, except to suggest that they might have peeped through a window of the bedroom at night when she and her husband counted it, as they frequently did.

POLICEMAN - HUSBAND BEAT HER, WIFE SAYS

He Was Model Man Until He Joined Force, She Asserts; Wants Him Fired.

Police were called early yesterday morning by Mrs. Betty Jean Bock of 3826 Lee avenue, who complained that her husband, Motorcycle Policeman John S. Block, was beating her.

They found Bock in hiding under a neighbor's porch. He abused and then resisted them, they report, attempting to seize the revolver of Patrolman Patrick Ogier. Bock, subdued, was locked up at Angelica Street Station after a department physician had pronounced him intoxicated. Charges of intoxication and conduct unbecoming an officer will be preferred against him before the Police Board.

Mrs. Bock, who exhibited bruises she said her husband had caused, said that until he joined the police force in October, last year, he was a model husband. "I don't wan to be rid of him," she said. "I just want him to lose his job and be like he used to be."

MAN KILLED BY A TRAIN

The body of a man killed by a train at Eden, St. Louis County, early yesterday morning, is at the Morgue, awaiting identification.

He was struck by an inbound Wabash passenger train and is described as about 40 years old, 5 feet 4 inches tall, and weighing about 140 pounds. He had brown hair and gray eyes and wore a blue shirt, a brown vest, green trousers and black hat and shoes. In his pockets were 8 cents and a broken comb.

BOY, 8, SAYS BROTHER, 18, TAUGHT HIM TO STEAL

Paroled Boonville Youth Throws Whole Blame for $295 Theft on Child.

Gus Pappas, 18 years old, paroled last Nov. 13 from Boonville Reformatory, was arrested Friday after his brother, William, 8, confessed to stealing $295 from the cash reigster of the Olive Cycle & Motor Co., 1035 North Grand boulevard, and charged that the older boy instigated the theft.

The younger lad had been seen about the cycle shop on July 18, when the money was taken. His brother denied any part in the theft, saying William had given his $166 which he did not know was stolen. Gus is charged with receiving stolen property and with contributing to the delinquency of a minor. William is held at the House of Detention. The older boy gave his address at 323 South Grand, but his parents live at 3648 Olive street.

TAKE $700 FROM GROCER

Flourishing their revolvers two young men entered the grocery store of Benjamin Jeurczyk, at Elliot avenue and North Market street, at noon yesterday, and forced him to hand over to them $700 in cash and several checks.

The money was what remained of a sum Jeurczyk had drawn from the bank to cash pay checks for employes of manufacturing plants in that vicinity.

MEXICANS HURRY TO CONFIRM CHILDREN

Catholic Mothers Fear Edict, Effective Next Saturday, Will Close Churches.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, July 24.—The Government is proceeding with plans to enforce its new religious regulations at midnight next Saturday, but denial is made that all the Federal troops have been instructed to be ready for instant action in case there are disorders. It is stated, however, that such an order may be issued if it should be regarded necessary.

Regulations supplementary to the constitutional prohibition of religious teaching in private schools prescribe that no clergyman shall act as director or teacher in schools. Chapels, religious pictures, images and other objects of a religious nature in such schools are forbidden.

Some schools intend to reopen at border points in the United States. Sister Maria Ensenadora, with 20 sisters of the school, of which she was the head, has departed for Eagle Pass, Tex., where the institution will be reopened.

Boycott Proponents Arrested.

Catholic circles have been stirred by the closing of the headquarters of the National League for Defense of Religious Liberty and the arrest of the leaders of the organization. Attorney-General Ortega has ordered that charges be laid against those responsible for a circular calling for an economic blockade in opposition to the Government's religious program. Ortega has sent to the First District Court a citation ordering an investigation into the activities of the three leaders of the League under arrest, Rafael Ceniceros Villareal, Rene Capitstran Garza and Luis Busto, who are alleged to have signed the appeal for "an economic boycott."

"The facts which I am citing," says Ortega's communication, "have enormous transcendency for the institutions of the republic, because it is attempted to destroy them and bring about disorganization of the administration and the economic ruin of society.

"The appeal made by the leaders of the League to the inhabitants of Mexico to disobey one of the laws which constitute the ideal of the Mexican people is destructive and dangerous. I beseech you to fulfill your duty, acting diligently and efficaciously in this case within the strictest lines of justice."

Fear Churches Will Be Closed.

Crowds are visiting churches daily to have children confirmed or baptized; being fearful that all church functions will cease next Saturday. This is due to the fact that the regulations provide that churches are property of the Government, which is to determine which churches may continue to be used for worship. More than 3000 children were confirmed in the Cathedral here yesterday and there also were many baptisms. Hundreds of mothers were unable to gain entrance with their babies.

Ambulances were stationed outside the church to render aid to women and children crushed in the throng. Several women fainted, and some babies were bruised. The Most Rev. Jose Mora y del Rio, Archbishop of Mexico, personally officiated at the confirmations for two hours until his assistants insisted that he retire.

Urges Schools in Homes.

Dispatches are published here saying that Archbishop Orozco y Jiminez, of Guadalajara, has sent a letter throughout his jurisdiction, together with thousands of catechisms, advising every Catholic home to become a Catholic school, to assemble the children from the surrounding neighborhood to give them religious instruction.

Vera Cruz dispatches say 77 nuns and a number of priests sailed yesterday for Havana on the steamer Reina Maria Christina.

Several prominent women, members of the Catholic Women's League, were taken to court yesterday and questioned regarding their connection with the movement of Catholic organizations against the religious regulations. After their depositions had been taken they were permitted to go.

RECOGNIZES A SUSPECT FROM PHOTO HE ONCE SAW

Police Lieut. Hoagland Arrests Alleged Pickpocket He Had Never Met Before.

A man he had never seen before was identified by Police Lieutenant Elias Hoagland, Friday night, from his remembrance of a photograph seen in the Bertillon department 10 years before, and, being arrested, admitted he was Eugene McMahon, who police say, has a national reputation as a pickpocket. Held on suspicion of being a pickpocket he gave $10,000 bail with Beverly Brown, professional bondsman, as surety.

PAYROLL ROBBER GETS $26

Demanding "that payroll" an unidentified youth of 20 years entered the office of the Centaur Lime Co., at 3852 Market street just before 11 a. m. yesterday.

William Winkelman of 3330A Wisconsin avenue, in charge of the office, handed him a bag containing about $20 in silver belonging to the company. Benjamin Leiweke of 2318 Tower Grove avenue, also connected with the concern, gave over $6 in currency which his pockets held. The man escaped, runing east on Market street. Winkelman says the payroll money was not in the office at the time.

WATERMAN AV. FIGHTS DOUBLE DECK BUSSES

Dispute of Two Years Ago Renewed—Company Urges Necessity of Its Service.

Determination to continue double-deck bus service on Waterman avenue is indicated in a statement put out by the People's Motorbus Co., citing rapid apartment development of Skinker road declaring the section feeding the Waterman boulevard is already the most thickly populated in the city.

About two weeks ago the Locust-Lindell line of the company extended its service to Skinker and Clayton roads. Opposition to this service was voiced before the Board of Public Service Friday by Charles G. Gillespie, Twenty-fourth Ward Republican City Committeeman, on behalf of property owners along Waterman avenue.

The bus company recalled a similar protest, with a petition signed by 45 persons in February, 1924. The Lindell-Locust line had been running one week with western terminus at Washington University, when 45 persons signed a petition in protest. Two weeks later the double-deckers were voluntarily taken off Waterman with establishing of the terminus at Union boulevard. Within a month more than 700 persons signed a petition to have them back.

Division of opinion among residents of the section still is proportionately the same, the statement inferred, mentioning those protesting as "a handful of property owners" in "a limited section" of Waterman avenue.

Some months after the double-deck buses were taken off Waterman avenue in 1924, a single-deck service from Maplewood was inaugurated over McCausland avenue, Skinker road and Waterman avenue to Union boulevard, extending to Twelfth boulevard in rush hours. The statement pointed out that small capacity of these buses soon made that service unprofitable and left the company with the alternative of letting passengers crowd, in violation of the bus permit, or leaving them on the street.

"This is no news to residents of the section who before the recent change tried to board an eastbound single-deck bus at the morning rush hour. Many from as far west as DeBaliviere avenue walked to Union to take a double-decker bus. After about 4:30 p. m. the waiting line for westbound single-deckers at Union was such that many gave that up, too, and walked on there to save time.

"The single-deck buses now turn back to Maplewood at Skinker and Clayton roads except at peak hours, when they run express to Twelfth street."

James H. Prather Dies.

Funeral services for James H. Prather, for the last 36 years a proof reader on St. Louis newspapers, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from his residence, 7364 Flora avenue, Maplewood. Mr. Prather, who was 61 years old, died Friday of nephritis. He had read proof for the St. Louis Republic for 30 years. When that paper ceased publication he entered the employ of the Post-Dispatch, continuing there until a week ago. He is survived by his widow, four sons and two daughters.

Every Train Taking Its Load and Roads to Watering Places Are Crowded With Autos.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, France, July 14.

THE annual exodus from Paris after a strenuous social season has commenced in earnest. Every train is taking its load, and the roads, especially in the direction of water places, have a constant stream of automobiles. Vichy and the other resorts in the Auvergne are having their season, many Parisians as well as foreign visitors rushing there for their "cures" after too much dining during the June season in Paris. July is considered the best month for "cures" not only on account of too much gaiety in the French capital in June, but to be reinforced for another gay season in Deauville in August and later in Biarritz.

Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, widow of the New York publisher, has returned to Paris after making her annual visit to Aix-les-Bains, France, for the "cure" and is again stopping at the Hotel Plaza-Athenee, where she has joined her son, Herbert Pulitzer.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason Day gave a housewarming at their new apartment in the rue de la Pompe, Paris, last week. Their guests included Mrs. Benjamin Thaw of St. Louis, Mrs. Laurence V. Benet of Kentucky and Miss Maud Ochs of Tennessee.

Miss Clara Bromeyer of St. Louis also crossed on the Leviathan and came to Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Massey of St. Louis, who have been touring the Scandinavian countries, were recent visitors to Oslo, Norway.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Oelrichs (nee Dorothy Heydel) of St. Louis, reserved apartments at the Grand Hotel, overlooking the Grand Canal, in Venice, for the month of July. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall Knight of St. Louis also are at the Grand Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brown of St. Louis are registered at the Hotel Excelsior on the Lido, the beach across the lagoon from Venice.

MRS. GEORGE LANE EDWARDS of the Forest Park Hotel has returned from a trip of several months abroad and is staying for a few days at Plattsburg, N. Y., with Mrs. Guy Shallies, before going on to Rye Beach, N. H., for the remainder of the summer season. Mrs. Edwards has been traveling in Europe with Mrs. Daniel S. Brown of the Kingsbury Apartments, and her daughters.

...N OF RUMANIA WOULD VISIT U. S. AS MERE CITIZEN

...search, Who May Accompany ...ueen on Fall Tour, Says Receptions Are Tiresome.

By the Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, July 24.—Should ...Queen of Rumania go to the United States he should like to travel as a private citizen. Constant public receptions, in this royal view, "wear one out."

"I would want to give the American Government the least trouble possible," King Ferdinand said, commenting on the uncertain possibility that he might join Queen Marie on her proposed fall trip to the United States.

"Receptions are trying for the persons who arrange them, and trying for those in whose honor they are given. One day's official reception in the United States would be quite enough, I think. The remainder of the time I should like to travel as a private citizen."

Lahm Ordered to Washington.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Brigadier-General Frank P. Lahm, one of the two new general officers in the Army Air Corps, has been ordered from San Francisco to Washington for a month of "temporary duty." Army circles believe he later will succeed Brigadier-General Fechet, in charge of air operations, while Gen. Fechet will go to Kelly Field, Texas, to take command of the largest air corps station.

ENGLAND BARS JAZZ LEADER "TO PROTECT HOME INDUSTRY"

Ben Bernie Will Not be Permitted to Fill Light Week's Engagement.

LONDON, July 24.—Premier Baldwin's policy of safe-guarding home industries, it is authoritatively stated, is behind the exclusion from England of Ben Bernie, American jazz orchestra leader, who has been denied a permit for an eight weeks' engagement.

It has been the policy of the Labor Ministry for some time to prohibit the importation of foreign organizations such as Bernie heads, when it is considered that there is sufficient British talent available to employers. It is also pointed out here that Great Britain is not alone in making such exclusions since several other nations follow the same policy.

MARKS ON MISSOURI STONE THOUGHT TO BE OLD WRITING

Photographs Sent to Smithsonian Institution in Effort to Decode Hieroglyphics.

By the Associated Press.

FAIRFAX, Mo., July 24.—A huge stone thought to bear hieroglyphics, has been unearthed in Gubser Creek, near here, by Frank Plumb, of this city. It was discovered in a spot where other relics of an early age have been found in recent years. Photographs of the stone have been sent to Smithsonian Institution in an effort to have the figures on it decoded. It is the opinion they may throw some light on the other discoveries.

Plumb found a skeleton in the creek last September and several archeologists visited the region but were unable to classify the discovery. Since that time several hundred specimens have been unearthed. They were found in quantities, especially after heavy rains, which washed the earth away along the creek banks.

Stone axes, pieces of pottery, mastodon teeth, flint arrowheads, petrified wood, skeletons, knives, tools, corn grinders and several articles, which resembled ivory tusks, were among the discoveries.

Plumb is a student of anthropology and has located a sacrificial mound, a serpent mound and an ancient fort in the vicinity of Fairfax. He excavated in the sacrificial mound and found several relics.

Gubser Creek is about 20 years old. Its bed originally was a road, but heavy rains washed it out until the water course was formed.

FEW WOMEN'S KNEES STRAIGHT

London Specialist Says It Is Due to Early Diet of Wrong Foods.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 24.—Few women have straight knees, says the eminent surgeon Sir William Arbuthnot Lane, who is making a campaign for the greater use of simple foods in an endeavor to build up the constitutions of males and females.

"We always have known that very few men have perfectly straight normal legs and knees," says Sir William. "And now that women wear such short skirts anyone who takes the trouble to make an observation when the winds are whistling through the streets of London, will ascertain that very few women have straight knees. It is all due to early disease caused by bad feeding." Sir William says the man in the African jungle who is called by the white people "a poor benighted savage," is far superior physically to the white man. "A Zulu warrior will run 50 miles without being tired," declares Sir William, "and he surpasses any Greek god in beauty of body."

CLEARED IN SHOOTING CASE

By the Associated Press.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., July 24.—William H. Schofield of Utica, Mich., school teacher, was acquitted here last night of attempting to kill Mrs. Mattie Mott, aged blind woman. Schofield, a roomer at the Mott home, was accused of serving as a hired gunman for others who would have profited by Mrs. Mott's death.

Yellowstone Park Trip Ideal for Motor Tour

Geysers, Canyons, Lofty Mountains, High Waterfalls and Petrified Forests Interest and Thrill Visitors.

Of all the motor tours that may be taken from St. Louis none surpases in interest that to Yellowstone Park, its geysers and boiling springs, its serried mountain peaks, its wonderfully colored canyon, and its waterfalls, one of which is 308 feet high. This trip is not for the two-weeks vacationist, but one can make it in three weeks, allowing eight days to reach the park, six days to tour through it and other scenic regions, and eight days to return home. Roads to the park are reported in generally good condition since June and likely to continue so until fall.

How to Reach the Park.

Probably the best route from St. Louis starts at St. Charles, Mo., and follows Federal highway No. 40 to Kansas City, the Victory highway to Denver via Limon, then turns north to Cheyenne, Wyo., and thence via Casper and Thermopolis to Cody, whence it goes up the scenic Ehoshone River canyon, past the famous Shoshone dam, and through the mountains to the east entrance. This route permits of side trips into the Colorado Rockies from Denver and Estes Park.

One can follow the same route as far as Cheyenne, and there turn westward on the Lincoln highway to Rawlins, Wyo., then go via Lander and Two-Gwo-Tee pass through the Jackson Hole country and past the Teton Mountains, which many count the finest mountain range in this country, to the South entrance to the park. This is likely to be the rougher of the two routes. But it is worth while going to the park via Lander and returning via Cody and Casper.

In any event, one should be sure to see the Tetons as well as the park. The Teton Range begins a few miles outside the southern boundary and reaches its highest sublimity 30 miles southward, in the spired group of granite peaks that culminates in the Grand Teton, 13,747 feet in altitude. The thrill that the traveler receives when he first sees these sharp, glacier-bearing crests perhaps exceeds that produced by any other mountains in this country. They seem to rise in a series of sheer precipices from the shores of Jackson Lake, without any gradual incline to lessen the contrast between their upthrust, cathedral-like pinnacles and the horizontal levels of the plain.

Approaching east entrance of Yellowstone Park through Shoshone Canyon.

Other Motor Routes.

An interesting route goes via Springfield, to Rockford, Ill., then west over the Atlantic-Yellowstone-Pacific highway through Dubuque, Waterloo, Ia., Sioux Falls, Rapid City and the Black Hills Wind Cave, Casper, and Shoshoni to Lander, then via Two-Gwo-Tee Pass to the south entrance.

Motorists bound for Salt Lake City can swing north from that place over a very good highway via Ogden and Pocatello to the west entrance to the park, or can follow this route as far as Sugar City, Idaho, then cross the Teton Mountains by Teton Pass to the south entrance. This latter route offers exceptionally fine scenery.

The Custer Battlefield highway, which traverses the Black Hills, and the Yellowstone Trail via Minneapolis and Billings, Mont., to Livingston, Mont., then south to the north entrance at Gardner, also may be used.

However, everything considered, the average motorist will fare best if he goes via Denver, Cheyenne, Casper and Cody to the east entrance, which is about 1620 miles from St. Louis.

Detailed information about this and other routes to Yellowstone Park may be obtained at the Joint Touring Bureau of the Post-Dispatch and the Automobile Club of Missouri, on the ground floor of the Post-Dispatch Building.

Things to See in the Park.

Yellowstone National Park is in Northwestern Wyoming and extends slightly into Idaho and Montana. It is about 62 miles long and 54 miles wide, and has an area of 3348 square miles. Its general physical character is that of a broad volcanic plateau with an average elevation of 8000 feet, and it is surrounded by mountain ranges rising from 2000 to 4000 feet higher.

In Yellowstone Park there are approximately 100 geysers, more than in all the rest of the world. The very earth puffs, steams and hisses in the geyser basins. There are some 4000 hot and boiling springs, some of them flowing ApoHinaris and other mineral waters.

In sheer beauty, no spectacle in the park approaches the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone with the Great Falls at its head.

The great prismatic gorge is 1200 feet deep, 2000 feet wide at the top and 200 feet wide at the bottom. Its walls are fissured, slashed, etched and carved into thousands of architectural forms which rise here and there in dizzy groups of fothic spires where eagles make their nests. Over these slopes are gorgeous patterns of color.

The great fall of the Yellowstone River, at the head of the canyon, leaps 308 feet down into a whirling nebula of spray. Less than half a mile upstream is the upper fall, 109 feet high.

Tower falls, 132 feet high and surrounded by bizarre pinnacles of volcanic rock, is near the lower or northern end of the canyon.

Few lakes surpass Yellowstone Lake in area and elevation. Its surface covers 139 square miles and it is nearly a mile and a half above the level of the sea. The jagged, snowy Absarokas stand in the east; to the south is Mount Sheridan, an extinct volcano.

The fossil forests of the Yellowstone truly deserve their name because, instead of scattered groups of fallen logs far removed from their place of growth, the petrified

Numerous Fishing Places In Missouri Accessible On Roads Generally Good

Where to Go From St. Louis for Best Prospect of Day or Week's Sport With Bait or Fly.

By ROBERT H. HALL.
Press Bureau Automobile Club of Missouri.

Fishing as a week-end pastime has grown in the past year in the esteem of motorists to such an extent that most fishing places near St. Louis, which up to a few years ago afforded good angling, are virtually fished out. With the building of better roads in Missouri, however, fishing haunts in-out-of-the-way places have been made accessble to the motorist. Thus, the loss of the local "fishin' hole" has not been keenly felt.

Most of the writer's week-end holidays, and a number of week-days, have been spent investigating Missouri's fishing resources. Hundreds of queries about fishing received at the Automobile Club of Missouri headquarters, 4228 Lindell boulevard, have resulted in a need of accurate information.

The best of Missouri fishing streams are in the Ozarks. Of these, the writer believes, the Current River affords the greates opportunities for the city angler.

Van Buren, in Carter County, is perhaps the logical point for St. Louisans to establish headquarters while fishing the Current River. Van Buren is on an excellent highway leading from St. Louis. The Current River at this point is a swift, clean and cold stream, receiving most of its water from the Big Springs overflow several miles away in Big Springs State Park. It is filled with a myriad of fish that rise to any sort of bait. The fishing is not congested.

There are deep holes on the south side of the river near the town, where, under logs and great lily pads, lurk bass and perch and hordes of goggle-eye. In the swift moving waters of the channel itself lie catfish, from the gamey channel to the lowly mud and shovel bill. In the shady still backwaters are sunfish that always rise to the worm when other fish scorn the most costly of manufactured bait.

Other Ozark Streams.

There are other Ozark streams which will probably produce as large catches as the Current River but they are more frequented. Near Houston, southwest of Cedar Grove, splendid fishing may be had on the Big Piney, with both bait and fly. From Hooker, on the Big Piney, a trip may be made to Waynesville on the Roubideaux, a river famous for bass and crappie. Northwest of Waynesville, just out of Swedeborg, are Schlicht Mill and Cave Lodge, both presenting alluring possibilities to anglers. Splendid results also may be obtained by fishing the Gasconade near Hazelgreen southwest of Waynesville. Out of Stoutland and Richland, the latter of which is due north of Hazel green, the Wet Glaize may be reached, and a visit to this particular stream should result in a loaded creel.

The Niagnua River, flowing out of the Osage at Linn Creek, has many scenic and angling attractions for the true lovers of both. Ha Ha Tonka, Corkery's Mill, Blue

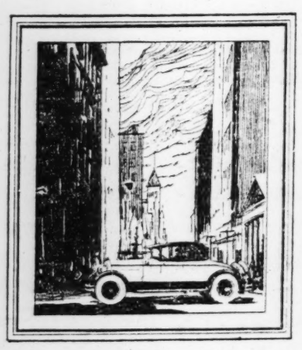
74% of All MARMONS Are Still in Service



FOR YEARS MARMON has been regarded as a car of unusual dependability and long life—but we ourselves did not realize just how fine a record Marmon has actually made. An investigation by the Marmon factory reveals the fact that 74 per cent. of all the Marmon cars ever produced are still rendering faithful service to their owners!

Doubly impressive when you consider that Marmon was one of the pioneers of the industry and that this percentage applies to all cars produced by Marmon for nearly a quarter of a century.

Marmon is today producing the finest car in its history—the culmination of years of concentration on one basic design, progressively refined and improved—and built to precision standards without parallel in the entire industry.

That is the reason why the man who finds the Marmon today, after trying all other makes of fine cars, feels that he is "fixed for life". It has individuality. It has poise and dignity. It has brilliant performance and priceless features of comfort and safety. He knows that these qualities are his to enjoy—not for a season or so—but as long as he cares to drive his car.

We strongly suggest that you investigate the Marmon, even though it be for purposes of comparison only.

A technical college to be known as General Motors Institute of Technology, affiliated with the Industrial Mutual Association, is to be established at Flint, Mich., announced Harry H. Bassett, president of the Buick Motor Co., at a special meeting of the L. M. A. board of trustees.

The General Motors Corporation will provide a new home on a greatly enlarged scale for the educational division of the I. M. A., which has been conducted for the last several years as the Flint Institute of Technology. Facilities for nearly 2000 day and night school students will be provided.

BOILING OF WATER AND MILK WISE PRECAUTION WHEN OUT MOTOR TOURING

CARE in eating and drinking when touring away from home is a vital precaution. Impure food and water frequently are encountered along the vacation trail and may be found in spots otherwise delightful and charming. A sparkling brook may have its source too near a barnyard and the local milk supply may be of dubious quality. Boil the water, and to be safe, boil the milk also, and carry only pure liquids in the vacuum bottle.

Closed Car Sales Figures.

In May 79 per cent of all cars sold by General Motors were closed cars, compared with 59 per cent in May, 1925, 41 per cent in 1924, 38 per cent in 1923 and 19 per cent in 1922.

CHRYSLER PREDICTS AUTO BUYING TREND

Also Forecasts Immediate Success for 4-Cylinder Car His Factory Will Make.

There is a distinct trend in motor car buying that promises rather spectacular developments in the industry, according to Walter P. Chrysler, motor car manufacturer.

Chrysler says buyers now demand more than simply transportation at a price; they demand in their cars all the excellences, proportionately, that a higher price commands. Furthermore, he says, this demand is so insistent and so widespread that they are to have what they want.

"They are most insistent on full-sized bodies which give all the occupants ample room. They insist on ease of riding as well—real comfort. Of course, with this they want the best of performance with real economy of operation. All of these things can be built into a four-cylinder car at a reasonably low price.

"It is to that end that we are shaping our manufacturing plans, and we are very confident that the car of this type which we produce will enjoy a conspicuous success from the start."

WHIPPET CAR RUNS 8.1 MILES ON QUART OF 'GAS'

Continuing tests of Fennant gasoline, W. H. Leininger of the Pierce Petroleum Corporation, on Tuesday drove one of the new Overland Whippet cars 8.1 miles on a quart of gasoline. This was equivalent to 32.4 miles to the gallon.

Leininger stated that the test was run in the middle of the afternoon with the temperature 96 to 97 in the shade, on Clayton road, just west of North and South road. The car had been driven 1000 miles and was stock in every way, he said. The carburetor was disconnected from the gasoline line and tank, and connected instead to a quart can of gasoline. The car was then run until it stopped.

Campaign Aims at Ending Substituting of Auto Oil

Cheap, Ordinary Lubricants Sold to Motorists by Some Dealers as High-Grade Oils, Investigators Say.

A campaign to end substitution of poor automobile oil for good quality brands by unscrupulous dealers and filling stations is being carried on in many cities in this country. The Fair Play Trade League of New York is especially active in the matter.

It is said that in numerous instances in some cities samples of oil bought by investigators as high-grade, trade-marked oils, proved to be very ordinary lubricants, purchasable on the open market at 15 to 20 cents a gallon, but sold to the motorist at 30 cents a quart, or $1.20 a gallon. In many cases the dealers who were substituting had drums of oil marked "heavy," "medium" and "light," from which they drew oil for motorists, and also displayed sealed cans bearing the labels of well-known manufacturers. But the drums were full of low-grade, cheap oil.

Hard to Detect Poor Oil.

It is virtually impossible for the ordinary motorist to detect substitution. The expert can tell much by close inspection of a lubricant, but even an expert can tell nothing by inspecting the oil in the average tin or copper quart measure. Color differences show up chiefly under close inspection by transmitted light. The oils must be in small glass bottles, held side by side, to see any marked differences. And, of course, gritty material is not visible to the unaided eye. The microscope detects it quickly—it shows up quickly in the engine, too. But a dealer is comparatively safe in selling it day in and day out to the casual, unsuspecting motorist. It looks like the genuine in his quart measure.

Poor Oil Injures Engine.

Such oils, of course, are not prepared with the degree of care necessary for an oil to give fullest protection under the severe heat and load stresses encountered in automotive engine lubrication. They cannot be counted upon to seal the piston rings effectively, for instance; hence blowby sets in, piston, piston rings and cylinder wall lubrication suffers — overheating takes place, oil pumping sets in, missing occurs, carbon forms, power is lost, dilution takes place and before the motorist is aware of the danger a scoring condition is encountered.

It is for protection against such conditions that quality oils are developed and the proper conditions of their use specified by automotive lubrication engineers with a precision which comes only of long experince and constant, close contact with the field. All the care exercised at the refinery to turn out the best lubricants from selected crudes by the best processes, and to pack the products with scrupulous care against contamination; all the research and experience of the lubrication engineers used in the preparation of their specific advices for the correct use of these oils in your particular case—all these count for naught if some dealer puts nondescript oil into your crankcase instead of the genuine product asked for. One pays the quality oil price for protection and reaps grief far and away beyond the motorist's usual lot when poor oil is substituted for the brand and grade asked for.

Obviously, it pays to patronize the better class of dealers. It is wisdom to purchase in sealed cans when not exactly certain with whom one is dealing.

SIX-DAY ENDURANCE RUN BY STAR SIX CAR

Safety First and 'Gas' Mileage Emphasized in Test to Begin in St. Louis Tuesday.

A six-day safety-first endurance run and gasoline mileage test in a Star six automobile is scheduled to be held on the streets of St. Louis beginning at noon next Tuesday at the old Federal Building, Eighth and Olive streets, and ending at noon the following Monday. The driver, who is to be F. R. Warner, will be handcuffed to the wheel, and is not to sleep during the run, and the engine of the Star is not to be allowed to stop. So the run will be a test of the driver's endurance as well as of that of the automobile. The run will be sponsored by the Central Star Sales Co.

Warner will be making his twenty-first endurance run. He claims a world's record for this sort of drive for having driven a car continuously for 150 hours without sleep.

"No traffic laws will be violated in this six-day nonstop run by a Star car," said E. W. Ferris, president of the Central Star Sales Co. "Safety first will rule the driver at all times. We know that a Star car will run as fast as anyone cares to drive it, and we know also that it can not be driven at high speed over city streets without breaking traffic laws and endangering lives. But we do want to show how economical it is of gasoline and oil, for city use, where constant stopping and starting in traffic is especially hard on a car in every way. We want to show how strong and enduring the car is, and how easily handled and responsive to the driver's every thought it is in traffic."

Warner declares that in all his endurance runs he obeys the following 10 don'ts for motorists:

"Don't forget traffic signals and boulevard stops.

"Don't forget school zones. Check where the children are.

"Don't drive and drink—the two don't go together.

"Don't park in restricted places.

"Don't drive without proper lights.

"Don't forget your fellow driver—look before you turn.

"Don't forget that 10 minutes late is better than 10 minutes dead.

"Don't forget that traffic court convenes each morning for reckless drivers.

"Don't forget that traffic officers are human—they are there for your protection."

NEW AUTO ENAMEL DRIES COMPLETELY OVER NIGHT

It took the Steelcote Manufacturing Co. of St. Louis nearly five years to perfect its Steelcote rubber auto enamel, which, when applied, is literally a sheet of liquid rubber covering auto body.

This product is said to revolutionize the old method of painting and varnishing. An expert is not needed; any novice with an ordinary brush can apply Steelcote, for it flows smoothly and leaves no brush marks or streaks. Only one coat is required and it dries overnight. A strip of zinc covered with Steelcote may be repeatedly bent without breaking or damaging the finish. If imersed in muriatic acid the zinc is quickly consumed while the enamel remains intact.

A high gloss effect is produced by the enamel without wax process or additional varnishing. Still the capacity is so great that only one coat is sufficient to hide a previously painted surface.

14,580,000 People welcome Whippet with greatest ovation ever given new automobile

In 3 dramatic weeks, this revolutionary European-type, high-speed light car has become the most talked about automobile in America. Millions welcomed it. Thousands bought it.

ON Saturday June 26th, America witnessed the greatest ovation ever given any new automobile.

Here are the high spots . . . facts and figures of vital interest to everyone considering the purchase of a car this year.

In New York City, 57,452 people in two days thronged the streets and showrooms to see this amazing new-type car.

In Wayne County, Detroit, 213,000 people saw the Whippet in its first 3 days.

In Chicago, 62,176 in four days. In Milwaukee, 27,112. In Boston, 30,000. In Elmira, 15,000. From all over America come reports of overwhelming interest.

In many showrooms people were turned away at midnight. Thousands of orders were placed without even a demonstration.

The whole country was electrified by this new-type car that offered such amazing economy . . . such revolutionary performance.

Dramatically . . . the Whippet has become the topic of conversation everywhere. Overnight it took the spotlight of success.

Warning to light car buyers

Spurred on by this great success of the Whippet, other manufacturers will doubtless attempt to come out with Whippet-type cars.

But remember the facts we told you in our first announcement.

It took Overland engineers, in Europe and America, three years to design and build the Overland Whippet.

A big car with little wheels is still a big car. It lacks those things which make the Whippet the most economical of all cars to own . . . the most thrilling of all light cars to drive.

It will take other manufacturers a year or more to create such a car.

So do not expect Whippet advantages in any other light car. Today Overland . . . and Overland alone . . . offers you these unique engineering attainments.

The Overland Whippet is different from anything you have ever known before. A car that challenges all former engineering practice. It casts aside every old tradition. And marks the most important light car engineering improvement in America during the last 16 years.

This new car has a low European-type body. With height and length in true symmetrical proportion.

It is 5 feet 8 inches high . . . not as tall as the average man. Yet it provides more room and comfort than you've ever found in any automobile of this class before.

It has a high-torque, 31-horsepower motor of small bore and long stroke—the same engineering principle used in the fastest racing cars of America and Europe.

4-wheel brakes are an integral part of this new car's chassis design . . . a necessity which light car owners have not heretofore enjoyed. Measured tests show that it will stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles an hour.

Its center of gravity is extremely low, with ample road clearance . . . thus giving a sense of security you have never found in any light car before.

Over 360,000 miles of road tests proved the Whippet's practical advantages before it was released for production

Two engineering ideals combined

The Overland Whippet represents a combination of the most advanced European and American engineering thought.

It is a complete new car . . . designed and built as a unit . . . not an old-fashioned reconstructed chassis.

Here's a car that will do 55 miles an hour in the hands of the average owner . . . with all the reserve power that this implies.

You can drive this car as fast as you like with the utmost ease of control . . . for no light car ever hugged the road like this before.

In traffic it gets away with lightning pickup . . . stop-watch tests show that it accelerates up to 40 miles an hour 18% faster than other light 4-cylinder cars.

It runs like a "six" and pulls like a tractor.

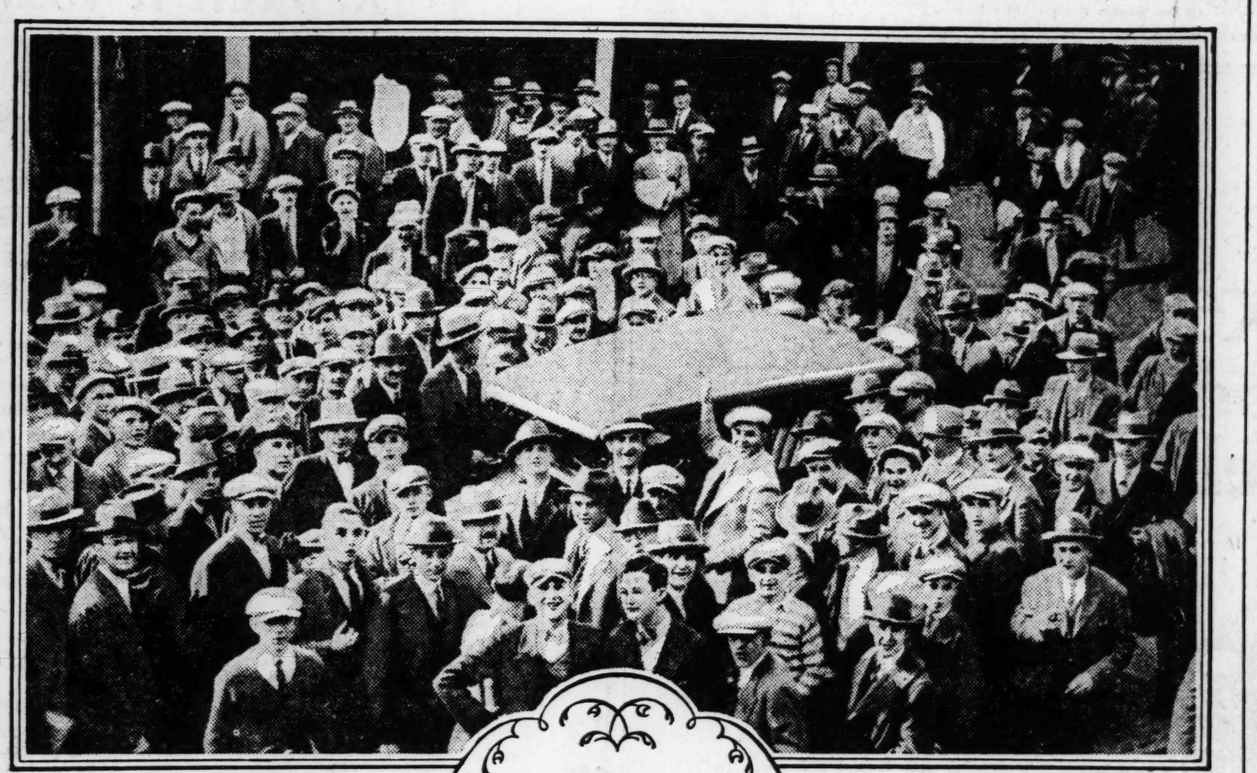
In all your life you've never driven any car like this before. Its wonderful activity . . . its flashing bursts of speed . . . and quick acceleration . . . have never been available in any car of this type.

Smart European-type body design

The distinctive body lines of the Overland Whippet frankly resemble the smartest automobiles of America and Continental Europe. Stand in front of this car and you can imagine yourself on the Boulevards of France.

The radiator is typically foreign . . . every line, curve and contour of the body is the result of painstaking craftsmanship and study.

Low-swung . . . rakish . . . graceful as a Whippet . . . that's the only way to describe it.



This New Car Offers:

30 miles on a gallon of gasoline

55 miles an hour . . . 5 to 30 miles in 13 seconds

4-wheel brakes . . . stops in 51 feet from 40 miles an hour

Turns in 34-foot circle . . . easiest car in America to park

5 feet 8 inches high . . . lower gravity center . . . greater safety

European-type body . . . more inside room than any other light car

Complete symmetry of design has been achieved with compact external dimensions.

Compared with contemporary big, bulky cars the Overland Whippet appears smarter and much more graceful. That's because height and length are in true artistic proportion.

In the Overland Whippet you have the feeling of riding closer to the ground . . . with the resultant sense of solidity and absence of that sidesway so noticeable in the conventional type of car. That high-up-in-the-air feeling is gone . . . here is a new kind of riding comfort. Step into this car and you will be surprised to find so much spacious room.

Due to its unique body and dash construction there is actually more head room and leg room than in any other car of this price class.

All seats are placed in a naturally restful position so that you have complete relaxation as you ride. No more sitting bolt-upright . . . you ride in this car, not on it.

30 miles on the gallon of gasoline

Here at last is an automobile that will run 30 miles on a gallon of gasoline . . . well over 1,000 miles on a gallon of oil . . . with extraordinary mileage on tires . . . and the smallest tax rating of any car in America today.

It cuts present operating costs just about in half. Doubles the value of every dollar you now spend for upkeep.

Exhaustive tests so far indicate that the average year's operating cost of the Overland Whippet should save you from $75 to $150 in gas, oil, tires and mechanical upkeep.

Money that goes back into your pocket. Money you must add to the list price of any less economical car you consider.

With this new factor of economical operation, list prices do not mean the same today.

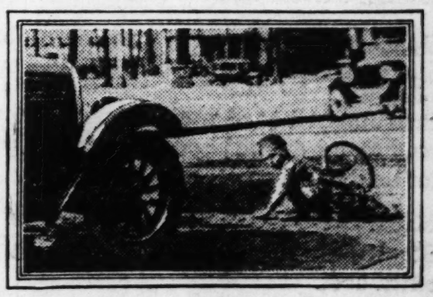
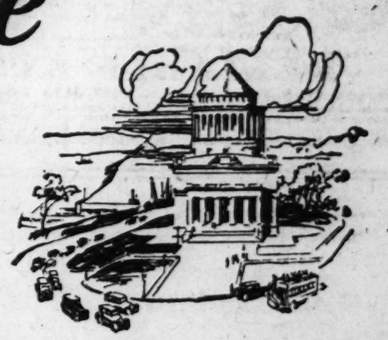
New standards of mechanical design

The new principles . . . the new ideas . . . the new standards of design in the Overland Whippet are bound to change your whole conception of light car mechanical features.

Its high-torque motor of 3 1/4-inch bore by 4 1/4-inch stroke, is by far the most efficient light car engine made in America . . . It actually develops more horsepower per cubic inch of piston displacement and pound of car weight than any other light 4-cylinder engine.



11-inch 4-wheel brakes enable this car to stop in 51 feet from a speed of 40 miles per hour



It has an 80-lb. torque . . . this means greater pulling power . . . the ability to master hills without shifting gears.

Because of this greater efficiency, the motor of the Overland Whippet costs more to build yet less to maintain than any other light car engine made today.

The Overland Whippet is the only light car that has the modern force-feed oiling system throughout the engine, instead of the old-fashioned splash.

It is the only 4-cylinder light car that combines genuine Chrome silicon steel valves with silent chain front-end drive and pump water circulation.

New chassis features

Horn, spark and throttle control are on the steering wheel as is standard practice on the highest price cars.

The position of the steering wheel is adjustable to fit the requirements of the individual driver.

The worm and gear irreversible steering mechanism is typical of this car's quality and is especially designed for full balloon tires and 4-wheel brakes.

Timken bearings are used throughout the front and rear axles.

All 4-wheel brakes are 11 inches in diameter, of the mechanical internal type. They provide 192 square inches of braking surface—far more per pound of car weight than any other American light car built today. Each is completely encased, thus not susceptible to weather conditions.

Brake and clutch pedal pressure has been developed so that a child could drive this car with ease and safety. Gear shift and emergency brake are right at your finger tips. Remarkable ease of gear shifting has been perfected in this new-type car. Underslung semi-elliptic Vanadium steel springs add immeasurably to its riding and driving ease.

Designed and built without restrictions

The engineers who designed this car . . . and the men who built it . . . have worked without restrictions.

Nothing has been spared that would improve its engineering or its quality.

The Overland Whippet is not a 1 or 2 year car.

Instead, it has been honestly built to give years and years of satisfactory service . . . to deliver thrilling and trouble-free performance for thousands and thousands of miles.

To millions of American women this car will bring an entirely new pride of ownership—a new delight in its comfort and refinements.

The car is beautifully finished with durable triple-coated lacquer that will retain its lustrous beauty for years and years.

The Overland Whippet is a quality car through and through. Your first inspection will tell you that.

You can compare the Overland Whippet with all other American light cars on the basis of price alone. But from the standpoint of engineering, performance, comfort and quality, it has established an entirely new criterion by which all other light cars must be judged.

The Overland Whippet is furnished in three body styles . . . Sedan, Touring and Coupe.

See this new-type car

Come, see this car. Take this advertisement with you and check the things we say here against what you find. We have purposely understated every fact. We have told you the story of the Overland Whippet without exaggeration.

You have never seen a car like this before.

With the introduction of the Overland Whippet, it is not sound judgment today to consider the purchase of a less modern car.

A new trend of automobile design is dawning in America. Other light cars of similar design will follow this one.

But today Overland . . . and Overland alone . . . offers you these unique engineering attainments.

Fine Camps at Parks.

Exceptional facilities are provided for motor campers at Yellowstone Park. There are now nine camps, large enough to shelter 200 to 400 cars, which are especially desirable. These have running water, clear as crystal, laundry appliances and free wood for camp fires. The wood, however, must be chopped as needed, trees being hauled in by teamsters. The only charge is $3 for each car which enters at one of the four gateways.

While motorists are directed to halt at one or the other of the nine camps, it is not compulsory to do so, and there are thousands of camping sites.

No excuse is accepted for failure to extinguish camp fires or to clean up refuse before departure. Due to the complete record kept of every car, escape is impossible if an offense is committed. This month a party of girls who left their camp fire burning managed to get 285 miles before they were apprehended. They were brought back by the rangers and ordered to extinguish the embers. They were then reprimanded and allowed to resume their journey. Usually a fine is assessed for such offenses or for picking flowers or defacing natural formations.

Motorists are privileged to go as they please over the 289 miles of roads in the park.

There is generally good fishing in Yellowstone Lake and in the streams in the park.

The park bears are a nuisance to campers, who will do well to put all food out of their reach when in camp. Also, attempts to pet the bears or to feed them are dangerous.

Within the park the Government exercises control of the sale of all supplies, and no extortion of any kind is permitted. Complaints of over-charge or short measure are followed by prompt satisfaction, if justified. The same supervision is extended over garages and repair shops at the four main camps. Care has been taken to see that all trails are plainly marked. In addition, the 85 rangers on duty are invariably courteous in supplying information.

AUTO AVERAGES 107 M. P. H. FOR RUN OF 24 HOURS

Renault Closed Car Covers 2589 Miles in Day and Night for Real World's Record.

Another astonishing record has just been made in France by a 45-140 horsepower six-cylinder Renault closed car, which ran for 24 hours at the rate of 107.8 miles per hour. Driven in turn by Gartfield, Plessier and Guilon, the Renault covered 4167 kilometers, or 2589 miles, in the 24 hours. This beat by 30.9 miles the previous record of 2280 miles made by a Bentley four-cylinder car driven by Jom. Duff, who drove in the recent Indianapolis 500-mile race and since has been racing on other American speedways.

The new Renault record was made on the Montlhery track, and the run was under the auspices of the Automobile Club of France, so will be generally accepted as official.

The Renault six-cylinder engine has a bore of four and one-quarter inches and stroke of about 6 and three-quarters, making it the largest of its type, except that in one American car—the big McFarlan. A stream-lined sedan body, with fabric paneling on a light, flexible frame, cuts down wind resistance for the Renault, which is said to have a stock chassis specially tuned for speed and with a special gear ratio. The same car recently averaged 117 miles per hour for 62 miles.

What's New in Motor Cars

New Jordan Models Arrive

NEW sedan and Victoria models of the Jordan "Great Line Eight," priced at a level that represents virtually a reduction of $200 on each, are being exhibited by the McCarthy-Archer Motor Co., 439 North Euclid avenue. Both are in custom style and replace former models on the larger Jordan chassis. The sedan has a Budd all-steel body, while the victoria body has all-vision steel front. Colors are optional and fitments are elaborate but in exceptionally good taste. Both new models are on the 125 1-2 inch chassis, with eight-in-line engine with three-inch bore and four and three-quarter inch stroke. Each is priced at $2495 at the factory. These two will be the only Jordan "Great Line Eight" models.

The Jordan "Line Eight" models, with eight-cylinder engine of two seven-eighth inch bore and four three-fourth inch stroke, will remain as they are, including five-passenger sedan, victoria and "Play Boy," and prices are announced to remain as new.

Snubbers Built to Suit Springs.

Many owners are under the impression that Gabriel Snubbers used on front springs are identical with those fitted at the rear. In principle they are identical, but the construction of each pair is varied to suit the difference in operating conditions between front and rear springs. Front springs are invariably shorter and somewhat stiffer than rears and their rate of vibration is faster. All Gabriel snubbers intended for use in front are therefore constructed to cope with this condition, while rear snubbers are built to function properly with longer and more flexible springs.

New Custom Style Jordan Sedan

Studebaker Custom Sedans Displayed

STUDEBAKER custom sedans on display by the Weber Motor Car Co. are most distinctive in appearance, style, fittings and finish being of the type associated with the work of the custom coach builder. The radiators, incorporating an emblem of the Goddess Atlanta, are very attractive. Lowering the chassis 3½ inches makes the bodies look five inches longer, and enhances the effect of length and grace. Upholstery is in Chase mohair with broad lace trimming. Curtains are of silk. Rear side windows are "D" shaped. Bodies are in two-tone effects. These models have one-unit instrument board, one-piece ventilating windshield of a reduced size, radiator heat indicator, automatic windshield wiper with operating mechanism on the outside of the glass, and two-beam headlights of acorn type.

New Steam Car Starts Instantly

A NEW steam car, which is said to be without any "bugs" and to start instantly after standing all night, is the Delling, which is being built by the Delling Motors Co. The Delling looks like a stylish gasoline car of 132-inch wheelbase, has Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes and the usual frame, transmission, axles, and steering gear. The price range is from $2895 for touring car to $3500 for the sedan model.

A simple vertical tube boiler supplies steam at 750 pounds pressure to a two-cylinder engine with 3¾ bore and 4½-inch stroke. Gear ratio is two to one.

Tests have shown that the Delling accelerates almost twice as swiftly, though more smoothly, than any gasoline car. It starts and runs so silently that only by listening hard can one hear the engine. It is said to have astonishing hill-climbing ability and to be very fast.

Fabric Shackles on Big Willys-Knight

FABRIC spring shackles, instead of the usual metal hanger type, are now standard on all Willys-Knight "Great Six" models, except the touring car. These fabric shackles are said to insulate the sprung parts of a car from the unsprung parts noiselessly and freely, and to eliminate 12 metal bolts and bushings that formerly required oiling and other attention, and to reduce wear and tear on the whole chassis and body. The fabric shackle consists of two resilient rubber fabric strips securely clamped between spring and frame. The rear end of each spring suspends the frame on a tension shackle, permitting alternate lengthening and shortening of the spring in accordance with body load. The front end rests on pivot shackles of the same material, embodying the same principle, and permitting a gentle rocking with the flexing of the spring.

DIAMOND-POINTED TOOLS USED ON MARMON CHASSIS

Quite a fortune in uncut diamonds is represented at the Marmon plant in Indianapolis, where the gems are used as points of specially developed cutting tools for making the main engine bearings of the Marmon chassis. These delicate, diamond tipped implements are designed for most exacting work, with a margin of accuracy of a ten-thousandth of an inch.

The method of mounting the diamond in the tool, the invention of one of the Marmon company's mechanics, is interesting. At the end of the steel holder is bored a recess just large enough to permit the diamond chosen to be inserted. The insertion being made, the steel is peened around the gem with a sharp pointed tool until the diamond is held securely in place. Then molten brass is poured into the space between the diamond and the holder, completely filling the recess. The holder is then trimmed down around the stone, and the diamond ground in diamond dust.

FEDERAL TRUCK CO. NOW BUILDING ITS OWN BODIES

The Federal Motor Truck of Detroit, manufacturer of Federal trucks, has added a body building plant which is turning out 50 bodies and cabs a day. It is impossible to buy standard bodies to fit all truck chassis, and interference with steering wheels, pedals, difficulty for the driver in getting out of the left-hand side, and other complications arise.

Federal-built bodies are, of course, designed for Federal chassis. Entrance can be made as easily from the left-hand side as the right. There is a maximum of room around the steering wheel and the pedal distances are correct. They are equipped with rear-view mirrors and windshield wipers.

TWO OF MICHIGAN'S MAIN HIGHWAYS MADE DUSTLESS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 24. Dustless motor car travel on two of the trunk lines of Michigan, West Michigan Pike and the Mackinac Trail, has become a fact. The State Highway Department announces that all gravel and roads of other than hard-surface construction on these two trunk highways, M-11 and M-13, have been treated with chloride or tar.

BARKER MOTOR CO. OCCUPIES NEW BUILDING IN MAPLEWOOD

The Barker Motor Co., Hudson-Essex dealer, has just occupied its new building at Manchester avenue and Big Bend road, at the western edge of Maplewood. Z. A. Barker is president of the firm, which opened the metropolitan agency a little more than a year ago on Bellevue avenue, and has rapidly expanded until it was necessary to get larger quarters. The new building is conveniently located for the Maplewood-Webster Groves district. The sales and display room faces Manchester with an entrance to the maintenance department in the rear from Big Bend road. The service department is of the latest approved type, well ventilated and lighted by large areas of steel sash windows of the adjustable type. It is well supplied with special machinery and equipment for quick service and maintenance work.

Cushion Padding Washed.

Every thread of long fiber cotton which goes into padding for Studebaker seat cushions is washed and thoroughly cleaned.

This New Engineering Idea

has revolutionized America's performance standards

THE day of the slow, cumbersome, bulky automobile has gone. A safer . . . more active . . . more powerful type of car has come to take its place.

The old school of engineering practice is rapidly passing out of existence. A new regime of scientific thought has started in America.

The change began 18 months ago.

When the Overland Six was first introduced it marked a revolutionary departure from all former standards of design.

This new car embodies the most advanced . . . the most efficient engineering . . . from both sides of the world.

It is a complete new car . . . brilliantly engineered as a unit. Not a modern body on a chassis that is 5 or 10 years old.

It is a car built to meet present-day performance standards.

You can drive it at an average road speed of 40 to 55 miles an hour without excessive strain on the engine.

Its "high-torque" power plant has ample power to master the steepest hills. Gear shifting has been reduced to a minimum.

It has a low gravity center. An outstanding engineering feature due to these modern principles of design. This means greater safety at all speeds. It means protection against sidesway and skidding.

And it means comfort such as you've never known before.

Buy a modern car if you want flashing, brilliant performance. Be sure you have these modern principles of design if you seek the utmost resale value.

Don't buy blindfolded. See the Overland Six and find out how modern engineering science has contributed to the safety, security and comfort of motoring.

FIRESTONE PREDICTS HIGHER RUBBER PRICES

Says Britain Intends Again to Restrict Exports at Expense of Americans.

On Aug. 1 the British Government will unquestionably adopt a new and more drastic restriction of the production and exportation of rubber, and I feel I should bring to the attention of the American car owner the full import of what this means, says Harvey S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.

The minimum price of rubber under the new restriction is to be set at 42 cents per pound. The Stevenson Restriction Act, as originally adopted Nov. 1, 1922, fixed the minimum price at 25 cents per pound. One of the arguments for the adoption of this act was to stabilize the price of rubber between 25 and 30 cents per pound. But instead of fulfilling this function, it not only increased the price beyond all reasonable limits, but also, through resulting wide fluctuations, made a very unstable, speculative and hazardous condition for the rubber manufacturers.

Price Went Soaring.

"Rubber was selling around 14 cents per pound when the Stevenson Restriction Act became effective. The act allowed 60 per cent of normal production to be exported and called for quarterly revisions according to the price of rubber. That is, if the price of rubber fell below an average of 25 cents per pound for any quarter, an additional 5 per cent restriction would be placed. If the price of rubber for any quarter averaged above 30 cents, an additional 5 per cent would be released. In this way, it was claimed, the price of rubber would be stabilized between 25 and 30 cents per pound.

"Immediately upon adoption of the restriction act the price of rubber advanced. The first quarter's average was above 25 cents per pound and sold as high as 38 cents per pound with virtually the same available rubber stock in the world as existed in the previous quarter when rubber was 14 cents per pound. It was not until the second quarter of 1924 that the average price of rubber fell below 25 cents, at which time an additional 5 per cent was restricted. Next quarter rubber was still below 25 cents and a further 5 per cent was restricted, thus allowing only 50 per cent of normal production to be shipped from the British colonies.

Prices Sent Still Higher.

"These additional restrictions advanced the price. In the last quarter of 1924 the price of rubber average above 30 cents per pound and 5 per cent was released. The price continued above 30 cents—in fact sold as high at $1.23 per pound in 1925—and 100 per cent of standard production was released on Feb. 1, 1926. These additional releases of rubber brought the price of rubber down from over $1 per pound the last quarter of 1925 to an average of 60 cents per pound in April, 1926.

"On April 26 the British Colonial office announced that if the price of rubber for the next quarter beginning May 1 did not remain above 42 cents per pound for the quarter, it would place a new restriction on rubber allowing only 80 per cent of normal production to be exported in the following quarter, starting Aug. 1, 1926. Rubber continued to decline rapidly until it reached 42 cents, and now the average price for the quarter is around 42 cents.

"As there are over 26,000 tons of rubber in London under the control of powerful interests whose purposes are best served by having this new restriction, and as the act calls for the price to be fixed for each day by the last sale at 3 o'clock, it should be very plain to Americans that this quarter's average is more likely to be a little under 42 cents than a little over, and that on Aug. 1 we will again have British rubber production and exportation restricted to only 80 per cent of normal production.

What It Will Cost U. S.

"This being so, I want to call particular attention to the fact that the minimum price of rubber fixed by the new restriction is 42 cents instead of a minimum price of 25 cents or 17 cents a pound higher. One cent a pound advance on rubber imported into the United States in one year means over eight million dollars. It is easy to figure that American automobilists have an additional minimum fixed charge on their transportation of $136,000,000 per year.

"It is unthinkable that Americans will sit idly by and allow a commodity so vital to our welfare, transportation and commerce to be held in the tight grip of a foreign monopoly that tells us how much rubber we may receive and how much we are to pay for it. In January, 1923—two months after the Stevenson Rubber Restriction act was announced—I presented figures and statements to officials in Washington showing them the seriousness of the situation and succeeded in April of the same year in having Congress appropriate $500,000 to investigate new sources of rubber supply. This investigation and investigations that I have made show there aer many tropical countries where rubber can be grown profitably."

SAFETY

There is no factor of safety, from double thick genuine plate glass to the solidarity of the roof, which escapes the painstaking investigation of Fisher inspectors. Quality above all else, is the creed of Fisher craftsmanship. And Fisher has always regarded the safety and comfort of those who ride in Fisher Bodies the surest proof of Fisher quality.

DODGE PLANT TOO BUSY FOR USUAL SUMMER SHUT DOWN

Due to record-breaking sales which continued long beyond the usual spring selling season, Dodge Brothers, Inc., does not plan the customary summer shutdown in many state. officials of the company expect to close for inventory or employes' vacations this summer," said President E. G. Wilmer. "For the time being, however, the night shift is being eliminated, and part of the force transferred to the day shift, with a daily production averaging about 1250 cars. This compares with the highest production attained last year of 1100 cars a day."

HIS CAR RUNS FAR CHEAPLY

W. O. Strome of New Carlisle, O., has made a sworn statement covering the high spots in the service he has had from his 1922 Reo seven-passenger car. He says that the 1922 Reo has piled up a total of more than 209,875 miles. This has been accomplished with only three valve-grinding operations and a similar number of carbon removals. The original pistons are still in the engines. The total cost of repairs for this mileage has been $184.07, or only $.0009 per mile or 11 miles for one cent of maintenance cost.

AUTO SHOW MANAGERS MEET

The ninth annual session of the National Association of Automobile Show Managers will meet in Chicago at the Drake Hotel July 27, 28 and 29. It is expected that there will be 34 automobile show directors at the meeting, which is 100 per cent of the membership, in which is included Samuel A. Miles, manager of the national shows held in Chicago and New York. Capt. Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis shows for the past 18 years, is national president of the organization and will preside at the meeting in Chicago. Following the meeting Lee will take his vacation at one of the Michigan resorts.

POLICE 'CAUTION CAR' HAS LOUD SPEAKER

Traffic Officer Broadcasts Traffic Lectures as It Roams Detroit Streets.

A loud-speaking police caution car is used in Detroit to make motorists drive properly. By means of radio, the voice of a traffic Sergeant riding inside is so amplified that, as the car rolls along the warnings broadcast may be heard throughout a block. Even the driver of a five-ton truck may be addressed directly, and cannot answer back.

How It Works.

The loud-speaking apparatus is mounted on a New-Day Jewett sedan, a type of car found suitable because of the facility with which it can cope with traffic congestion. The Detroit Police Department designed and installed the electrical apparatus, which is mounted in a special cabinet in the tonneau, with wires leading to the three loud-speaker horns on top of the car. The five-foot main horn points forward. Two small horns carry the sound to the sides.

The officer on duty speaks into a hand microphone, and though he talks in a natural tone of voice, his remarks issue from the three horns in volume sufficient to "tell the world."

This traveling traffic cautions the motorist who is observed in careless driving, and the jay-walker as well.

Sergt. Herbert O. Rounds, head of the Public Safety Bureau of the Police Department, is in charge of the daily work of the car. Usually he rides in the passenger's seat alongside the driver, ready with the microphone to talk safety.

Here is a sample of one day's work of the caution car: Hours in service, 5¼; safety talks delivered, 12; warnings for defective headlights, 40; speeders, 6; dirty or defaced license plates, 10; blocking cross walks, 15; double parking, 200.

The safety talks are delivered at street intersections, and thousands of pedestrians are reached thus every day. Violators of the traffic rules are never "written up" by the crew of the car. Sergt. Rounds holding that his lessons, delivered courteously and in good spirit, are more effective than more drastic action.

Blare of Publicity.

A large part of the effectiveness of the car in dealing with individual violators is due to the blare of publicity in which they find themselves. Anyone who has experienced that conspicuous feeling one has when a policeman privately tells him what's what, in the ordinary tone of voice, can imagine the sensation of having the caution car travel alongside his car delivering a traffic lecture that all other drivers and pedestrians in the block may hear and enjoy.

Except in flagrant cases, these corrections are administered in a friendly, helpful manner.

"We do not seek to embarrass violators," says Rounds. "Pedestrians and drivers are warned of violations they have committed and are shown how to co-operate in an effort to speed up traffic safely. Usually the work of the caution car is educational; only in flagrant cases do we take disciplinary action."

Here are some of the safety homilies delivered by Sergt. Rounds through the loud speakers:

"Hello, pedestrians—walk with the green lights always. The driver waits for you, now you wait for him. Courtesy between drivers and pedestrians will save a lot of lives.

"Watch that speedometer, son. It's the trigger of the deadliest gun ever invented.

"Whoa, there, speed kings! Your brothers are driving wheel-barrows at the house of correction.

Springs, Sand Springs and Bennett's Mills are some of the best known fishing haunts on the Niagnua. The roads leading to these places are all in good condition, and accommodations are at least as good as the average fisherman expects when on an angling trip. Between Bennett's Mill and Buffalo good angling may be had on Greas Creek.

North and east of Linn Creek, on the route back to St. Louis, there is good angling out of Bagnell, Tuscombia and Henley. Farther north on the Osage, and a few miles east of Jefferson City, is Osage City, out of which are a number of excellent fishing holes. Between Argyle and Freeburg—coming nearer to St. Louis—flows Marais Creek, which is known to many a bait caster as a prime bass stream. Still closer is Gascondy on the Gasconade, a natural rendezvous of city fishermen on a week-end holiday.

Bourbeuse River—a name that brings the thrill of pleasant memories to those who have whipped the stream—strikes the Meramec near Moselle and may be reached out of Union, St. Clair, Anaconda, Leslie or St. James.

Traveling deep into the heart of the Ozarks, one finds a number of other streams which, while far from home, offer such opportunities that those who can gain a week or two reprieve from their daily labors will not go wrong in spending the time on a camping and fishing trip along any of them.

The White River, south of Springfield, has been the topic of conversation of most everyone returning from a trip into that country. For the White River is said to be the habitation of every kind of fish caught in Missouri waters, including the trout, the goggle-eye and the seldom-caught wall-eyed pike.

Headquarters can be established at the resort towns of Hollister or Branson, where Lake Taneycomo is located, and the river may be successfully fished at many points miles below and above these places.

Two Trout Streams.

Of trout streams there are few in the state worthy of mention. Two, which are possibly the least known by the rank and file of fishermen, and by some of the most experienced for that matter, are within a few miles of each other. One of these, Jack's Fork River, is most accessible at Rymer's Rustic Ranch, eight miles north of Birch Tree. It has produced some of the largest catches of rainbow trout this year in Missouri. The other stream, known as Delaware Creek, is just outside of Alley Springs State Park, at Alley, north of Eminence. Possibly less than a dozen fishermen have whipped this stream this season. A. A. Drewel, superintendent of the Alley Springs State Park, recently took a six-pound trout out of this stream.

Nearer to St. Louis.

Places near St. Louis, where the proponent of the 'ole fishn' pole an' line" may have a Sunday outing with the family and in the evening, when the homeward trip is begun, have a minnow-bucket full of sunfish or catfish, are at a premium. Out of 20 places recommended, the writer found five worth mentioning.

It is hard to find a more likely fishing place in this region than the Femme Osage, two miles west of Hamburg. It is but 40 miles from St. Louis and is located in the bluff country which lies north of the Missouri River, west of St. Charles. Plenty of woodland for picnicking, and a large meadow for parking automobiles, skirt the stream. Sunfish, catfish, carp and crappie abound.

Other places as good are the Joachim River at Hematite, eight miles west of Crystal City on a county road leading off Federal Highway No. 61, and the Cuivre River, three miles north of Troy on Federal Highway No. 61.

The roads to all points mentioned in this article are good. Exact details may be ascertained from Automobile Club headquarters, 4223 Lindell boulevard, or the Joint Touring Bureau of the Post-Dispatch and the Automobile Club.

A last word of caution may not be amiss. Don't forget to post yourself on restrictions of the fishing laws. The officials of Missouri are efficient and their praiseworthy efforts to preserve the game resources make it awkward for those who do not comply with the rulings. Copies of the fishing laws may be obtained from any Chamber of Commerce secretary.

FORD BUYS FACTORY SITE ON HARBOR IN CALIFORNIA

The Ford Motor Co. has purchased a 40-acre tract on the connecting channel of the harbor at Long Beach, Cal. A contract entered into with the city obligates the city to dredge the connecting channel to a width of 600 feet along the Ford frontage, and maintains the present depth of 32 feet in that channel from the Ford docks to the open sea.

One of the stipulations of the contract is that the Ford company will construct a factory with a ground area of at least 350,000 square feet, and it is said that the plant will employ 12,000 men for preliminary work.

The present Ford plant in Los Angeles employs 700 men.

Dependable

The greatest thing about a Ford is the way it keeps going, even under the worst conditions. The dependability of Champion Spark Plugs—which have been standard Ford equipment for 14 years—is an integral part of Ford dependability.

A Rickenbacker factory branch has been opened at 2216-18 Locust boulevard by the Rickenbacker Motor Car Co. of Detroit, with S. C. Mitchell as manager. F. N. Mitchell has been in the automobile business since 1914, and is widely known in St. Louis and the territory. He retains George L. Griese as office manager, R. L. Lemon as service manager and John B. DELIVERIES OF NEW MOON LIGHT SIX ARE UNDER WAY

With the commencement of deliveries on its new "Jubilee" model, which is a light six in the $1000 class, the Moon Motor Car Co. enters on an entirely new period. For 20 years of successful automobile manufacturing the Moon has occupied a place in the medium-priced field and has never had heavy production, though it has gradually increased business to about 12,000 cars a year. The new light six in various models sells for $995 to $1195, and is an entirely original design, built to meet new conditions brought about by congested traffic in the large cities and high speed and special breaking required on the new concrete highways.

Deliveries of the new models have started at the rate of 60 per day and by August production of 100 per day is scheduled.

CHEVROLET DOES 25.71 M. P. G. TO WIN CALIFORNIA CONTEST

With a gasoline average of 25.71 miles per gallon, L. H. Lawrence of Monterey Park, Los Angeles, driving his own Chevrolet coach, was an easy winner in the light car class in the first annual Lake Arrowhead conservation contest held recently in California. Entries were restricted to amateur drivers and privately owned cars. Lawrence's gasoline average was the best by any of the 13 drivers.

Starting from automobile club headquarters in Los Angeles, the run ended 90 miles away at Lake Arrowhead, a mile above sea level, in the San Bernardino mountains. Lawrence's Chevrolet covered the distance on exactly 3.5 gallons of gasoline. The radiator used only four pints of water, a record unsurpassed by any other water-cooled car in the run.

PACKARD SERVICE MANAGERS STUDY METHODS AT FACTORY

Ways and means of improving service on Packard cars will be studied by more than 200 service managers of the Packard Motor Car Co., who will gather at Detroit July 28, 29 and 30. Every State in the Union and many parts of Canada will be represented in the convention, which is an annual affair.

The visitors will be addressed by executives of the company in sessions at the Packard factory and service demonstrations will be made by factory service experts. Packard was the first automobile company to institute standardized service charges for both time and material, a plan necessitating a standardization of each service operation.

FLINT CARS TO BE MADE AT PLANT IN NEW JERSEY

Since announcement that the factory of the Flint Motor Co. at Flint, Mich., would be sold to General Motors, there has been conjecture where the Flint car would be manufactured. Announcement is made that after Sept. 1 the Flint will be manufactured in the Elizabeth plant of the Durant Motor Co. of New Jersey. Colin Campbell, vice president of Durant Motors Inc., who is directing policies of the Star car division, will also direct Flint operations.

CHEVROLET PIKE'S PEAK CAR TO PASS THROUGH ST. LOUIS

Endurance Run From Morgantown, W. Va., to Summit of Mountain to Begin Aug. 2.

A West Virginia-to-the-top-of-Pike's Peak run by a Chevrolet car is scheduled to begin Aug. 2 at Morgantown, W. Va. The run is being backed by the Chevrolet Motor Co. and will be made a feature by Chevrolet dealers all allong the route, which will follow the National Old Trails through Indianapolis and St. Louis to Kansas City, whence the Victory Highway probably will be followed to Lemon, Colo., then the Pike's Peak-Ocean-to-Ocean Highway to Colorado Springs.

The run was proposed by the Chevrolet dealer in Morgantown, who will furnish car and driver. The car, a touring model, will be decorated with gold letters. Present plans are to run the car only during the day time, so it is likely to pass through St. Louis Aug. 5.

The Chevrolet dealers of the St. Louis metropolitan area expect to meet the car at Collinsville, Ill., and escort it over the Free Bridge and through this city to St. Charles, whence it will follow the airline highway via Columbia to Kansas City.

RADIO FOR AMATEUR AND EXPERT

One Cause of Poor Reception.

Poor radio reception at this time of the year is not always the fault of the receiving set or the broadcasting stations, but the trouble may be due to the aerial wire put up in the winter and which is now being touched by the branches or leaves of a tree. The fact that the tree is "fresh and green" means there is a lot of water in it and this makes the aerial wire become a second "ground" wire.

Patterns for Bus Wire.

When it is necessary to make a number of awkward bends in bus wire, use fuse wire as a pattern. This will make it a simple matter to learn the exact length of wire required to make a connection and also to see exactly how the wire should be bent. Another way the fuse wire can be used is to bend it in shape between the two points, then straighten it out, cutting off the bus wire to correct length, and bend wire at points with kinks.

TRAFFIC IN STATIONS BALKED BY DECISION

Department of Justice Ruling on Freedom of the Air Destroys Wave Value.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The recent Department of Justice ruling that definitely established the "freedom of the ether" as a fact has wrecked the hopes held by several station owners of selling out their plants at a handsome profit this fall. In several instances it is understood negotiations which were in progress for transferring broadcasting equipment and which were to have been concluded this month, have been broken off completely.

As a result, the market in stations which at one time threatened to rival the Florida land boom has collapsed. Asked prices for equipment have dropped below par, with no offers reported.

At least 10 of the more prominent broadcasting "voices" of the United States which had become established on desirable wave lengths, and which were widely known throughout the country, are understod to have been for sale this summer. With passage of legislation that would have assigned control over broadcasting to some Government agency, it is believed that a least half of these stations would have passed into other hands by winter. Prices rumored in connection with the transactions were $250,000 for one plant and $300,000 for another, together with the license to continue the use of the assigned wave length.

Following the Department of Justice ruling that has given permission to broadcast when, how and where one wishes, it is even held possible that one or more of these stations may suspend operations indefinitely rather than continue operating with the financial losses they are understood to have accepted for more than a year.

For some time the profits from broadcasting, except in the cases of the large commercial stations and the manufacturers of radio equipment have been questionable. Operating costs at increased power have been growing larger and the trend to payment for talent has made the problem of the broadcaster a more difficult one.

Although threats have been made in several parts of the country by broadcasters to take their troubles into court if the wave lengths used by them are adopted by other stations, no such action had been reported to the Department of Commerce today. It is believed likely however, that the question of infringement of property rights so far as broadcasting is concerned will soon be started on its legal journey to the United States Supreme Court.

BIG SHOW FOR "HAMS"

"The world's most mysterious and astounding feat"—and yet a common one—will be performed by the radio clubs of the metropolitan district in connection with the Radio World's Fair, in New Madison Square Garden, on the night of Sept. 13.

Out of equipment costing less than $40, the amateur wireless experts will erect a transmitting station that can reach in a few seconds the far ends of the earth, and will send and receive messages that night over a range of 10,000 miles. The apparatus will be assembled in front of the visiting broadcast enthusiasts and to thousands of them it will be the first manifestation of the mystic power within the short waves that carry code messages from continent to continent. It is expected, in the Council of the Second District, that this will be the most striking demonstration of its kind ever given in public, and that it will enlist into the army of "hams" a great many who may see and hear the immense possibilities of wireless communication.

Care of Storage Battery.

A storage battery requires attention at least once a week. Keep the solution at least half an inch above the top of the plates and separators, and pure distilled water should be added before charging the battery. The top of the storage battery receives a spray when the battery is fully charged due to gassing and this moisture should be wiped off and the top of the battery kept clean and dry. The solution should not be taken from one cell and put in another. If the gravity of any cell will not come up as do the others, there is no cause for alarm, but where there is a wide discrepancy the battery should be taken to a battery service station for adjustment. The terminals of the battery acquire a deposit which accumulates on the positive terminal much quicker than on the negative. If left there, it will eat away the connection and will also act as a high resistance to the flow of current. In many cases this will develop noises that have all the earmarks of atmospheris. They should be cleaned off thoroughly and a heavy coating of vaseline applied to them.

"C" Battery an Asset to Receiver.

An efficient "C" battery is a necessity in lengthening the lives of the "B" batteries. If the "C" battery is not replaced at the time new "B" batteries are installed, the current drain of the biased tubes will be greater than necessary. The cost of a "C" battery is less than 10 per cent of the cost of a 45-volt "B" battery.

Learn to Solder Correctly.

The use of tinned lugs and connecting wire makes the job of soldering a simple proposition. To make an efficient, good-looking joint, only two things are required—rosin-core solder and a clean iron. Have the iron sufficiently hot so that the wire solder melts quickly when touched to it. A little globule of solder is melted on the end of the iron and then held up against the part to be connected. The solder wire is then applied to the top of the joint and will flow evenly and make a good connection.

"Capacity Antenna."

The type of antenna, or "aerial," commonly used is known technically as a "capacity antenna" because the "flattop" acts as one plate of a conrenser and the earth as the other, the air between being the "dielectric" or insulating material separating these "plates."

TENOR AND SOPRANO ARE CHAIN FEATURES

Allen McQuhae and Joan Ruth to Give Interesting Program Tonight Through KSD.

A cosmopolitan program has been arranged by Allen McQuhae for the Atwater Kent radio hour tonight, when the Irish tenor will be assisted by Joan Ruth, former Metropolitan Opera soprano, and the orchestra directed by Nicholas Berezowsky.

The songs in the order of presentation will be English, German, Italian, American, Irish, Indian, American, Italian and English.

The opening air, Mr. McQuhae says, is a modification of the tune to a seventeenth century song, "The Vicar of Bray." Charles W. Cadman is considered one of the foremost students of Indian melodies. Frank LaForge, after his Viennese training, was for years the accompanist to the Polish opera soprano, Marcella Sembrich.

"Music knows no nationality," said Mr. McQuhae. "Many of these songs have been translated into wonderful English, although they seem to lose somewhat in the translated form. After all, music is a prayerly portion for the soul that rises above national distinctions."

The program, which will be broadcast at 9:15 Eastern daylight time, from Station WEAF and eight connected stations, is as follows:

Opening Air

If With All Your Hearts—Elijah.. ..... Mendelssohn

BEER DELIVERED BY AIRPLANE

Austrians Use Machines for Inaccessible Mountain Points.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch

VIENNA, July 15.—Austrians are using airplanes for transporting supplies to the almost inaccessible mountain regions in the higher Alps. In a test building material was just thrown overboard as the planes approached the place as near as safety justified. Food supplies were thrown out in padded sacks. Even beer in bottles was floated down in slings attached to small parachutes.

Recently a Tyrol plane was revictualling an isolated mountain hut near Kuehtal. The motor suddenly stopped and the pilot was forced to pancake on the tops of some pines. He was badly injured. The plan was damaged and had to be taken apart and carried down the mountain on mule-back.

MARY LEWIS EXPLAINS POOR SHOWING IN OPERA IN PARIS

Metropolitan Singer Had Just Four Days to Learn the Role in French.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 24.—"I was more nervous when I went on the stage at the Opera Comique the other night than when I made my debut at the Metropolitan," Mary Lewis said after her recent appearance in "La Boheme." "The critics were right in what they said about my poor showing. Mimi is not a hard role to sing, but I was told on Sunday night, four days before the performance, that I should have to sing the part in French instead of in Italian, as I had expected. So I had only four days to learn the French and the changes in music from the Italian.

"However, no excuses. I knew I was not doing well, but that is over and gone. I do think though that the audiences here are much more friendly to an artist than are those at home. We are really more critical of our own than of foreign artists when they appear on the American stage, but the audience at the Opera Comique treated me wonderfully.

Miss Lewis is leaving Paris for Salzburg, where she will spend the summer in study, returning to New York early in the autumn.

FRENCH WOMEN UNDERTAKE TO ABOLISH BULL FIGHTING

Crusade Conducted Through Their Paris Daily Newspaper, La Fronde.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 24.—La Fronde, a Paris daily written by women for women, has undertaken a crusade to abolish bullfighting in France by strengthening of the law against cruelty to animals. The paper would make penalties such that no one would attempt to organize the spectacles and would confiscate the receipts whenever a fight was held.

The popularity of bullfighting in the south of France is scarcely realized outside of the country as it is generally believed that the sport is limited to Spain. Thousands of persons, however, attend many bullfights every Sunday. The French claim that these fights are not as cruel as those staged in Spain.

La Fronde is not finding executive support from President Doumergue in its campaign, since the French president, a true son of the south, is a fervent supporter of bullfights.

SHAW CLAIMS FEE FROM LABOR

How He Got Out of Permitting Production of Play.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch

LONDON, July 10.—When the organizers of a labor demonstration at Alexandra palace wished to include in the program George Bernard Shaw's play, "The Shewing Up of Blanco Posnet," Shaw replied to their inquiries: "Under no circumstances can any play of mine be performed without payment of the standard author's fee. A labor advisory council ought to understand this as a point of trade unionism. What is more, unless you assure me that the admission charge will go to the players, and not to any other non-theatrical body, the performance must be classed as amateur, and the amateur fee paid to the Society of Authors. It is hard enough for my poorer fellow authors to meet the competition of my plays without the handicap of having them performed gratuitously. You see the point, I hope."

ACTIVITIES OF BOY AND GIRL SCOUTS

FIFTY BOYS COMPLETE HIKE TO IRONDALE

Prairie Schooner Accompanies Troop to Carry Luggage and Disabled Scouts.

The arrival of 50 Boy Scouts and their leaders this afternoon at Camp Irondale will mark the completion of the fifth annual Eight-day hike, the most extensive activity on the regular camp program. The boys, divided into three troops, the Kit Carson, Daniel Boone and Davey Crockett, left last Sunday for the 65-mile trip through the hills north and northwest of Irondale.

The entire trip was made on foot, although a prairie schooner accompanied the hikers to carry the luggage and any scout unable for any reason to continue to walk. Up to Friday morning no scout had been forced to use the wagon. A field kitchen was the only other vehicle taken.

The route followed was down Mineral Fork Creek to the Big River, down the latter stream to Blackwell, across to Bonne Terre and thence to Irondale. Sleeping was done in pup tents, the boys pitching camp each night along some creek or river. The time of hiking was varied, some days being entirely occupied with walking, some being spent in camp, and some being partly in camp and partly hiking. A few moonlight hikes were taken, the boys continuing until 10 o'clock, and pitching camp in the dark.

Entertained at Norwine's Mill.

Swimming was worked into each day's program, and fishing on the days spent in camp. The monotony of the hiking was broken by games played en route, ambushes of one troop by another, and passing tests. Some time was spent collecting arrowheads and other Indian relics, nearly every boy finding a number.

At Norwine's Mill the column stopped at the home of an old settler whose father had been a noted hunter and trapper in the pioneer days of the region, and heard from him the tales of the exploration and adventures in that district in his father's time.

A large number of tests were passed, and every boy qualified for one or more belt decorations.

The hike was in the charge of Activities Director L. L. Hotchkiss, assisted by two of the camp Junior Officers and two Scoutmasters. Junior Officer Arthur Worder, the Eagle Scout of Troop 34 who danced the Ghost Dance at the last Scout Circus, led the Davey Crockett troop; Morris Gruenwald of Troop 30 was leader of the Daniel Boone group; and Scoutmaster Dickemeyer of Troop 23, one of the leading hiking scoutmasters of the city, headed the Kit Carsons. Scoutmaster Moller of Troop 93, an expert on practical first aid, took care of the cuts, blisters, and bruises liable to 50 boys on an 85-mile trip. This assistance on the part of these two scoutmasters was entirely volunteered.

Fifty boys remained in the regular camp during the section, the trip being made only by those applying to go.

Fifty Boy Scouts, members of the Ranger Camp at the Irondale Reservation, will leave tomorrow morning on a 10-day, 200-mile horseback ride through the Ozark wilderness. The 50 are all picked first class scouts, the best riders and campers in the Ranger camp. Thirty-seven horses and a truck will furnish the means of transportation, the scouts alternating between riding in the truck and on horseback.

Go to Current River.

The objective of the trip, Round Springs Park on the Current River, will be reached Thursday evening. The return trip beginning the next day. The route to be followed is from Camp Irondale to the head waters of the Big River, over Highway 32, to the Hosau Creek, across country to the Sinking Creek, across Spence to the Current River. The return will be across the hills to Ellington, through country the roads of which have been used before only by logging teams. This territory is such a wilderness that the caravan will be forced to employ a guide to take it through on scheduled time.

From Ellington the riders will go to Lake Killarney, and spend one day there at the camp of the Tri-City Boy Scout Council. From Lake Killarney the route will be across country to Irondale.

The leaders in charge will be Field Executives Jack Wright and W. N. Leavitt of the North and Suburban districts and Sergeant George Avery, the camp riding instructor. A colored chef will also accompany the expedition.

It was planned at first to have 30 rangers make the trip, but applications were so numerous that the number was increased to 50, necessitating the use of the truck for each boy for part of the trip.

Headquarters.

Permit No. 1 to use the new Scouts' Den Overnight Camp was issued last week to Troop 71, of the Maple Avenue Methodist Church. The troop is camping there this week-end. Permits to camp were issued to 10 troops and 9 individual scouts last week, the first week the camp was officially open. The permits are free, but every troop or scout going individually must obtain one from headquarters.

West District.

Troop 60 held a check-up meeting last Friday night, after a month's suspension of activities. Most of the scouts are out of the city. An overnight hike to the new Lions' Den Reservation is being planned for next week-end.

Troop 71 is on an overnight hike to the Lions' Den camp this week-end, having gone down by bus. They are occupying an "unequipped camp," having taken their own luggage. The regular meeting was held Friday night at the Maple Avenue Methodist Church. Besides discussing plans for the hike, a flag ceremony and a drill were given, and games played.

Having lost its regular meeting place due to the closing of school, Troop 101 has been holding a series of campfire meetings on an estate near Ferguson, lent them by a Wellston business man. The usual program consists of a short swim, games, opening ceremony, songs, campfire stunts, Scoutmaster's Minute, announcements, and taps. During the swim boys who need it are given instruction that they may pass the swimming tests. On July 13 the troop had as guests at the campfire Troop 50, of the Normandy High School, the joint attendance being about 30.

Eight members of the troop, including both scouts and leaders, took their first overnight hike of the season to the Lions' Den Reservation last Saturday and Sunday. Two hours were spent in improving the camp site by clearing out leaves and brush, making a council ring, and in other ways. An observation hike was held to get a general idea of the layout of the reservation, and to enable the boys to study the plants and trees. Some time was spent in instruction in tracking, one scout later passing the test.

Suburban

Bob Steed, a member of the Junior Scouts, an auxiliary of Troop 3, Kirkwood, was admitted to the senior division of the troop at an investiture ceremony a week ago Friday, having reached his twelfth birthday. Troop 15, Webster Groves, was a guest at the meeting, at which were also the Troop Committee, 16 Junior Scouts, and 23 Regulars of the Kirkwood troop.

Prizes were awarded to the members of the Stag Patrol, which won a four-months' interpatrol contest with a 75 per cent perfect attendance record and 30 tests passed. Father Stack, Chairman of the Troop Committee, who awarded the prizes, spoke on the value of victory. Father Goyle, pastor of the church, talked on "Conduct," and Deputy Commissioner Dan Kelly told of the rallies and field meets to be held this fall in the suburban district. Games were played and ice cream and soda served. The next meeting of the troop will be held outdoors.

Troop 1, Overland, took an overnight hike last Saturday and Sunday to a tract of woods loaned them by the parents of one of the scouts. Two scouts had a camping site cleared when the troop arrived early Saturday morning, and the camp was made speedily and systematically. The Wolf, Moose and Eagle patrols took turns cooking. Hare and hound chases over the hills, swims and swimming races, test passing, bridging a creek, and a council fire with games, songs and patrol stunts featured the outing. The Eagle Patrol won the stunt contest with a "Snipe Hunt."

Sunday School services were held Sunday morning. The bugle calls were handled by Freddie Lamb, who just learned bugling at Irondale. He is to be appointed official bugler for the troop.

Troops 3 tnd 11, Webster Groves, will resume meetings a week from next Thursday. The latter troop is planning a several days hike for next week.

GIRL SCOUTS' CAMP AN INDIAN VILLAGE

St. Louis Groups at Sycamore Hollow Carry on Activities as "Tribes."

Sycamore Hollow, the new day camp of the St. Louis Council, Girl Scouts, is now an Indian village. Each new group of girls at the camp chooses the name of an Indian tribe and carries on activities under that name. Each tribe is given official recognition by having its sign placed on the "main wigwam."

The activities of the tribes are varied, but all follow a general plan. One of the most important is the laying of a nature trail by each unit. On these a route is selected and every new tree and flower found is labeled with a small white tag. Already 16 species of trees and 14 of flowers have been discovered, identified and made parts of the trails that now run throughout the woods. The trails already laid are used by newcomers for study before they start laying their own.

Tribes Contribute Equipment.

Each tribe also makes and contributes some article to the permanent camp equipment, a period being set aside during the afternoon for this work. The first group in camp, the Blackfeet, selected a fallen sycamore for a flagpole, cleared its branches and erected it. The next tribe, the Polowattoms, cleared a shady spot of weeds and made a wall of leaves—a place in which future campers could cook and eat lunches. Another tribe fashioned a rustic bookcase for the camp library, and others have contributed book racks, towel racks, a washstand and a bulletin board.

A new honor, the Summer Campers' Badge, has been worked out by the camp staff for St. Louis scouts. The requirements include a complete knowledge of the trees, flowers and birds to be found at Sycamore Hollow, an original dish that can be cooked outdoors, the planning of a campfire program, and the composition of a camp song.

Eligibility List.

As these requirements are advanced work, only second-class scouts who are in high school are eligible to earn the badge. Scouts holding the Summer Camper's Badge will be permitted to work on fall and winter projects, including week-end camping trips, leading to the Winter Campers' Badge. Scouts earning both badges will be awarded a third—the St. Louis Campers' Badge.

The aspirants for the Summer Campers' Badge took an all-day hike last Thursday, under the leadership of Miss Margaret Taylor. While on the hike each girl prepared the new outdoor dish she had originated. This trip was a preliminary to the overnight hike that will be the final test for the badge.

The badges will be awarded at a Count of Awards to be held the last day at the camp. Merit badges and first and second-class badges earned during the summer will also be presented at the court.

Margaret Arand, Rose Lieberman, Dorothy West and Josephine Woracek passed the fire-building test on a hike held by Arrowhead Troop 7 to Sugar Creek, west of Kirkwood, last Sunday. Games were played and the girls cooked their lunches over open fires. The regular meeting of the troop was held Thursday evening on Miss Eckleman's lawn.

The girls of Conia Troop 56 were formally presented with their pins at a ceremonial meeting last Monday night. Besides the investiture ceremony a short program was given. Fathers Stolbe and Hollender were guests of honor. The troop has plans for an outdoor meeting tomorrow night. They intend to build a campfire and cook over the coals.

Wrinkles Removed "While You Wait"

It has been discovered that the mere application of a spoonful of Powdered Tarkroot mixed with a spoonful of lemon juice, actually removes wrinkles and creases in fifteen minutes or less! There's no rubbing, no work, and the expense is trifling—less than three cents! It is only necessary to spread the mixture over the face, sit down before the mirror and watch those unwelcome marks of age, illness or worry disappear like magic. The effect is incomparably better than that produced by massaging.

The mixture, of course, is perfectly harmless. While on the face a pleasant, soothing sensation is experienced. It is easily washed off. Aside from its remarkable effect on wrinkles, there's nothing better for baggy cheeks or chin. No woman who purchases a package of Powdered Tarkroot from her druggist will regret having done so.

Old Folks Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Most men and women past fifty must give to the bowels some occasional help else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting natural bowel "regularity"—or must you purge and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural, regular bowel movement even for those chronically constipated. It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Meeting today The Demands of Tomorrow

"The automobile is fast becoming the American family's roving home, and just as the average family does not trade its fixed home every year, it does not want to trade its automobile," says Ray W. Sherman, Editor of Motor, and leading authority on automobile trends.

Continuing his leading article in the Show issue of Motor, he states,

"There are two great advances demanded by the public:

1. ONE IS CARS THAT WILL GIVE SERVICE FOR YEARS AND NOT HAVE TO BE TRADED IN.

2. THE OTHER IS MAINTENANCE THAT DOES NOT LAY A CAR UP FOR SO MANY HOURS AS IS NOW THE CUSTOM AND NECESSITY."

Reo leads all American cars in meeting both of these demands.

1 Reo leads all American cars in giving years of service without needing to be traded in.

That is proved by Reo's amazing achievement of being America's longest lasting automobile—an achievement attested by every recognized method of computing automobile life.

These prove that Reo offers you over three more years of life than the average American automobile.

You may not wish to keep your Reo until its days are over.

But the length of life built into it means that far beyond the limits of ordinary car endurance, your Reo will give you velvet-footed miles of travel, miles free from worry of breakdowns or minor troubles, and that its resale value will be high.

Ask a Reo salesman to show you the facts about Reo's long life. Go over a Reo for yourself and see why it is possible for Reo to outlast all other American cars.

The Second Great Advance

2 Reo leads in construction that makes maintenance and repair easy, economical and quick.

The Reo owner pays less for maintenance and repairs for two reasons:

First—Because Reos so seldom need repairs. The fact that Reos are kept so long testifies to that.

Second—Because Reo, realizing years ago that these advances would be demanded, has so built that repairs can be made more quickly and with less cost for labor and parts.

When repairs are needed, most can be made more quickly, and at less cost on a Reo than on any other car in its price class or of greater price.

They can be made more quickly on a Reo than on most cars costing less. They can be made more cheaply, counting labor and parts cost, than on some cars whose original cost is below Reo's.

There are many repairs that can be made on a Reo far more quickly and at much less cost than on a car which is constructed to older standards. Only a few of the many can be mentioned here. Come in and ask us to compare Reo repair costs with yours.

When the hot days spell "go to the hills," a Reo takes you carefreely, comfortably, economically—year after year after year.

A Few Instances

Freedom from layups and maintenance costs:

Valve grinding and carbon removal are required only one-third to one-fourth as often as on most cars.

The radiator is so constructed as to be practically frost-proof.

Adjustable bearings save the cost of new ones.

The Split-Second Steering Gear seldom, if ever, needs adjustment.

And many others.

Come in and see them.

Clutch repairs. These can be made without disturbing the motor, transmission, or rear end. The time necessary is from ½ to ⅔ less than on ordinary cars. So easily and quickly is the work done, so low are parts prices, that a new clutch can be installed on a Reo for a complete cost which is 33⅓% less than just the labor cost on some others.

Come in and compare your costs with Reo's.

Transmission repairs. These can be made without disturbing clutch, motor, or rear end in from ¼ to ⅓ the time commonly needed by other cars.

Come in and compare your costs on this with Reo's.

Timing gears. There's no need for lifting or supporting the Reo engine while installing new timing gears as must be done on so many other cars in its price class.

Come in and compare your costs.

Rear axle inspection. The Reo rear axle can be dismounted, all gears taken out for inspection in half the time and at less than half the cost necessary for many other cars in its price class.

Come in and compare your costs.

Starter. It's almost impossible to damage a Reo starter. The most an owner could do would be to break one or more links in a starter chain—and a new chain can be bought and installed for $3.00 or $4.00 against the usual cost of $30.00 to $40.00 for repairing the most common damage to the ordinary starter—breaking a gear tooth.

The Two Great Advances Are Here

The two great advances demanded by the public:

"1. Cars which will give service for years and not have to be traded in.

"2. Maintenance that does not lay a car up for so many hours as is now the custom and necessity." Are today found in Reo, and have been for years.

For years the forward-looking, veteran car-buyers who first asked for these advances, have been buying Reos.

Come in and compare Reo maintenance and repair costs with yours.

Then take out a Reo and drive it.

Quiet Season of Drama, But Many Plays Ready For Fall Offerings

About 300 New Dramas Are Announced for the Coming Season of Which Half May Actually See the Lights of Broadway.

By WELLS ROOT.

NEW YORK, July 24.

IT is not so much the heat as the humanity which make matters hard to bear in the summer theater. Spectators who remain contentedly indoors during intermissions all winter, crowd damply to the lobby and make the night hideous with horrid cries for service at nearby orange juice stands. These, added to the usual press of tobacco-using patrons in the foyer, make between the acts a breathless and depressing period. Particularly at openings when regularly accredited first-nighters were bent on passing the time of night.

It was noted at the opening of "Pyramids" last Monday that the sharpest discourtesy a young man might pay his lady was to take her to a dripping opening in July. A discourtesy which could only be atoned for by paying what is considered by the masses the high compliment of invitation to a first night in the cool of the season.

"PYRAMIDS," however, was not too severely disconcerting, despite the weather. Samuel Ruskin Golding indicates that he has made considerable progress in the art of playmaking. Last year he wrote "Open House," in which Helen MacKellar played for some few weeks at Daly's and the Criterion. When this venture appeared it seemed a particularly inexpert bit of writing for the theater. In our report on that endeavor ran the sentence, "the shadow of a smile brushed over the audience now and again as the drama drew taut and trembled with emotion." It was one of those plays in which emotions were so crudely wound that something snapped occasionally and the audience laughed at the wrong moment.

There were traces of this same soaring style in "Pyramids." Yet Mr. Golding has clipped his literary wings to the point where the audience took his play seriously. They were frankly excited through substantial portions of the second and third acts. From these indications it seems safe to say that this author's feeling for the theater is true. That feeling is, after all, the first essential for a playwright. Perhaps in future efforts Mr. Golding will fit his effects into a framework of reasonable dialogue. Then he should write a good play.

Whether he writes for art or dollars we do not know. He is a successful lawyer, over 40 years of age they say. He finances his own plays. What has drawn him to the theater it is difficult to judge. Unless perhaps it is the sentiment held by almost every one who goes often to the theater. Mr. Golding has said to himself, "I can write a better play than that." He has had energy to test his conviction.

CARROLL McCOMAS plays the lead in "Pyramids," the part of an earnest wife who barters her virtue for her husband's prison pardon. She plays it very well, all things considered. The performance makes one wonder just how good Miss McComas would be if she found herself in a really good part for a change. She is one of several actresses who have had little luck these past few seasons. Prominent members of the same club are Helen MacKellar, Mary Newcomb and Marjorie Rambeau.

In recognition of this very energy we most heartily wish Mr. Golding success. We also are a little pleased that his first play was terrible and that his second was only dir. There is no department of the theater, not excluding writing about it in the papers, that the general citizen is not convinced he could do a great deal better than whomever he happens to be inspecting at the time. There is scarcely a woman of leisure in the heart that does not believe in her heart that she might have been a glowing actress. Or a silk merchant that does not feel he could write plays. The significant feature of the matter is that she probably would have been a good actress and he an excellent playwright. But, like everything else, it would have taken time. For details inquire of Mr. Golding.

NOW that the season has reached its quietest period and there is nothing big and vital to complain about, we would like to say a word on smoking manners on the stage. Possibly it is first night nervousness that forces so many actors and actresses to let cigars and cigarettes go out on them. Yet it would seem a simple thing to ask that these offenders take one or two good puffs between lines. There is nothing so inefficient as a dead cigarette. We are hopefully looking forward to the director who makes an actress not only smoke a cigarette to the end, and, to prove it, light the next one off the butt. In case all this seems unimportant recall Raquel Meller. When she sang "Flor de Mal," considered by some the truest interpretation of her repertory, she lighted a cigarette. She did not let it die after a few anemic puffs. She leaned against the edge of the stage and smoked like a burning building.

THERE are only one or two weeks now of idleness. By the second week in August the managers will again be pelting premiers at the populace. They are already warming up in bull pens just be-

"Count of Luxembourg" At Municipal Opera

"THE Count of Luxembourg," which the Municipal Theater Association will revive tomorrow night for the ninth week of this summer's al fresco series in Forest Park, was one of the successes of last summer at the Municipal Theater.

The score of "The Count of Luxembourg" is by Franz Lehar, composer of "The Merry Widow," and while the latter work achieved what is probably the greatest of all light opera successes, there are many who declare that this week's Municipal Opera offering is by far the better of the two.

Around the story Lehar has placed a garment of melody of high quality from the musician's standpoint, but sufficiently melodious and simple in construction to catch and hold popular fancy. The principal musical numbers are, in the first act: "Pierrot and Pierette," "A Carnival for Life," and "Love, Good-By." In the second act: "Hail Angele, Our Nightingale Angel," "Pretty Butterfly," "Her Glove," "In Society," "Love Breaks Every Bond," "Rootsie-Tootsie," "Are You Going to Dance?" and "Say Not Love Is a Dream."

"Iolanthe" is tonight's bill at the Municipal Theater. The eleventh week of Municipal Opera begins a week from tomorow night with the initial performance on the Forest Park stage of "Woodland," a musical fantasy by the author and composer of "The Prince of Pilsen."

The Garden Theater enters upon its last regular week tonight with a continuation of "Varieties," in which some new vaudeville artists will appear.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

MARY PICKFORD and Douglas Fairbanks have booked passage for the United States from England on the Majestic, sailing Aug. 19. It is understood that studio conditions abroad made it inadvisable at this time for them to make a picture together in Europe. They plan to remain in Hollywood but two weeks after their arrival in September and then sail for the Orient, visiting China and Japan, according to their present itinerary. Doug has been promising to visit the Orient, so glowingly pictured in his "The Thief of Bagdad," ever since he made that picture.

In the general tendency of motion picture producers to record American progress in terms of celluloid comes Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's announcement that it has commissioned Irvin Cobb to "do" a story of the building of the Panama Canal. Who the director will be and what will be the title of the picture hasn't been decided as yet.

Gloria Swanson has purchased an original story by Leonore J. Coffee entitled "The Woman's Battalion of Death," which Miss Swanson will make as one of her early films for United Artists release.

Hunt Stromberg, former St. Louis newspaperman, and now one of the producing heads of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has announced his leads in the Reginald Barker production of James Oliver Curwood's "The Flaming Forest." Antonio Moreno and Renee Adoree will be cofeatured.

Rex Ingram's third foreign-made picture reached America last week, when Alice Terry, its star—and, incidentally, Mrs. Ingram—brought "The Magician" with her to this

What a Colorful Farewell If Carter's Brain Children Had Attended His Passing

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

IF the brain's children, like those of the flesh, were wont to gather at one's deathbed, what a bizarre menagerie of mooncalves would have hung upon the last moments of Lincoln J. Carter at his farm, near Goshen, Ind., where this virtuoso of blood and thunder, having compounded 35 or more "shockers" for the stage, had devoted nearly 20 years of retirement to the culture of vegetables and roses!

First surely would have come stalking, with unconscionable strides, the silk-hatted villain, his heart blacker than the stain of his flaring mustache; a wretch subsisting on a diet of hisses and addicted to the heartless foreclosure of mortgages, as well as to arson, homicide and such debonair and frolicsome peccadillos as binding the heroine to the ties in the track of an oncoming express, on trussing her across the carriage of a circular saw, of tossing her blithely over Niagara Falls.

NEXT, tragically pacing, would have entered the heroine herself, wan and lovely—a damsel of most consuming chastity, as you may be certain, despite distressing evidence to the contrary, but one afflicted with a strange passion for falling devotedly into every snare set by her scoundrelly pursuer.

Beside her would tower the noble, manly young hero, rather deficient, it is true, as to this, but ready at a split-second's chance to plunge into battle on behalf of his lady, with hordes of human foes or with raging sea and headlong torrent.

Of course, that piteous and long-suffering chee-ild would toddle in—the harassed infant of melodrama which staggered under a cloud of suspicion as to its paternity, but was invariably salvaged at the end, with benefit of clergy, through the discovery of those priceless pa-a-apers which the villain had quaintly concealed in a knot-hole of the ancestral oak. And then the soubrette, to be recognized by herskittish mien, her poke bonnet and her anxiety to burst into song at the most trifling provocation.

LAST, but not least, among scores of others, would appear the world famous surgeon, who was accustomed to assemble his class of budding sawyers, lift the cloth from a supposed cadaver, recognize the features of his own wife and utter the raucous bellow: "My Gawd, 'tis her!"

In company with these would have attended also the phantoms of a multitude of the inanimate progeny of Carter's brain—the series of sensational scenic effects which he created, and of which he was far prouder than of the living offspring of his theater.

They included tornadoes which literally swept the stage, with shrieking winds, lightning and thunder, collapsing houses, uprooted trees and a swirl of debris across the proscenium. Whereupon, in the halcyon days of the dramatic dreadful, some 20 or 30 years ago, spectators would leap from their seats with screams of terror, while the gallery gods, thrust forward over the rail, would barely escape plunging down from their 10-cent heaven in the transports of their excitement.

THERE were devices also for the harrowing imitation of railroad wrecks, mine explosions, races between locomotives, the conflagration of capitals and midsea collisions of steamships, with the Papier-mache prow of one vessel shearing through the deck of another and precipitating hero and heroine into a tumult of billows.

One of his fearsome machines was a locomotive which appearsd to rush down from the horizon and thunder to the very footlights. It was not unusual for persons in the forward tiers to spring to their feet and flee for their lives. He was canny enough to patent 25 or 30 of these inventions, as a firm of New York producers found to their cost when they embodied one of his contrivances in a revue during 1914. Carter sued, and it cost $6000 to settle his claims.

During an active career of 25 years, serving as his own financial backer, director and scenic designer, Carter brought forward about 35 of his singular divertissements —so many that he himself could never remember all their titles. His first opus, "The Fast Mail," which he produced while still in his 'teens with $700 of his own money—none of the managers whom he interviewed would touch it—earned $60,000 during its first year. "The Heart of Chicago," a shocker based on the Chicago fire, ran for 14 years at stands all over the United States and in England.

OTHER pieces, all of them financially prosperous, were "The Eleventh Hour," "The Flaming Arrow," "Remember the Maine," "Lost in the Desert," "Down Mobile," "Bedford's Hope," "Under the Dome," "The Eye Witness" and "Tempest and Sunshine." With these and similar entertainments, he wrested affluence from the "ten-twent'-thirt'" circuit, which flourished in hosts of "family theaters" throughout the country during the pleistocene era of the American playhouse.

The father of modern melodrama was born 61 years ago at Rochester, N. Y., the son of Cary Carter. Head of a troupe of strolling players. While Lincoln was still a child, his father set out for the West, playing Shakspeare at tank towns along the Union Pacific. In San Francisco a ouija board, in which the Carters set implicit faith, directed them to Salt Lake City, where they became members of Brigham Young's stock company. In their house was born Maude Adams, and the master craftsman of chills and thrills liked to boast that, as a tiny urchin, he was the first male creature to lay eyes on the future Peter Pan.

WHILE still a lad he betook himself to Chicago with "The Fast Mail" in his pocket. In a few years, with activities centering in Chicago and Indianapolis, he became the foremost producer of melodrama in the country. About 19 years ago he was driven into retirement by the movies, which captured his public and proved able to go his most spectacular efforts one better. His principal emergence was under the inspiration of the war, in 1918. A play in his best style, "The American Ace," was produced in New York, but public taste had changed and it failed lamentably.

The formula of his art was simple.

"I notice the things that interest people,' he said once, "such as fires, earthquakes, holdups, train wrecks and airplane crashes. Then I build stories around them."

It is significant that he spent five weeks in writing "Bedford's Hope," and three months in planning its scenic effects.

He was vain of the fact that his productions were morally immaculate, with virtue invariably triumphing and with sin ending in the arms of the law or getting itself pulverized between the cowcatchers of colliding locomotives. But whenever he acted in one of his plays he always chose a villain's role.

"My villains are the only characters with a vestige of good sense," he would sometimes remark at candid moments. "My heroes are brave and my heroines pure, but I'm afraid they aren't very bright."

GOLTERMAN ENGAGES SPANISH TENOR FOR 'CARMEN' HERE

ARRIVING yesterday from New York, Guy Golterman, director of the Grand Opera Association, announced that for the opening performance of "Carmen" at the Municipal Theater Monday night, Aug. 23, and for two additional performances during the week, he has engaged J. de Gaviria, a young Spanish dramatic tenor, who arrived in this country only a few weeks ago. Gaviria has been heard only twice since his arrival in America, once in Philadelphia and a few days later in Atlantic City. Gaviria will forego all public appearances until after his "Carmen" engagement, so that his real American debut in grand opera will take place in St. Louis.

Chorus rehearsals were begun last Tuesday under the direction of Giuseppe Cesati, assistant conductor of the Metropolitan Opera, and will continue at the rate of four each week until the opening performance.

yond the metropolitan fences. Residents of Long Branch and Atlantic City have seen nothing but new plays in the past eight weeks.

Last Sunday was printed in metropolitan newspapers summaries of some 300 plays planned for the coming season. Of these perhaps 150 will materialize for metropolitan production. By late July next year only a little over a score of these will remain to tell the story. Of these perhaps a half dozen will be notably worth seeing. At present there are only five brilliant survivors of the starters of 1925-26. They are "Craig's Wife," "Lulu Belle," "What Every Woman Knows," "The Great God Brown," and "At Mrs. Beam's." Seekers after forgetfulness patronize principally the following musical diversions: "Iolanthe," "Sunny," "The Merry World," "Ziegfeld's Revue," "The Cocoanuts," "Scandals" and "The Vagabond King."

country. The picture, made from Somerset Maugham's novel, has an all-foreign cast, with the exception of Miss Terry.

Lillian Gish's supporting cast in "Annie Laurie" will include Norman Kerry as the masculine lead; Creighton Hale, Russell Simpson and Hobart Bosworth. John S. Robertson, who has been responsible for most of Richard Barthelmess' successes, will direct the picture.

The first announcement concerning the cast for "The King of Kings," Cecil B. de Mille's forthcoming special, sets forth the information that Joseph Schildkraut will portray Judas in this picturization of the life of Christ.

"The Charleston Kid," an adaptation of Gerald Beaumont's story, "Even Stephen," was started in a New York studio on July 19. Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall have the featured roles and Louise Brooks and William Collier Jr. have the second leads.

Bebe Daniels, James Hall, Charles Paddock, El Brendel and the other members of the company making "The Campus Flirt," have returned from their location work on the University of California campus at Berkeley.

Eddie Cantor's "Kid Boots" unit, with a cast including Clara Bow, Lawrence Gray and Billie Dove, and Raymond Griffith's company making "You'd Be Surprised," with Dorothy Sebastian and Earle Williams, are holding the spotlight in the studio.

Percy Marmont is vacationing following a slight seige in the hospital and will be back before the camera shortly.

"The Ace of Cads," starring Adolphe Menjou, has gotten under way at the Paramount Long Island studio, with Luther Reed directing. Playing opposite Menjou is Alice Joyce. Philip Sterling has the important role of Basil; Sally Crute is the barmaid. Others in the cast will be Norman Trevor, Eric Blore and Clara Bow. Miss Bow was the latest to be assigned to the picture. She now is working in Hollywood in "Kid Boots" and is expected to report in New York the end of July.

"You Never Know Women" has been selected definitely as the title for Florence Vidor's first starring picture for Paramount, which was produced under the tentative title, "Love Magic." This is from an original story by Ernest Vajda, and was directed by William Wellman.

Closely following the announcement that Marshall Neilan would take a troupe of players and technical workers to Europe, to film two motion pictures, comes word that plans have been changed and that the next Neilan production is to be made in Los Angeles. This is to be a film version of an original story written by Neilan and will have Betty Bronson in the starring role. Though a title has not been selected for it, the story is already being prepared for the screen by Benjamin Glazer.

Ray Rockett's first production for First National, which is the screen version of Cosmo Hamilton's novel, "Paradise," was completed last week at First National's New York studios. Milton Sills has the starring role with Betty Bronson featured in the leading feminine part. Others in the cast include Noah Beery, Kate Price, Charles Murray, Lloyd Whitlock, Claude King and Ashley Cooper.

LEPER COLONY GETS FILMS SENT BY MOVIE INDUSTRY

THE more than 200 reels of motion picture films which the motion picture industry contributed to the leper colony in the Panama Canal Zone have reached their destination and are now being shown regularly to the unfortunate victims of the dread malady.

Col. W. P. Chamberlain, chief health officer in the Canal Zone, in a letter thanking the moving picture producers said apropos of the gift:

"We now have at the colony nearly 100 lepers in various stages of the disease; many of the patients will probably never leave the colony alive. In ages they range from mere children to the very old and decrepit. So narrowly circumscribed are their lives that the projection apparatus donated by the American Congress on Internal Medicine and the American College of Physicians, through the efforts of Dr. Gerry Morgan, and these films will play a tremendous part in their entertainment and the morale of the institution."

SUCCESSFUL WHERE OTHERS FAILED

Says Belleville Woman in Speaking of the Great Herb Extract Remedy Known as Herb Juice.

"I, like many other people today, suffered from a severe case of constipation. Of course you know there are various ailments which go along with a constipated condition and I had them all. I tried everything that was recommended to me in treatment of this condition but they all failed, until I was fortunate enough to find your most remarkable Herb Juice, and it has certainly done its work well," said Mrs. William Sieben, 814 W. Monroe St., Belleville, Ill., in a recent conversation with the special demonstrator at Reis Drug Co.

MRS. WILLIAM SIEBEN.

Continuing her statement, Mrs. Sieben said, "It is very gratifying indeed to know that we have at least one remedy we can depend upon, and that is something that I was badly in need of. I was terribly constipated, had pains in my stomach, troubled with that gassy feeling after meals, and was just run down generally. I was almost frantic when I saw Herb Juice advertised in the local papers, telling of the good it had done for others. And I am very glad indeed that I gave it a trial, because it has certainly done its work well. I am entirely rid of constipation and of course it goes without saying that the various other little ailments have also disappeared. My appetite is very good and I now eat heartily without any fear of bad after effects, such as gas and bloating. Have gained a great deal of energy and strength, and, in fact, I just feel like a new woman. Since I have been so wonderfully relieved from my sufferings I feel that I should let others know about this great remedy in order that they too may have the same opportunity as I did to rid themselves of their ailments. I know beyond a question of a doubt that it is the best medicine I have ever taken and I shall always consider it a pleasure to speak a good word for it."

This great laxative medicine is an Herb Extract preparation know as Herb Juice and is out-selling any medicine where it has been introduced. Many are calling daily to see the special demonstrator at Walgreen Drug Company, 514 Washington avenue, giving statements for publication, praising this great remedy that their friends may be induced to try it.

MEMORIAL PLANNED FOR NEGRO SOLDIERS

Brick Building to Cost $50,000 at Lincoln University Aim of Committee.

A memorial building in honor of the Negro soldiers of Missouri, to be erected on the campus of Lincoln University at Jefferson City, is being planned by a committee with a statewide membership. A meeting in behalf of the movement was held recently in the Eighth Street Baptist Church of Hannibal.

Walthall M. Moore, Negro member of the lower house in the last Legislature, is active in the movement. George H. Wright of Hannibal is secretary of the committee. Gov. Baker and Col. Otis Duncan of Springfield, Ill., are honorary members. The Advisory Committee consists of:

Dr. Clement Richardson, Kansas City; Rev. George E. Stevens, St. Louis; Dr. Noah Williams, St. Louis; Dr. William G. Tompkins, Kansas City; Mrs. Anna Roberts, Kansas City; Henry Robinson, Liberty; W. B. E. Hughes, Springfield; Mrs. Ruby Williams, Warrenburg; C. C. Rains, Fayette; J. H. Harris, Palmyra; H. Montgomery, Chillicothe; Rev. M. S. Smith, St. Louis County; Dr. N. B. Young, Jefferson City; A. R. Tucker, Mexico; George H. Wright, Hannibal; A. R. Bohon, Hannibal; H. G. Bolden, Hannibal; Dr. A. W. Fox, Hannibal; Mrs. J. T. Brown, Hannibal; Rev. E. S. Redd, Hannibal; James Woodson, Hannibal; Capt. Shoemaker, Quincy, Ill.; C. H. Tinsley, Jacksonville, Ill.; C. G. Fletcher, Galesburg, Ill.; Thaddeus Burch, Bermuda; Rev. Edw. Taylor, La Grange, and Walter Farmer, Chicago.

The memorial, as intended, is to be a $50,000 brick and stone building. Lincoln University was founded in 1866 by Negro veterans of the Civil War. It was enlarged materially a few years ago, through the efforts of Representative Moore and others in the Legislature.

AMERICANS IN EUROPE IN SCRAMBLE FOR PASSAGE HOME

Virtually Every Steamer to U. S. During August and September Booked by End of June.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 24.—So great is the number of Americans in Europe this summer that virtually every home-going steamer during August and September was booked to capacity by the end of June, while hundreds of travelers were fighting for a chance to get passage. As a result, hundreds of Americans who would stay weeks longer abroad if they could get home later, are booking themselves for the latter part of July.

The careful travelers made their reservations for return before leaving the United States, but they were in the minority and all experienced globe-trotters. Hundreds and even thousands of others, who had no definite plans came abroad to stay as long as their money lasted and then expected to go home at any time they applied for passage. Their money may not give out by the time they are now obliged to leave, but they are leaving from necessity through lack of berths later, just when France is at its best in summer.

The Leviathan and other ships of the United States lines have not a single berth left for August and September, and conditions are similar in other companies for this year, which has seen a record rush of Americans abroad.

MISS AMERICA RAIDS BRITISH MATRIMONIAL MARKET

Her Feminine Appeal in Contrast to Athletic English Sister Given as Explanation.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 24.—One society diarist is authority for the assertion that the number of American girls who have captured English marriage prizes is "almost sensational."

Picked at random are the engagements of Miss Helen Besly of Hinsdale, Ill., to Naval Lieutenant F. B. Tours; Miss Lallie Lee Kennedy of Boston, Mass., to Lieutenant Commander Geoffrey L. Towis, and of Miss Marguerite L. Bequette of New York to George A. Kennedy. Then there was the recent marriage of Mrs. Thelma Morgan Converse of New York to Viscount Furness.

"American girls," says the diarist "are essentially feminine, as compared to the more out-of-doors type of English girl. But above everything, the American girl has an alertness and a sympathy of mind that is particularly devastating to an Englishman's susceptibility."

VON KLUCK WORKS IN GARDEN

Wartime German Commander Enthusiastic About Roses.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 24.—The one former German army officer who most nearly approaches to having turned his sword into a plowshare is Gen. Alexander von Kluck, who directed the First German Cavalry operations in the battle of the Marne.

Passersby going to work in the morning never fail to see the 80-year-old veteran at work in his rose garden in the summer colony of the Gruenwald on the outskirts of Berlin. He rises at 6:30, puts on an old suit of clothes and occupies himself with rose hedges with boyish enthusiasm until breakfast at 10 o'clock.

DON'T BUY A DINING-ROOM SUITE Until You See This Lammert Value

It Is Without Question the Greatest Bargain Obtainable in a Dining Suite Today

TO judge this sensational Dining Suite value by the usual standards is to underestimate its worth at least $100.00. It is unquestionably the greatest value we have ever offered and at this special low price it surpasses anything obtainable anywhere else. In appraising the merits of this unusual Suite, note first of all the beautiful yet substantial design and the liberal size and proportions of the individual pieces—nothing flimsy or stinted there either in construction or workmanship.

A Splendid Suite Good Enough for Many Homes

The Suite is built of American walnut on a gumwood base. Burl walnut panels of contrasting figures ornament the pieces. Interior construction is dustproof with genuine mahogany veneer drawer bottoms. The finish is especially beautiful and reflects that painstaking care and effort that is so necessary to bring out the full possibilities of the woods.

WELLSTON TO HAVE $500,000 STORE 6 STORIES HIGH

N. Pelligreen Acquires Part of Site for Building at Hodiamont and Easton Avenues.

INVOLVES MOVING OF U. R. LOOP

Project Is Held Up by Controversy Over Securing Lease on Restaurant Property.

By Berry Moore.

Construction in Wellston of a six-story department store building with an arcade, will be begun as soon as the entire site bought for it at the northwest corner of Easton and Hodiamont avenues is available.

The new building will be erected by N. Pelligreen, president of the Pelligreen Construction Company, who has acquired part of the site in a trade with the United Railways. The cost of the building, including the site, is estimated at $500,000. The building will have a frontage of approximately 210 feet on Hodiamont avenue with an entrance on Easton avenue.

The project has been held up pending negotiations with Duros Bros. for possession of a store room at the northwest corner of Easton and Hodiamont avenues, which the entrance of the proposed new building will occupy. Duros Bros. conduct a restaurant on the premises which they hold under a lease which has 14 months to run. Pelligreen has offered a bonus of $500 for immediate possession, but they are asking $12,-000. Attorneys are trying to adjust the difference.

U. R. Loop to Be Moved.

The loop of the United Railways in this block, with the station of the Kirkwood, St. Charles and Wellston car lines, occupying part of the Easton avenue frontage, the ground acquired from Pelligreen in the trade, the United Railways will install a new loop in the block with the Wellston cars starting at the southwest corner of Hodiosia and Hodiamont avenues. No change in the location of the tracks is to be made. Removal of the present loop is made necessary owing to traffic congestion on Easton avenue, it was stated.

The S. S. Kresge & Company Five and Ten Cent Store recently acquired a 99-year lease of a large site at the southwest corner of Easton avenue and the Hodiamont avenue for a store. The Polar Wave Ice & Fuel Co. occupy the southeast corner with a large plant. A store of the United Cigar Stores Co. occupies the northwest corner of Easton avenue and Suburban Railway tracks.

Radical Increase in Values.

According to John C. Ghio, cashier of the State Bank of Wellston, the growth of Wellston is an outstanding feature in the history of the local real estate market.

"Thirty-five years ago the City of Wellston was hardly thought of," said Ghio. "Then the closest drug store was somewhere near the present corner at Vandeventer and Easton.

"The first stage in the development of Wellston district was at what is now the corner of Easton and Hamilton avenues. Some enterprising real estate men bought the Rinkel pasture, subdivided it into building lots and put a row of stores with flats above on the northeast corner of the intersection of these two streets. Those stores and flats remained empty for three years. No one was venturesome enough to start a buisness in such a locality. Values have risen enormously since then. The site of the Polar Wave plant, a hole in the ground originally, bought for $50 a foot, was leased for 99 years on a basis of approximately $2000 a foot, an index to the values in this district.

The Rise of Wellston.

"Twenty-five years ago Fred Moses started a drug store in Wellston, drawing buyers from surrounding territory. The next pioneer merchant in Wellston was John A. Sohns, now a real estate man in St. Louis. Then followed Joe Keller with his meat shop.

"The Missouri Pacific Railroad celebration of its seventy-fifth anniversary recalls the advent of the St. Louis & St. Charles Railroad then as now terminating at the intersection of Easton avenue and the Suburban tracks.

"Soon Julius Kessler, now president of the State Bank, and George Rinkle with others, organized the first bank, then known as the Wellston Bank, now known as the First National. This seemed to mark the beginning of Wellston's prosperity. A few years later Kessler, after having retired from the First National Bank, organized the present State Bank of Wellston, of which he is president.

"The retail business in the Wellston district now amounts to at least $1,000,000 a month."

ELLIOTT & BARRY GET NEW SITE

With plans for a modern building, the Elliot & Barry Engineering Co. has purchased a site on the south side of West Pine boulevard, 361 feet east of Sarah street. Negotiation for the lot, 54x223 feet, were handled by the Mercantile Trust Co. in conjunction with the Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co., represented by Lee Farrell. The Elliot & Barry Co., of which James Barry is president, has made plans for a modern structure. The company is now at 1426 Olive street.

AGGRESSIVE BUYING IN DELMAR HEIGHTS REPORTED

Aggressive buying is reported at Delmar Heights by William J. Abbott, who is marketing the property. The tract is at Delmar boulevard and the North and South road, and is available under the restrictions for bungalows and duplexes. Concrete streets are being constructed with other improvements, which are included in the prices at which the lots are offered.

The tract is adjacent to University City on the west with an extensive frontage on Delmar boulevard. The location is regarded as ideal for development for duplexes and bungalows.

CALIFORNIA BUNGALOWS FEATURE IN BUILDING FIELD

A notable feature in the building field is the California bungalows being erected in and adjacent to St. Louis by the Vance Construction Co. Each building is of different design. Two have just been disposed of, while two others are completed.

New Downtown Edifices, Artistic Home

New Central Y. M. C. A. Building at the southeast corner of Sixteenth and Locust streets, with exterior practically completed.

Fashion Square Building under construction at the northwest corner of Thirteenth street and Washington avenue. Financed by Waldheim, Platt & Co.

ST. LOUIS PHARMACY COLLEGE AND CASS AVENUE BANK BUY NEW BUILDING SITES

School Plans $500,000 Structure at Euclid and Parkview, While Bank Is to Build at Cass and Thirteenth.

Noteworthy features of the week in the construction field were purchases by the St. Louis College of Pharmacy of the southeast corner of Euclid and Parkview avenues, and the Cass Avenue Bank of the southeast corner of Cass avenue and Thirteenth streets, as sites for new buildings.

The St. Louis College of Pharmacy is having plans made for a building to cost $500,000. The lot has 100 feet on Parkview and 175 on Euclid, and is adjacent to Harris Hospital. Negotiations for the site were handled by Hemmelman-Spackler Real Estate Co., through which the announcement was made.

Present plans call for a building three or four stories in height, with modern facilities for instruction and research. The ground floor will be occupied by the offices and the lecture rooms and laboratories for botany and pharmacognosy. The department of pharmacy will occupy the second floor and that of chemistry the third. A large auditorium for general lectures is contemplated, as well as a museum of pharmacy, and rooms for housing the college library. Machinery for use in instruction in the various pharmaceutical manufacturing processes will be installed in the basement.

Activity in Neighborhood.

The site acquired by the Cass Avenue Bank has a frontage of 130 feet on the east side of the proposed boulevard by a depth of 100 feet along Cass avenue. It also formerly was owned by Berl Lieberstein of the Edmond Davis Real Estate Co. Officers of the bank plan a modern structure to cover the entire lot.

A factor in the purchase of the site was the increased activity throughout the district, with he resurfacing of Cass avenue with smooth pavement from Broadway to Grand boulevard, connecting with Easton avenue, making it the only roadway in St. Louis and St. Louis County, reaching from the Mississippi River to the Missouri River, bank officers said.

The Commissioners considering the widening of Twelfth boulevard from Washington avenue north, as well as Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets, from a width of 60 feet to 120 feet, are completing their work and a report from them will be ready soon. The widening will give shorter and easier access to all parts of northwest St. Louis and will be an added incentive to real estate development in the Cass avenue district.

This is the second time that the Cass Avenue Bank has found it necessary to enlarge its quarters during the last 11 years. It was located originally at the southeast corner of Fifteenth street and Cass avenue 20 years ago, from which it removed to its present location at the northwest corner of Fifteenth and Cass in 1915 on account of its rapid growth. The new building will be triple the size of the present structure. The negotiations for the site were handled by the Protzman Realty Co.

Olive Street Parkway Appeal.

According to real estate circles, several deals carrying building plans for Olive street sites, between Twelfth boulevard and Channing avenue, the section to be widened, are held up by the plan for a parkway for streetcar tracks on this thoroughfare. The value of the property, according to W. W. Butts, president of the Real Estate Exchange, will be adversely affected for business use with a parkway in the center. The Real Estate Exchange and the Greater Olive Street Improvement Association, along with the Chamber of Commerce, represent the opposition to this plan, which has been adopted by the Board of Public Service.

The building has been designed by David R. Harrison, architect, for the Rose Realty Co. of St. Louis, whose members are Sam and Rose Pollock of the Pollock Clothing Co., and is under the management and supervision of construction by the Harrison-Kopman Construction Co., client of Heros Weisels, Inc.

The building will be ready by Dec. 1. The bonds have been underwritten by Waldheim-Platt & Co., Inc., and Stern Brothers & Co., bankers, of Kansas City, Mo.

The laying of sewers and water mains and the grading of winding streets and driveways in Osage Hills, on the Big Bend boulevard and the Meramec River, is rapidly developing the 700-acre tract into a beautiful residential district. The work is being pushed to provide purchasers with improved community needs, according to Bixby-Smith, Inc., 316 North Eighth street, developers of the property.

While little is being done that will disturb the general contour of this location, which is of great natural beauty, the improvements made so far, including grading work of the Osage Country Club, has transformed the entire unit.

Work on the Osage Country Club house is being pushed, and is expected to be finished by the second week in August.

The demand for Osage Hills home locations, according to Bixby-Smith, Inc., remains strong.

While it has been open to the public only a short time, it has been of considerable help to many contemplating the building of homes. It also has aided builders, many of whom have made a tour of the exposition.

SCOTT CONFESSON MADE IN SPITE OF COUNSEL'S ADVICE

Slayer's Attorney Asserts Statement by Robert Will Not Be Used in Appeal to Save Life of Russell.

ONLY RECORD CAN BE USED IN CASE

Admission by Brother That He Fired Fatal Shot Not Admissible in Attempt to Foil Hangman's Noose.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 24.—The confession of Robert Scott, recently sentenced to life imprisonment, that he, and not his brother, who is under sentence to be hanged Oct. 15, fired the shot which killed Joseph Maurer, young drug clerk, came against the advice of their attorney and will not be used in appealing to the State Supreme Court.

That was the statement toda of William, Scott Stewart, who defended both brothers in their various court appearances, excepting the first of Russell, when he was given the first of a series of three death penalties.

The confession followed the forecast of Emmett Byrne and William Mueller, assistant state's attorneys, who prosecuted Robert recently when he pleaded guilty to the killing and was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge William N Gemmill. In arguing against Robert Scott's cross examination being limited, the assistant state's attorneys pointed out that should Robert get a sentence of less than death that judgment would be pointed to in a further effort to save Russell's life.

Denied Shooting on Stand.

From the witness stand Robert replied to Judge Gemmill's question: "Did you fire the fatal shot?" with an emphatic "I did not, your honor."

Judge Gemmill today stated his belief that Robert remains the tool of his older brother, one of the considerations which prompted the judge to impose the prison sentence rather than one of death. Judge Gemmill reiterated his belief that Russell Scott was Maurer's actual murderer, and again characterized him as the most cold-blooded killer he had known of in years upon the bench.

"The confession not only was without my authorization, but was against my advice," said Attorney Stewart today.

Not to Be Used in Appeal.

"I told them positively to talk to no one. Of course this confession can play no part in an appeal to the Supreme Court. That body decides only upon the trial record."

Stewart disclosed that he is preparing an application for a writ of supersedeas which he hopes will be granted and stay Russell's execution. The State Supreme Court will reconvene 10 days before the date set for Russell to be hanged.

Stewart will charge that Judge Marcus A. Kavanaugh erred in not granting Russell's appeal for a change of venue when he was brought before Judge Kavanaugh for a second sanity trial by a jury. The first such trial resulted in Russell being found insane and sent to the State prison for the criminal insane. His condition improved and the second trial resulted in a verdict which found him sane and sent him before the court for a new death sentence.

Former Residence to Be Remodeled for Business

THE large residence at 3155 South Jefferson avenue has been purchased by A. A. Gralnick, proprietor of a chain of retail shoe stores. The transaction was handled by the Mullin-Walters Realty Co. which announced that the building would be altered for business purposes.

The house contains 15 rooms with living room 38x42 and billiard room in the basement. The floors and halls are of tile. The property which belonged to the Herold estate is opposite Benton Park and is only two blocks north of the Cherokee street business center.

The site has a frontage on Jefferson of 145 feet, with a depth of 125 feet. A five-story efficiency apartment is to be built on the portion of the lot not occupied by the present building.

The Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. acted for the seller. The property will be under the management of the Mullin-Walters Realty Co.

VESTED INTERESTS RULE U.S., HAWES SAYS

Congressman Says Money Control at Washington Has Become Common Thing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, July 24. — Congressman Harry B. Hawes, candidate for the Democratic nomination for the U. S. Senate, was escorted by a delegation from Kansas City on a drive to North Kansas City for a speech tonight, in which he took for his subject the recent senatorial investigation into Republican primaries in Pennsylvania. This investigation was conducted by a committee headed by Senator Reed whose home is in Kansas City. Hawes declared that "corruption in the Pennsylvania primary is largely the result of a condition which has grown up under centralization of power."

"I have discussed in other speeches the tendency to concentrate power in the Federal Government at Washington," said Hawes. "I now point out one of the dangerous results of this Hamiltonian theory.

"The day after the Pennsylvania primaries, the Senior Senator from Missouri, James A. Reed, walked into the Senate Chamber and demanded an investigation of news paper reports that from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 had been spent in the "Keystone" State primaries, the State that boasts of never-changing Republican domination. It is the home State of Mr. Andrew W. Mellon, a devoted Hamiltonian, and a dominant, if not the most dominant, figure in two Republican administrations. He wields a power in Republican politics the extent of which goes beyond expression in words.

Effect of the Inquiry.

"When Senator Reed demanded an investigation of why Republican Pennsylvania had spent this enormous fund it was as though a 42-centimeter gun had been fired into the ranks of the Republican Senate.

"A Missouri Democrat stepped into the picture of monied frenzy in America and proposed to let the people know just how and why the great financial powers of a bulwark Republican State were throwing their millions into a political contest.

"Here, in one Republican State, was being spent more money in one primary than the National Democratic party had spent in ten years in presidential elections; more than the affluent Republican National Committee spent in its extravagant campaign for Mr. Coolidge; more money than Missouri has spent in primary and general elections since it was admitted to the Union.

"When the bombshell burst, the Republican Senator from Missouri voted its 'table' the Reed investigating resolution.

The Pennsylvania Story.

"Well we now know the Pennsylvania story. Mr. Reed's committee has already accounted for more than $3,000,000. It is a sordid, corrupt and disgraceful story.

"It is time to examine the cause for such wild and reckless spending of millions in one State primary. Why were the millions spent in Pennsylvania? The answer is simple.

"Money rule of government in Washington has become a conventional thing. Dollars talk and vested interests hold sway. They are anxious to get their men into the legislative councils of America because Republican rule makes it possible, through bureaucracy and Federal concentration of power, to direct not only the proper functions of the national Government, but through questionable channels to direct the affairs of the individual states as well.

Time for People to Arouse.

"When the great monopolistic money powers of New England and Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, through their manipulation of Republican party destinies, are so blind to the ethics of decent political contest as to throw millions of dollars into the 'slush fund' of one state primary, it is high time that the people of America, and especially of Missouri and the still unbribed West look to the safety of their governmental processes and take steps to bring about a change.

"Pennsylvania could not raise $3,000,000 for a single Republican primary if it were not for the fact that in Washington there is entrenched a political party with whom the vast expenditure of money is the usual thing—a party that pays heavy dividends by governmental largess extracted from the taxpayers of the land.

"It is well that a sudden halt has been called. The people have been suddenly brought face to face with a condition that has been insiduously creeping upon us. New England and Pennsylvania rule has had a stop put to it for the time being. But only a change from Hamiltonian concentration of power to Jeffersonian simplicity and distribution of power will bring permanent relief."

$300 HOLDUP REPORTED BY BOOKKEEPER FOR LAUNDRY

Munger Company Employe Says That Three Men Forced Him to Open Safe in Firm's Office.

Richard J. Rice, a bookkeeper for Munger's Laundry, 2308 Washington boulevard, told the traffic policeman at Jefferson and Washington avenues at six o'clock last night that he had just been held up by three men who escaped with between $300 and $400.

The policeman learned of the tobbery from a woman who called him from his corner. She said she entered the laundry office to pay a bill and that Rice had said: "Don't bother me; I've just been robbed. Come back Monday."

Rice was found in the office telephoning his employers. He said he was working on the books at 5:30 when three men with revolvers walked in. They forced him to open the safe, he said, from which they took the day's receipts. They marched him into the rear room and closed the door behind him, he declared.

This section is being paved half a block at a time in order to keep the street open between Grand and Spring.

ADMITS USING MAILS IN FRAUD

Indianapolis Man Sought Salesmen for Mythical Vulcanizer.

Addison Iams of Indianapolis, Ind., was arrested yesterday by Postoffice Inspector Noah at 3328 Washington avenue on a charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with advertisements placed in St. Louis newspapers for salesmen to sell a vulcanizing machine for the Tailored Auto Equipment Co., of Indianapolis, a concern existing only in fancy.

Iams' scheme, which he admitted to United States Commissioner Atkins, was fraudulent, was to obtain from prospective salesmen a cash bond of $250 after which he would send them to Indianapolis to learn the intricacies of the vulcanizer. Before they could return he expected to be clear of St. Louis. Before any applicant for the "jobs open" had put up the bond required, the Better Business Bureau began an investigation which disclosed the concern Iams claimed to represent was fictitious and the arrest followed. Iams went to jail in default of $10,000 bond.

REED INQUIRY STARTS TOMORROW IN CHICAGO

County Judge Orders Tabulators to Concentrate on Senatorial Recount.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Recount of Cook County's April primary vote on nominations for county officers, in progress under the direction of a special grand jury investigating vote frauds, was halted today by County Judge Edmund Jarecki. The tabulators were directed to devote their whole effort to a speedy recount of the vote for United States senatorial nominations.

This recount was begun two days ago at the request of Senator James A. Reed, chairman of the Senate campaign funds committee which will open an investigation Monday into charges of irregularities in the senatorial primaries.

Witnesses were here today in readiness to take the stand when the hearings open Monday, or were planning to be on hand by tomorrow night.

Brennan and Insull Ready.

George E. Brennan, Democratic candidate for Senator, has rearranged a speaking schedule to permit his presence before the committee Monday and Tuesday.

Samuel Insull, traction magnate, also is ready to appear. His aids denied vigorously that he had "admitted" charges repeated in the Senate that he contributed $100,000 to the campaign of Col. Frank L. Smith, Republican Senate nominee, and $15,000 to the Brennan campaign.

Both Allen F. Moore, Republican national committeeman and manager of Col. Smith's campaign, and Col. Smith, plan to be here on Monday.

Col. Henry I. Green, of Champaign, Senator William B. McKinley's attorney and treasurer of his campaign, will come to testify, but Senator McKinley is not expected. He is in a Washington hospital, a victim of rheumatism which has confined him since shortly after the primaries. His aids will ask the committee to hear his testimony at Washington if it insists on questioning him.

Committee to Arrive Today.

None of the Senate Committee was on hand today but Senator Reed, who paused here yesterday for preliminary conferences, said he would return tomorrow night from Kansas City to guide the group of which he is chairman, while William H. King (Demo.) of Utah and Robert M. LaFollette (Progressive. Republican) of Wisconsin, planned to arrive tomorrow also. Senators W. H. McNary (Rep.) of Oregon, and Guy DeGoff (Rep.) of West Virginia, probably will not come to Chicago to sit with the committee until some days after it begins its inquiry.

Managers of the campaign of both Republican candidates have ridiculed charges repeated in the Senate by Senator Caraway (Dem.) of Arkansas that the Smith campaign cost $2,000,000 and the McKinley campaign $1,000,000.

RING PROMOTER, OFF TO FACE KILLING CHARGE, BLAMES PAL

Changes Story to St. Louis Police Before Starting West to Answer for Murder.

John W. Owens, arrested here as one of two prizefight promoters wanted in connection with the murder last year of a Kelso, Wash., newspaper editor, who had joined clergymen in opposing the fight, changed his story yesterday before departing with Sheriff Studebaker of Kelso to face trial.

When arrested he had laid the sudden departure of himself and his fellow-promoter on the morning after the murder to "coincidence." Yesterday he said the other man did it. The statement, obtained by St. Louis detectives, was reduced to writing and signed by Owens.

Two city detectives arrested him July 17, just two weeks after circulars describing him and offering a $500 reward were received here. In the signed statement he said the other promoter, Frank T. Hart, admitted the shooting some days after their flight. He said Hart related that he had engaged in a sidewalk argument with the editor, Thomas Dovery of the Cowlitz Valley News, that Dovery struck him and he went to strike Dovery with the revolver, but it was accidentally discharged.

GOVERNMENT SEEKS REHEARNG OF THE HEBER NATIONS CASE

If Motion Is Denied Matter May Be Taken to the United States Supreme Court.

A rehearing of the Heber Nations case, in which the United States Circuit Court of Appeals recently reversed Nations' conviction on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Volstead law, is asked for in a motion filed with the Appellate Court yesterday by John C. Dyott, special Government prosecutor in the case. It is understood that, if the rehearing is not granted, the matter may be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Dyott is proceeding under the direction of the Attorney-General's office. He contends that the Appellate Judges erred in their ruling.

The point on which the reversal was granted was Judge Faris' refusal to disqualify himself, on Nations' allegation of prejudice. If the Attorney-General's office were to accept this ruling without further contest, Nations could be tried again this fall before Judge Davis. If the matter goes to the Supreme Court, he probably would have a longer delay. His sentence, fixed by Judge Faris in May, 1925, was 18 months imprisonment and $3333 fine.

He said that at 11 a. m. two men, one of whom had a revolver, boarded the truck at Pendleton avenue and Page boulevard and made him drive almost to Pacific, Mo. Wiedemeier's escapades became generally known with his arrest in St. Louis last October after eloping with the wife of a Chicago fur dealer. He jumped a cash bond here and was caught in Philadelphia, where he was tried and convicted of embezzling $8000 worth of jewelry from the widow of a Philadelphia jeweler. He is now serving a one-year prison sentence there.

MEXICAN OFFICIALS TRY TO SUPPRESS RELIGIOUS LEAGUE

Two Headquarters Raided and Two Sets of Directors Arrested, but Organization Carries On.

POLICE TO EXAMINE CATHOLIC PRELATES

Authorities Contend That Purpose of Body Is to Create Economic Boycott of the Country.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO CITY, July 24.—What may develop into an endurance contest in arresting and being arrested apparently has commenced between police and Department of Justice agents on the one side and the League for the Defense of Religious Freedom on the other. When the League's first set of directors were arrested and put in jail and the headquarters closed, the League promptly opened under new management in another place, whereupon police arrested the new director, Manuel Palomar Vizcarra.

Judicial orders were issued demanding "declarations" from Archbishop Mora y del Rio of Mexico, and Bishop Diaz of Tabasco. This means that Department of Justice agents will interrogate the churchmen and take their depositions, after which the Government will decide its further procedure.

League Bent on Carrying On.

It is known that the League's present intention is to continue operating regardless of the number of arrests or how many headquarters are closed. New directors will be appointed to carry on as fast as the old ones are arrested, and new offices will be opened as fast as the old ones are closed.

The Government charges that the League is directing its efforts toward an economic boycott, which constitutes an attempt to destroy the institutions of the Republic and also menaces public welfare. The League's plan is that everybody shall stop spending money for anything except absolute necessaries, thereby creating an economic situation which will impel the Government to modify its attitude.

RECEIVER IS APPOINTED FOR P. G. MURPHY TRUNK CO.

Defendants Consent to Action But Oppose Selection of Firm's Former Lawyer.

In answer to an order to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed for the P. C. Murphy Trunk Co., against which an involuntary action in bankruptcy was instituted by creditors two weeks ago, the concern, through its attorney, yesterday consented to the appointment of a receiver by Federal Judge Faris. H. A. Gleick, an attorney, was selected and his bond fixed at $20,000.

The application for the appointment of a receiver was filed following an answer by the company to the original petition denying its insolvency and asking for a trial of the issues by jury. The petition for a receiver alleged gross mismanagement of the business by members of the Murphy family.

Counsel for the Murphys objected to the appointment by the court of Orville Livingston as receiver on the ground that the members of the family felt Livingston, who had been employed by them to look into the affairs of the concern, had brought about the bankruptcy action. Livingston was suggested for receiver by counsel for the creditors.

ARMY DESERTER THROWS SELF TO DEATH BENEATH TRUCK

James E. Faulkner, 27 years old, a soldier of Fort Sam Houston, Tex., was crushed to death when he threw himself under the wheels of an ice truck at Scott Field at 3:30 p. m. yesterday.

According to officers at the field, Faulkner deserted at the Texas military post a year ago and surrendered at Scott Field on May 5. He appeared to be mentally deranged and was placed in the observation ward of the field hospital to await transfer to a Government hospital. Yesterday he was sitting with several other patients on the hospital porch when the ice truck approached. As it passed in front he ran to the driveway and plunged under the rear wheels.

His mother, Mrs. Edith Faulkner, is said to reside at Enfield, Ill. The body is being held at an undertaking establishment at Belleville.

Still in Effect, It Forbids Use of Rouge and Perfume to Win a Husband

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 24.—There is still a law on the French statute books, although not enforced, that imposes a penalty on women who beguile men into marriage by means of rouge, powder, perfumes and similar aids.

"Whosoever attracts into the bonds of marriage any male subject of his majesty, by means of rouge or powder, perfumes, false teeth, false hair, steel corsets, hooped petticoats, high heels or false hips, will be prosecuted for sorcery and the marriage will be declared null and void, if the accused is convicted." This law, passed by the Parliament of 1770, could be invoked by any present-day complainant.

It seems to show that the mere man of the time of Louis XV had some protection. Even the introduction of the new civil code in 1804 left it in force, under the section dealing with "fraud in the quality of merchandise."

NEW CHICAGO KILLING BRINGS GANGLAND DEATH TOTAL TO 42

Victim Hit by Bullets Intended for Brother of Alcohol Ring Leader, Is Theory.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 25.—Frank Conton, 25 years old, forty-second victim in Chicago's gangland warfare, was killed by a charge from a sawed-off shotgun pushed through a window of the grill room of an outlying saloon late last night. The motive for the shooting remains a mystery and the slayers probably never will be caught, police say.

The killing followed that of Philip Piazza, wealthy Chicago Heights cafe owner, by a day, and may be linked in a new beer and liquor war feud, investigators think, or may be related to the present jail scandal, caused when Frank McErlane, liquor baron, was found drunk in jail.

Four men and a woman were have been meant for Vincent McErtaken into custody today for questioning. Police say the bullets may lane, whose brother is a leader of the McErlane-Saltis alcohol syndicate. Another theory is that Conlon was killed in retaliation for the murders of Frank de Laurentis and John Tuccello, bootleggers, killed last fall. It was said Conlon was dealing in liquor on a small scale.

WOMAN EVANGELIST HURT BY ROCK HURLED THROUGH WINDOW

Conductor of Meetings at Miama, Fla., Had Ignored Threatening Letters.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMA, Fla., July 24.—Police today sought an unidentified man as the person who threw a coral rock through the window of the anteroom of the Christian Missionary Alliance Tabernacle here last night and struck Mrs. Virginia Brandt Berg, 53 years old, just before she started to conduct her nightly service.

The woman Evangelist was knocked unconscious, but recovered and called members of the congregation. Police said a trap was laid to kidnap her last Thursday and that she had received letters threatening that unless she closed her meetings at once she would meet a fate more serious than "another well-known Evangelist of the same faith experienced."

ANNULMENT SUIT SERVICE ACCEPTED BY MRS. KOENIG

Much Married Beauty Specialist Refuses to Discuss Wedding Before Her Divorce.

Mrs. Forrest Dawson Bollinger Koenig, 2-year-old beauty specialist, who married three men in the last three years, walked into Sheriff Schuler's office yesterday and accepted service in the annulment suit of her latest husband, Ferdinand Koenig, of 5103 Delmar boulevard.

Koenig alleges they were married Oct. 17 last, when she was legally married to Elmer Bollinger. She would not discuss the case nor reveal where she lived.

Court records show that Mrs. Koenig married Carl Harris, a druggist, in November, 1923, and divorced him a year later alleging non-support; that on Jan. 24, 1925, she married Bollinger and was divorced by him last Dec. 8, after she had married Koenig.

APPLICATION FOR LOREE MERGER FILED WITH I. C. C.

Kansas City Southern Seeks Stock Control of Katy and Latter, in Turn, of Cotton Belt.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Another step in the far-reaching plans of L. F. Loree to link the principal transportation gateways of the country was taken today with the filing of two applications with the Interstate Commerce Commission to unite, into a single system, three major carriers of the Southwest.

Approval of the two plans, one providing for acquisition of stock control of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas (Katy) by the Kansas City Southern, and the other for assumption of similar control by the Katy of the St. Louis Southwestern (Cotton Belt) would mould into one big operating system nearly 6000 miles of track and approximately $600,000,000 of working capital. The commission was requested to regard both applications as covering one general project and that they be considered together.

The distinction between consolidation under common ownership and management, prohibited by law pending completion by the commission of final consolidation laws, and merging through stock control to operate as a single system was emphasized in the Katy application, which explained it was for "acquisition, not involving consolidation into a single system for ownership and operation" of the Cotton Belt.

Differs From Nickel Plate Plan.

Unlike the rejected Nickel Plate unification plan, which called for the creation of a new company to assume control over five railroad units, and the issuance in some instances of non-voting stock, the applications filed today would have one railroad acquire a second and the second take over a third, and all three, while retaining their corporate identities, grouped into a single operating system.

The application of the Kansas City Southern, which now owns 350,000 shares of Katy common stock for which it paid more than $11,000,000, declared that acquisition would be by purchase or exchange of sufficient additional shares as to give it a working majority, while that of the Katy requested authority to acquire the Cotton Belt by purchase of at least a numerical majority of its purstanding capital stock.

Acquisition Agreement.

Such control by the Katy would be obtained by purchase from the Kansas City Southern for $13,613,-301 with interest at 5 per cent, of 135,000 shares of preferred and 20,000 shares of common stock of the Cotton Belt, pursuant to an agreement entered into yesterday at New York between the Katy and Kansas City Southern and the also would purchase, at not more also wold prchase, at not more than $92 a share for preferred and $74 for common, such additional shares of the Cotton Belt as would constitute a majority.

Under the agreement the Katy, in addition, would acquire all rights of the Kansas City Southern to a reduction of the purchase price of Cotton Belt shares bought from the Rock Island. Should it fail to acquire the needed additional shares at the terms mentioned, the Katy reserves the right to file another application with the Commission.

Calls for $7,000,000 Down.

The Katy plan also provides for an immediate payment of $7,000,-000 with interest at 5 per cent for the Kansas City Southern's Cotton Belt stock, with the understanding that this amount shall be repaid and the stock returned if the Commission disapproves the plan.

Of the larger independent carriers in the Southwest, the applications pointed out, virtually the only ones which remain unattached to some large system were the Katy, with 3188 miles of track, the St. Louis Southwestern, with 1747 miles and the Kansas City Southern with 865 miles.

NEUMANN BRANDS $9000 CHARGE BY RIVAL AS FALSE

Insists No Such Offer Was Made to Fuetterer to Withdraw From Collectorship Race.

Charles A. Neumann, vice president of the Board of Aldermen, and candidate for the Republican nomination for Collector, issued a statement last night commenting on the charge of William E. Fuetterer, a rival candidate, that he (Fuetterer) was offered $9000, by a person whom Fuetterer would not name, to get out of the race.

"No such offer was made with my knowledge, or on my behalf," Neumann said. "I didn't pay him anything to get into this race, and I wouldn't pay him a cent to get out of it."

PLANS FOR GIANT DIRIGIBLE LAID BEFORE COOLIDGE

Secretary Wilbur Discusses With President Construction of Craft Three-Fold Size of Shenandoah.

By the Associated Press.

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., July 24.—The naval aviation program under the new five-year building authorization was discussed by President Coolidge with Secretary Wilbur of the Navy Department today, particular attention being given to the construction of a dirigible three times the size of the Shenandoah, which crashed in a storm over Ohio last year.

Wilbur came here for the week-end on his way to the West coast for an inspection of the United States fleet and took up with the Chief Executive questions entering into the framing of the naval budget for the fiscal year 1928.

No conclusions were reached, however, concerning beginning construction next year of the huge dirigible, two of which have been authorized by Congress. The lighter-than-air craft would have a capacity of 6,000,000 cubic feet, be inflated with helium, and cost between $5,000,000 and $6,000,-000, or nearly twice that expended in constructing the Shenandoah.

Budgets Kept Record.

A number of repartmental questions were gone over by the Secretary with the President, and a report made on the recent arsenal explosion at Lake Denmark, N. J. Details of the aviation program were withheld under the policy of secrecy which is thrown about all budget estimates until they are submitted to Congress.

Wilbur, however in receiving newspaper correspondents, said that Assistant Secretary Warner in charge of naval aviation was developing a policy and considering a number of matters for development of naval aeronautics.

The secretary also informed the president that arrangements had been made for the receivers of the Elk Hills Naval Oil Reserve in California to turn into the treasury at Washington, Aug. 1, $3,500,000 of accumulated profits from operation from the properties during the period of litigation between the E. L. Doheny companies and the Government.

The funds are above and beyond the amount at issue in the civil suit for cancellation of the lease, which is pending in the United States Supreme Court. After August, it was added, $250,000 will be deposited monthly with the Treasury by the receivers.

Reports Arsenal Explosion.

The leases in both Reserves No. 1 and 2 in California, as well as the contracts with Doheny for construction of tanks for storage of royalty oil at Honolulu have been ordered vacated by the lower courts as a result of suits growing out of the senate oil investigations of two years ago but a final determination is yet to be made by the Supreme Court.

Reporting to Mr. Coolidge on the Lake Denmark disaster, Wilbur said, although reports are yet to be received from two naval courts investigating the explosion, it was apparent that the damage was not as great as the $100,000,000 first reported, while the damage to private persons and property was small.

The explosives stored at the arsenal, he added, were largely accumulated during the war and, while it would be necessary to replace all the materials destroyed, a gradual program will be worked out for accumulating what is needed.

Whether a new arsenal will be built on the site of the disaster, the Secretary said, would not be determined until after the courts of inquiry have reported but the construction decided upon probably will not be on so large a scale as the plant that was destroyed because there is no need for such extensive equipment.

Secretary Wilbur arrived at White Pine Camp early today and within an hour accompanied President Coolidge to the executive offices where they discussed naval questions and the chief executive following his daily custom, attended to a number of other Government matters.

What Constitutes Feminine Beauty?

It's not particularly the contour of features. It's primarily a good complexion, and attractively arranged hair.

The proper care will improve any complexion—most of them can be made radiantly beautiful. In the hands of an expert, the hair quickly responds to treatment and adds most attractively to poise and appearance.

Here and there in St. Louis, convenient to every neighborhood of homes, and in the downtown section are "Beautye Shoppes"—spell it as you will—where milady or the business girl can go for expert service.

To decide whether it pays to give the hair and complexion proper care, look at a half dozen girls who patronize a beauty shop and at a half dozen who don't. The comparison will convince.

Regularly in the Post-Dispatch are announcements of St. Louis' best beauty shops. From the listing there, select the most convenient one — patronize it and note the improvement in YOUR personal appearance.

The Post-Dispatch carries far more advertising of interest to women than all other St. Louis newspapers combined.

"We have never had to trim a piece of meat since installing the Hussmanns, and I have been using them for eight years, and have just installed two more fourteen-foot De Luxe Models.

"We have never taken a piece of meat out of our Hussmanns to put in the cooler.

"The drudgery in the meat business is in bringing the meats out of the cooler in the morning and putting them back at night. We don't do that any more.

"Some folks say that my Hussmanns are too fine for a cheap neighborhood; but I say that no equipment is too fine for MY meats, because my meat is my money, my living. You might as well say that the First National Bank is too good for a poor man.

"Any meat dealer that does a business of fifty dollars a day should have a Hussmann.

The Rich Young Irish Peer Sought to Found a Manorial Game Preserve in Estes Park, but Pretty Women and Rough Men Brought His Dream to an End.

ESTES PARK, Colo.

THE Dunraven legend grows faint in Estes Park. It is as elusive, yet as real, as the odor of rock jasmine at timber line. Gentle schoolmarms from Iowa, daringly arrayed in khaki knickers, now abound in this lovely mountain vale where once the bob-cat clawed his prey and the grizzly was sovereign. Pale and earnest citizens, armed with kodaks and Alpine staves, haunt the mountainsides that once were thumped with the hoofs of thundering herds of game. Children scale Long's Peak along well-marked trails, and the banks of that chattering mountain torrent, the Big Thompson, are lined with ugly week-end shacks. Only at night, when the tourists are asleep and the moon, playing tricks around the mountain tops, throws weird shadows into the grassy meadows, is Estes Park the wild solitude which is the proper scene of this story.

Then it is that the story seems reasonable. Then it is possible to believe that many years ago a glittering young Irish nobleman, the Earl of Dunraven, sought to establish here a private game preserve with all the flourish and the panoply of a feudal estate; sought to make in the New World a corner of the Old. An old man died recently in London—the Earl of Dunraven and Mount, a former member of the Senate of the Irish Free State and more famous as the sportsman who twice sent 90-foot yachts across the Atlantic in unsuccessful efforts to win back for Great Britain the America's cup. Almost forgotten was the fact that he was the trail blazer for a now-famous American resort. Almost forgotten was the further fact that he had hunted the bear and mountain goat with "Buffalo Bill" and "Texas Jack" and drunk whisky with the best of American frontiersmen of the old West. But that old man who died recently in London was this same adventurous nobleman.

NEARLY 50 years ago he left Estes Park for the last time, his grandiloquent scheme shattered and the vast holding of land which he had acquired transformed into a cattle ranch. Yet, though he failed to realize his ambition and though Estes Park has been reclaimed for the 100-per-cent American tourist, the faded marks of the aristocrat's touch still are visible.

There are Dunraven Glade and Dunraven Meadows where the Earl and the sporting young peers who formed his court sallied forth to bring down elk, buffalo and deer. And the prowess of these alien sportsmen is attested by such old pioneers and guides of these parts as Shep Husted, who found the whitening bones of their kill in Dunraven Meadows, including the skulls of eighteen buffaloes.

On Fish Creek road, commanding a noble panoramic view of the range, stands a great fireplace, the only remnant of the Old English Hotel, built by Dunraven for those who had the hardihood to penetrate the mountain passes into this park. Larkspur, mountain parsley and purple fringe now overrun this abandoned site of high revelry.

NEARBY is Dunraven Lodge, where the Earl himself and his intimates gathered around the blazing fire of pitch-laden pine stumps to discuss their shooting luck, and to plan the seizure of a spot in the heart of the American Rockies to make a little corner of the Old World.

The old-time magnificence of the Lodge has disappeared. The heads of mountain sheep and lion no longer adorn the walls. The splendid trappings once toted at enormous labor over dim trails and through almost inaccessible canyons are gone. Indeed, the Lodge is now devoted to such a prosy use as a summer home for the Campfire Girls. It is built of hewn lumber, certainly no great sight in these days of knock-down English Colonial structures straight from mail order houses. Yet, 50 years ago, when this region knew only an occasional rude log hut, the Dunraven Lodge was a mansion which brought the gaping natives from far and near.

These are some of the physical evidences of a dead drama. Here and there in the park are a few leathery mountaineers who were its witnesses. But the written records of Estes Park wilderness are meager, and the memory of the survivors of the Dunraven era recalls only the exterior aspects of the Earl's ambition.

IT was from the Earl of Airlie that Dunraven first got the idea of coming to the Rockies. While in Chicago the Earl met Gen. Phil Sheridan and from him got a letter to the General commanding Fort McPherson in Kansas, asking him to allow his two famous scouts, William F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody, and John Omohondro (Texas Jack), to accompany Dunraven on a hunting trip. How he met the two scouts was thus related by Dunraven himself: "When I left the train my spirits were cast down by learning that Bill and Jack had left the fort that very morning for a hunting trip. But as I was stepping into the ambulance wagon to go to the fort two horsemen appeared in sight, galloping toward us, and the station master sang out, 'Hold on a minute; here are the very men you want!' In another minute the two men cantered up. I thought I had never seen two finer looking specimens of humanity. At that time neither of them knew scarcely more of civilization and the life of the great cities than the Indians around them."

Why Dunraven should have left his great estate of Adare Manor, County Limerick, Ireland, to seek recreation on the other side of the world has puzzled many. Adare Manor was a place of great charm, on the River Shannon. Kincora, where Brian the King held forth, was nearby to add luster to a section of Ireland rich in historical and archeological significance. But a glimpse at Dunraven's early career shows him to have been an unusually daring and adventurous spirit. His family name was Wyndham, Thomas Wyndham-Quin. As soon as he escaped from the confining academic walls of Oxford, he became a war correspondent in Abyssinia. At the time of the Franco-Prussian War, he was at the front writing for a London paper. His taste for the wilds and for the lure of big game was enormously developed when he accompanied Stanley on his famous exploration of Africa. With his inseparable hunting companion, Buffalo Bill, he not only hunted the Colorado Rockies, but was well known in the Yellowstone region, where a pass is named for him. The Indians recognized in him a mighty and a fearless hunter, and he was received in some of the tribes as a blood brother. Thus it was by no mere accident that Dunraven should have sought and coveted what was then one of the choicest hunting grounds as well as being one of the most fascinating scenic theaters in the world.

When, in 1869, Dunraven first came to the park accompanied by Sir William Cummings and Lord Fitzpatrick on a hunting trip, the region scarcely knew the white man. Kit Carson, they say, was here in 1840 and returned ten years later to build a cabin in the shadow of Long's Peak. The Arapahoes and the Cheyennes knew the park, and made an occasional sortie for game. Their tepee rings are still visible, and many a dun spot in the meadows records wild orgies after a particularly successful kill. But the first permanent white settler, Joel Estes, did not come until 1860. Griff Evans and "Rocky Mountain Jim" Nugent, who were to play a bloody part in the Dunraven affair, came respectively in 1867 and 1868.

DUNRAVEN, therefore, by the earliness of his visit and the celebrity which he brought to this region—for the news of his presence was soon broadcast throughout America and the British Isles—is known as its discoverer. As a sportsman, he was delighted by the abundance of game, but Dunraven also had an eye for beauty. No Scotch moor could rival Estes Park in sublimity or charm.

So while he gathered around himself such hunters as Buffalo Bill, who accompanied Dunraven on nearly every trip to the park, and such celebrities as General Phil Sheridan, he also induced the famous artist, Albert Bierstadt, to come here in 1874. Bierstadt's painting of Long's Peak, from the lake which now bears the artist's name, hung for years in Washington and did much to proclaim the loveliness of this region. It was Bierstadt, too, who chose the sites of Dunraven Lodge and the Old English Hotel, and his selections pay tribute to his genius.

Dunraven, ravished by the possibilities of the park as a playground for Irish and British aristocracy, returned in 1872. He was then 31 years old, had unlimited wealth at his disposal and a love for the sporting life of the wilderness. His plan to seize Estes Park for a game preserve was enthusiastically approved by the young blades of his train. Two years later, in 1874, Dunraven put his plan into execution. "In the year 1874," wrote the late E. J. Lamb, a historian of these parts, "the Earl of Dunraven, an English nobleman of great titles, came with six associates, including a doctor, to the town of Longmont, where we then resided. The visitors were so delighted with the beautiful park and its majestic surroundings, leaping and foaming streams and an abundance of game that they concluded at once to monopolize the whole territory for a hunting park and game preserve, and on the style then prevailing in England."

Buffalo Bill, Dunraven's guide and hunting companion.

IN Longmont, Dunraven hired engineers and surveyors who brought a baseline into the park from the valley and surveyed it into sections and quarter sections. British gold, as Lamb put it, had begun its malevolent work. There were, however, certain obstacles to Dunraven's possession. It was easy enough for him to purchase the land of Griff Evans for $900 and to take over the deeded properties of the Farrars, the Rowes and others. But the remainder of the park was still vested in the Government and controlled by the homestead law, whose intent it was that the land should go to bona fide settlers.

What did Dunraven do? He picked up men of the baser sort, recorded Lamb, "irresponsible fellows not regarding oaths as of much importance when contrasted with gold. Coming to the park, some of them laid up mere log foundations, others erecting small stockades, and some brushfencing small pieces of ground for supposititious garden spots." These holdings were then gobbled by Dunraven for sums ranging from $10 to $100 until he owned 8000 acres and controlled nearly again as much, and established himself as the baron of the region.

Thus far, the scheme proceeded smoothly. There were, however, other factors with which Dunraven had not reckoned, such as the jealousy of the pioneer for the land and the resentment of the native American at the display of arrogance and aloofness of the foreign peers. Dunraven, for example, had found Griff Evans pliable, but he had not troubled to win over the confidence of such men as Rocky Mountain Jim Nugent.

JIM was a formidable character. He lived with his four hounds and his big white mule in a cabin at the entrance of the park, on Park Hill, where, as Charles Hewes puts it, Muggins Gulch declines its meadows east. Jim's past was shadowy. He claimed to come from a distinguished family. A heavy, rugged man of middle height he was, with long, tawny curls falling over his shoulders. Once he was handsome. That was before a bear had clawed his scalp and face and had torn out one eye. Four bullets from Jim's pistol were in the bear's body when he attacked Jim, who continued the bloody struggle with a hunting knife until he fell unconscious. When Jim came back to life, the bear was dead and he mounted his mule to go for aid. Several times he fell off in a faint, only to find the mule grazing nearby when he came to. Jim survived and his reputation became great.

Isabelle Bird, an Englishwoman who came to the Rockies in 1873 and is supposed to have fallen in love with Jim, left this description of him: "Jim was a shocking figure; he had on an old pair of high boots, with a baggy pair of old trousers made of deer hide, held on by an old scarf tucked into them; a leather shirt, with three or four ragged, unbuttoned waistcoats over it; an old, smashed wideawake, from under which his tawny, neglected ringlets hung, and with his one eye, his one long spur, his knife in his belt, his revolver in his waistcoat pocket, his saddle covered with an old beaver-skin, from which the paws hung down; his camping blankets behind him, his rifle laid across the saddle in front of him, and his ax, canteen and other gear hanging to the horn, he was as awful looking a ruffian as one could see. By way of contrast he rode a small Arab mare of exquisite beauty, skittish, high-spirited, gentle, but altogether too light for him, and he fretted her incessantly to make her display herself."

THROUGH his homestead on Park Hill it was necessary for the English to ride to and from the Dunraven place. Jim looked upon the foreign dandies with the contempt of a man who each day found it necessary to fight singlehanded the battle with nature. He found Dunraven distasteful and his land scheme odious. Most of all, he demanded proper department of those who crossed his land. Eventually, there was an altercation. "For some time," said Lamb, "the trouble continued to grow in intensity, until finally Jim, in his wrath, declined to permit this fraternity of English snobs and aristocrats to pass through his sacred precincts any more, there being at that time no other way in or out of the park. Then arose the complex situation of getting Jim out of the way. None of the English dared to do it, for public sentiment would not have tolerated it, the public by this time being aware of and highly indignant over Dunraven's land swindle."

Sometime later Jim, riding his white mule, passed Griff Evans' cabin on his way to his solitary habitation on Park Hill. Unobserved by Jim, the figure of his old friend and neighbor, Griff Evans, appeared in the doorway with a shotgun at his shoulder. The gun roared, the charge struck an old stagecoach that stood in the road and, rebounding, struck Jim at the base of the brain. "Evans was drunk when he shot Jim," wrote the late Enos A. Mills, the celebrated naturalist and the greatest authority on Estes Park. "The stories," continued Mills, "that Jim was in love with Evans' daughter and that he insulted her are stories that seem not to have become known until after

They May Not Be Worth Much as Vehicles and the New Car Dealer May Stand a Loss When He Takes Them in on Trade, but They Still Have a Value to the Junk Man. So It Is to the Junk Yard They Go, There to Be Dissected and Their Parts Salvaged Even to the Last Hair.

THERE WAS a timing gear knock in Jones' car and Jones didn't know what to do with it. He wasn't a mechanically minded man. He spent money and the knock continued. There came a time when Jones felt it wasn't worth while spending more money on that car. He'd got service out of it. He traded it in on a new car. The dealer gave him an allowance of $200.

It wasn't worth that to the dealer. To have fitted the old car up would have cost another hundred dollars in labor and material. The dealer figured there might be $300 worth of use, all told, still in the car. But he sold it for junk. It was better to take the loss on the car than to take the risk on the repairs. The car, after being fixed up, would have $300 of use in it all right. But the customer would be expecting more than $300 worth of use. Buyers of used cars have a way of doing that. The dealer felt he couldn't take a chance on the sale and in addition the chance of making an enemy by disappointing a customer.

He had told Jones—had this dealer—that the car wasn't worth anything to him except as junk. And Jones, naturally, felt that this was the last of his car. He had liked that old car. It had sentimental associations. The young woman who was soon to become Mrs. Jones had been courted in that car. Jones hated to say good-by to it. As a matter of fact, he didn't say good-by to it. When he bought the platinum wedding ring for the young woman who was to be Mrs. Jones, some of the old car was in that ring. The junk dealer had sold used platinum points from the ignition systems he had accumulated to a manufacturing jeweler. And later, when Jones bought his installment-plan three-piece overstuffed parlor suite, some of the hair with which those pieces were stuffed had been reclaimed by the junk man from the automobile seats of Jones' old car.

THAT story may be fictitious. It also may be fact. Whether it really happened one cannot say. But it could have happened. When Jones sold his old automobile for junk he sold it to a man who knew how to make the utmost of whatever there was of value in that car. When Jones bought his kitchen range to set up housekeeping with the new Mrs. Jones he might have purchased a part of his old car, for such steel and iron in the machine as had no value as parts were shipped off to a foundry to be melted up and be recast into new parts. Or it may have been that the next automobile Jones bought may have had something in it that once had been a piece of steel in the old.

Had Jones sold direct to the junk dealer he probably would have run his car in under its own power. But since the junk man bought from a dealer, he didn't waste any time trying to make Jones' car run. He just sent out his truck, which is equipped with a derrick, hitched onto the old machine and drove in, not too proudly perhaps, into the haven of useless automobiles—the boneyard of the motor car. The junk man wouldn't bother about trying to make Jones' car run. It was cheaper for him to drag it into the yard.

There are several such automobile boneyards as the one which was the final port for the Jones machine. That particular one is located out on Easton avenue. A great, big, old, green stable serves as a storage house and office for William Schneider, who is the manager and who has been wrecking used cars since his not too distant boyhood. Around the old stable are an acre or so of used cars. As you pass, the place seems never to change its aspect. Always about that number of nonusable machines surrounding it. Men, busy about the yard, perhaps sorting scrap, perhaps rescuing parts which have a value, perhaps making piles of this or that which may be found of use in someone else's car. A man must "know his stuff" to operate one of these junk yards profitably. He must know what parts in the car which has just come to his lot are interchangeable with like parts in other cars. He must know for which of those parts there is the greatest demand. He must know, too, where to get machines that have parts with a resale value. Usually, these come to him from a dealer—just as the Jones car did. Sometimes, however, some disgusted owner will drive his car into the yard himself.

"Here," he will say, "I can't be fooling around with this old contraption any longer. What will you pay for it?"

"Junk is right. Well, what'll you give?"

PRICES vary. For a Ford a standard price—if the machine is of a self-starter model—is around $25. Without the starter they bring less. Electrical equipment is always in demand. So that the dealer can afford to pay more, knowing that for certain electric parts, at least, he will find a ready sale. A higher priced make of car will bring perhaps up to $125. But it must be in comparatively good condition. And probably when that price is paid the junk man is buying the machine principally for the sake of one part he knows that he can sell.

For it is not in the junk that the profit lies. It is in what you find, or may find, if you keep your eyes open. The car which is brought in to be junked may be an old model of a machine which was never popular and which hasn't been made for some years. Naturally enough, one would hardly expect to find much of value therein. But the dealer knows that the crank case in that car is identical with the crank case of a certain car that is now quite popular. He makes his little profit on the junk. But he has a nice profit on that crank case. Sometimes the tires alone are worth more than the automobile as it comes to him. Sometimes the wheels will have the greater part of the value in them.

There are certain charges about handling an automobile for junk. It must be chopped to pieces. And the pieces must be of certain sizes and shapes for shipment. The material must be sorted—steel here, sheet-iron there, and malleable iron somewhere else. To cut up a machine, sort it and load the scrap costs in the case of a Ford about $5 or $6. So that the scrapped machine will cost the junk man about $25 or $30. He is lucky if he gets that price out of the scrap. And his luck all depends upon what he can salvage—can find and use to sell for some other machine.

Hundreds of bodies surround the big barn in the auto boneyard. It is scarcely conceivable that they have value in them. The glass is carefully taken out, sorted into sizes and saved to sell. The bodies are torn from the frames, the frames will themselves be cut in two with an acetylene torch. The metal of the frames is chopped into two-foot pieces with a great, stout shear. The same cutting edge chops up the sheet metal into pieces of six or eight inches in size. These then are sorted according to the grade and kind of metal. When the junk man has a carload of a kind he sends it to the foundry.

But before the frame and the body are thus cut to pieces the dealer has gone over the car to rescue any part that has good, workable wear in it. Perhaps two of the four wheels are salvaged. The others have bent rims. The electric system usually offers something of value—even if it is only copper wiring, or the platinum points that are saved and sold to manufacturing jewelers. Perhaps there is an aluminum crank case that can be used again. The radiators have been taken out. They will be shipped in a carload lot to a smelter, put in a furnace, where the solder will be melted out of them and regained for future use, and where the other metals will find their way into other piles of similar classification and value—to be used once more. Perhaps the rear end is good. Perhaps the timing gears can be used. Perhaps there is some value in the engine block, or in the clutch parts. The dealer has inspected closely. Not all of these parts in any car that comes to him may be usable. Perhaps some of them may be of no value except as scrap. But if they are, that is the margin of his profit.

AND if he does find such parts, he washes them in gasoline, so they can be readily inspected. Perhaps he has great bins with such used parts in them. He has the problem, now, of finding a market. Sometimes he will do so by mail. There is one motor parts concern in St. Louis—its business is changing now to take in a greater proportion of new parts rather than old—which sells by mail to South Africa and Australia, and into the Orient even. But more frequently the man who buys a car to junk it has his customers come to him. They will drive out to the great, green barn on Easton avenue, where the Wellston Auto Salvage Company has its wrecking plant.

"Have you got a rear axle for a Studebaker?" asks the customer. And the model and year are told. And from the warehouse what the customer wants is brought forth.

Usually the higher priced cars are from four to six years old when they reach the boneyard. Medium-priced cars are from three to five years as a rule, according to Schneider. The cheap cars reach the junk heap in the normal wear and tear of their daily life after about two to four years of hard usage. Sometimes a car has been in service many more than these average years. Sometimes one has seen very little or no service. It may have been so smashed up in a wreck that the owner feels it would cost far too much to repair, or it may have been run until it is all but like the wonderful one-hoss shay, and ready to fall apart. In either of these events, the owner is likely to bring it in. But usually the junk man buys his cars from car dealers.

SMITH, who holds a franchise for a high-priced make of car, has a certain factory-fixed quota he must sell. To do that he may take in a two-year-old model at a value of $1500. He has had a demand for that car. He knows where he can sell it. At once. He does, and takes in another used car for a $900 value in the trade. He fixes that up. It doesn't seem to move quickly. But he finally sells it, taking in another car for $300. It would cost something to fix that car up. He can get a junk price for it. He absorbs the loss rather than risk the gamble of fixing it up, and the further possible displeasure of a customer who might buy it. That is where the junk man has performed a real economic service. And he has taken from the market a possible competing used car.

There is a better chance to sell a better used car, or a cheaper new one, with the old machine relegated to the boneyard.

And that has to be well considered in these days of standardization in the automobile business. Today the dealer knows with the certainty based on statistics what the value is of each used car. There are established standards of that value, based upon the probable service the old used car will give. There is an absolute standard of depreciation under conditions of average service. The first year a car loses 40 per cent in depreciation. Succeeding years the loss is 20 per cent. There comes a time when that loss has taken up so much of the value that only one end is possible. It must be sold at a junk price. And it is so sold to make room on the road for another good car to take its place.

Thus, the automobile, starting pridefully out in life, with its bright and shiny accoutrements, comes always at last to the same inevitable end. Each year, as the dullness of its finish grows and the rattle in its frame and motor becomes a little less suppressed, it is called upon to take more punishment and receive fewer baths and greasings. "What's the difference?" thinks the owner. His eye is already fixed on a new model and this old boat can only bring an old car's price, anyway. It is fixed and refixed and bandied about until some fine day it wheezes its last gasp and is dragged into the boneyard—the place where good automobiles go when they die.

This wreck is 23 years old but its engine will still run.

Anticosti, Island of Disaster,

BOUGHT FOR $160,000 SOLD FOR $6,000,000

Shipwreck and Horror Mark History of Domain Given Louis Joliet for His Explorations of Louisiana Region; Wreckers Kept Alive Tradition of Gamache Till Chocolate King Drove Them Away.

QUEBEC, Canada. THE last French lord is gone from Anticosti. Where for more than two centuries explorers, trappers, hunters, fishermen, smugglers and wreckers wove romance upon an island frightful for its shipwrecks, a mill moves in to help retail romance by making paper. But modern industry also has its romance. And not the least of its strange stories is of how Henri Menier, the French chocolate king, bought Anticosti Island for a playground in 1895, paying $160,000. And of how his heir and brother, Gaston Menier, Senator of France, sold the rocky waste the other day for a cool $6,000,000. It was the price of a small empire. And Anticosti is an empire of wood pulp timber, as large as the State of Connecticut or the Island of Porto Rico.

Senator Gaston Menier was the last French lord of Anticosti, though both his brother and he held it under the British flag. The first French lord was Louis Joliet to whom Louis XIV gave it in 1680 in reward for those great explorations which made Louisiana a part of France. And from the day when King Louis gave away the rocky waste of Anticosti to show his gratitude for an empire, its history has been a record of disappointment and disaster.

Joliet, Canadian born, had set forth in 1673 with Father Marquette to explore the West and South and find for France the truth of stories trappers brought up to Quebec, of rich and fertile lands, great waters and shining rivers. Priest and adventurer, they made their way to the Mississippi and rediscovered the "father of waters." Down they came past the mingling of the muddy Missouri with the Mississippi waters, past the point where Pierre Laclede would build one day his village of St. Louis, and on south into the Chickasaw country. Somewhere in their journeying they passed above the spot where the body of De Soto was sunk more than a century before. They had rediscovered the great river that he had found—and that Europe had forgotten. On their way back, near Montreal, Joliet lost his papers and barely saved his life in the rapids of La Chine. It was his first great disappointment. Anticosti was the second.

For Joliet had cheered himself as best he could by writing what he could remember of his journals and by marrying, in 1675, Clare Frances Bissot. His father-in-law was a French fur trader. Joliet saw inevitably that the possession of America would be determined largely through the fur trade. Finally France gave him the island of Anticosti. He retired there with his family and his servants to fish and trap.

"NATIS-COTEE" the Indians had originally called the island. The French, making the nearest thing they could of the word, contrived Anticosti of it. T. Wright, an English surveyor who spent a winter there about 100 years after Louis Joliet's misfortune, carefully noted: "The bears, who are the principal inhabitants of the island, are so numerous that in the space of six weeks we killed fifty-three and might have destroyed twice that number if we had thought fit." Foxes, martens and otters he found in abundance. Such was the place where Joliet sought to found a fur domain.

In 1680 he received it from Louis the Grand. Nine years later the English began their attacks on Canada in the course of King William's war. Sir William Phipps sailed up from New York in 1689 to seize Quebec and in the course of his voyaging anchored off Anticosti. Joliet was away from home. That probably made little difference except in the strength of the defense. Phipps landed troops, destroyed Joliet's home and trading post and carried off into captivity his wife and mother-in-law. Later the women prisoners were recovered by exchange, but Joliet never returned to make the ill-fated island his home.

Then, strangely enough, the island helped revenge the despite done its lord. Phipps' attack on Quebec was entirely unsuccessful. On his retreat down the river his fleet became separated, and one brig with 60 men aboard struck on the island of Anticosti. There was hardly time to land the few remaining provisions before the vessel sank. It was the first great disaster recorded of the island.

THE captain knew he must winter there, and from the planks of the wreck built a storehouse and nine small huts. They agreed in council upon an allowance of food to each man from their short stores; two biscuits, half a pound of pork, half a pound of flour, a quart of peas and two salt fish were allowed to last each man a week. It was late in the fall then. By December 20, 1689, the ship's doctor died; and in the next few weeks 40 more men.

They were desperate. The survivors knew that unless all shared reasonably and equally in the little food remaining they would soon face famine; and even discussed among themselves the possible horror of cannibalism. Yet the store house was frequently broken open, and one night a sailor, getting to the provisions, "eat no less than eighteen biscuits," says an old chronicle of the disaster, "which caused him to swell to such a degree that he was forced to have his stomach stroked and bathed before the fire to prevent its bursting." Five of the men put forth on March 25, 1690, in a skiff for Boston, and after incredible hardships reached that port on May 9. A rescue party was sent out from there and finally brought off the three or four survivors.

But perhaps the most harrowing of disasters was that of which record has been left by Father Emmanuel Crespel, a Jesuit missionary, one of six men from fifty to survive a shipwreck there in 1736.

Father Crespel with 30 men sought the mainland. He and two others reached there alive after five months of famine, epidemic and gangrene. Help was sent to the twenty-four who had remained behind. But three were alive.

"Their wants," says the priest, "had been so great that the survivors had eaten even the shoes of their dead companions after first boiling them in snow water. And when that resource failed they had recourse to the leather breeches of the dead. When M. Volant found them they had but one or two pairs remaining."

More years passed. Shortly after the conquest of Quebec in 1759 an English ship was wrecked upon the island. Crew and passengers suffered terrible hardships, but survived; partly, say old chronicles, because the cargo of wine she carried supplied a food.

And there was the November day in 1827 when the stout brig Granicus was hurled against the rocky ribs of Anticosti. Next spring Canadian surveyors found an awful record of its crew. Human skeletons littered the inside of a rude hut near the shore and in a pot over the mud fireplace were discovered preparations for a meal, traditional in the Fiji Islands, but which civilized man abjures.

"Island of Shipwrecks" they began to call the place. Where disaster broods there are always plunderers, and sometimes ghouls. In the early part of the nineteenth century some fiends among the outcasts who found a refuge in its rock fastnesses had begun to lure ships by false lights to their doom. They still tell on the island of the wreck of the Circe and of the Cybele, but authentic stories of these disasters are difficult to find in maritime records. Local tradition, probably, has magnified them much. But local tradition did not magnify the estimate of the Canadian shipping officials who in the 1880's showed that, in a ten-year period preceding, 108 vessels, including several steamships, 67 sailing ships, 14 brigantines and 18 schooners, had been tossed upon the sullen reefs of Anticosti, with the loss of 3000 lives and not less than $7,000,000.

And though Canada fought to reduce this list of horrors, by surveys and by light houses, it was not until after M. Henri Menier had bought the island that the last of the wreckers was driven out.

Of all these wreckers the most astonishing character was Gamache, who lives still in the folk-tales of the island and who has become a sort of legendary hero, or devil's advocate if you will. There are those who profoundly believe that he held commerce with the Black Man; that by his sorceries he lured rich vessels to doom upon the rocks; that his Satanic master came to Gamache's aid when danger threatened; that more than once, when his enemies surrounded him, Gamache, his ship and all, escaped in a sulphurous explosion—vanished altogether, leaving in their wake only a whiff of brimstone and a floating will o' the wisp for the King's Navy to follow.

GAMACHE was born on the island in 1784. Louis Olivier, he was baptized. An adventurous and precocious boy, who ran away from home at the age of 11 and entered the English marine. Perhaps all that followed is explained by that hard schooling as a British tar. Strangely enough this Frenchman born was almost English in thought, save for a saturnine humor. He believed in the British tradition of "free trade." When Great Britain became master of Canada the French Canadians became good citizens. Yet they retained their French tradition. Thus Gamache was British-spirited among the French-spirited neighbors. They upheld the law—for the most part. He was by way of being a bit of a smuggler. And he hated monopoly. Much of his trouble came about through his persistence in smuggling and in trading with the Indians for their furs while the French company that held the mail-boat contract, to Anticosti and the Gulf region, held that such contract gave it an exclusive trading right with the habitants.

So that if an old tale still persists upon the island which tells of how that bad Gamache was once becalmed in the midst of a law-abiding fishing fleet and feared greatly for his fate amongst so many of his enemies; and of how he called loudly then upon the Devil to send him a capful of wind, there may be a more natural explanation for what followed. As the tale runs, no sooner had Gamache uttered his impious prayer than his great black beard stood out in the breeze, the slack sheets snapped against the halyards and bellied in the wind and the pirate's bark sped out and away over an absolutely glassy sea, while the pious fisher folk crossed themselves and cowered upon their wave-swept decks.

The Abbe J. B. A. Ferland has laughingly exploded that delightful story, and his historic note upon Gamache explains also how the navy chased the will o' the wisp when it thought to pursue the devil's friend. The good abbe was on the island of Anticosti during the lifetime of Gamache. The old "sea-tiger" he calls him, adding that Gamache loved to be frank and open, but also loved to mystify those who feared him.

One day, according to the abbe's story, Gamache was in the Port of Mingan, surrounded by trappers and traders in their boats, when a sail appeared in the distance, coming very rapidly. The old wolf of the sea recognized an armed ship by which he had often been pursued. "Goodby until tomorrow, my friends," Gamache cried. "Don't scatter too far. I will take up your affairs when I finish with this more important business."

He lifted anchor and while the enemy came running in to fall upon its prey the canoes disappeared. Gamache's vessel was built like a swallow, handled easily, moved with a breath of wind. He was, himself, a most skillful pilot. All sail spread, he ran out to sea while the armed ship vainly tacked to reach him. She turned in pursuit and as night advanced the two ships became mere shadows on the waters.

"Here's a fine to do," cried Gamache, and he summoned his ship's company. "Put out the fire in the galley so those varmints can't see to follow. At present it is necessary to let them follow a will o' the wisp." Then he ordered some planking brought on deck, fastened together a stout little raft and to the raft nailed fast a big copper vessel. Embers from the galley he ordered then, and placed them in the floating beacon which he cast adrift.

"Good, my boys," he cried. "Let them amuse themselves chasing the witch-light. We'll be off for Mingan. They never will be smart enough to look for us there."

He was right. When they found the floating ghost-light and learned what it was, the enemy continued its chase southward. The people of Mingan next morning were surprised to find Gamache riding safely at anchor in their harbor. His friends of the day before put out in their small boats. He did a thriving trade.

GAMACHE liked to be known, so runs the abbe's tale, as the friend of the Prince of Evil. Evidently he had a humorous contempt for the superstitions and naive fears of those about him. At an inn once he ordered a dinner for two. "But your friend?" protested the hostess.

"Never mind my friend. He'll be here," Gamache answered.

She served the meal. No one appeared. He bade her retire and closed the door. When he summoned her again both plates had been used and both napkins. All the implements of eating. The woman swore that no one man could have eaten such a meal.

She was sure she had heard two different voices speaking in the closed dining room.

Because of her terror he ordered another supper. "You shall pay twice for your fears," he said.

He returned to the inn that night to find

CHIVALRY

By IDA M. EVANS

There Isn't Any Knightly Attitude Nowadays, the Group of Men Agreed, Because the Young Women Are So Awful. These Relatives and Friends Seemed to Think That Linny Was One of the Worst. Then Little Linny Got Into a Foolish Scrape. . .

"Why — why, what are you doing here?"

THE conversation of the six men ceased as Linny entered the library. She strolled through the half-open door, raised thin black eyebrows in annoyance at finding the room occupied, purloined a few matches from her father's silver holder on the desk, and strolled out. She was a thin, young thing, with a satiny mop of short, black hair and an insufferable air of self-possession. Besides a purple silk handkerchief around her head, she wore a tangerine-colored woolen bathing suit.

The six men were: Professor Ira Mussmull, in his early seventies; John Hoterick, in his late sixties; Henry Bean, in his early fifties; George Gray, in his last forty; Burton Gray, who was 29, and Arthur Kemmer, 31.

Professor Mussmull was a Ph. D. and some other letters, too, a very respected holder of the chair of economics in an educational institution—also Linny's granduncle on her mother's side. Hoterick, his lifelong friend, was a scientific horticulturist.

George Gray was Linny's father. He was in the lumber business. Henry Bean was his partner. Burton Gray was his nephew, and therefore cousin to Linny. Arthur Kemmer was a rising young architect and partner of Burton; their friendship was collegeborn. Kemmer was from another state.

Burton's attitude toward his slim cousin was ultra brotherly. He had set his jaws at her entrance, as if her appearance mortified him.

Conversation was resumed, but on a tarter note, as if Linny had spurred six tongues.

He had risen to close the door, which Linny had left wide open. He paused, hand on knob, to snap his fingers.

"Well, as I was about to say," continued the neat, white-haired Mussmull, "I gave out the topic for the thesis quite thoughtlessly. Really, the subject itself was alien to the course. But my mind was on the feudal sources of certain modern laws. I was amazed at what was said to me. I make it a rule, you know"—in explanation—"to encourage perfect honesty of comment from my body of students."

"I'll bet the body howled!" Kemmer was amused.

"YOU'RE quite right. One young man felt free to shout that there was 'no such animal'! Another chuckled: 'Chivalry today! Oh, please let us instead write 8000 words on the Probable Resurrection of the Crocheted Tidy and Its Effect on Interstate Freight Rates.' Another said quite seriously: 'We ought to get double credits for it, Professor Mussmull. Comes under biology, too. Extinct stuff, you know. Disappearance of it. Like our little toe.'"

"Clever lads," said Burton Gray, with the patronage of the succeeding-in-life alumnus for the existent classmen, a new and crude crowd, of course, but capable of development—perhaps—into rising young persons like himself. "Nowadays you feel like offering your young women friends more clothes —not chivalry."

"Every once in a while I see that they still expect us to give them our seats in street cars," murmured Kemmer, ironically. "I wonder why. None of them are ladies"——

"Of course"—this murmur was elderly—"the war helped."

"According to some thinkers, wars are results, not causes."

"It seems that some degenerate quirk of human nature has evolved—like a sixth toe." It was Linny's grunting father.

"Or grown out, like a queue on the soul," shrugged young Kemmer, who had the forehead of a thoughtful young man.

"Cancer of the soul!" corrected Bean, grumpily. "Heard a lecturer say so the other night. World's soul is diseased. Younger generation is the disease. Spots and all that, you know."

"Whatever is the cause," hotly broke in the prim, gray-haired Hoterick, who loved plants, "I find the young women of today insufferable. I have ceased giving them my seat in street cars. Absolutely!"

"If one dropped her glove, best glace kid and Parisian stitched, I'm afraid the crocodiles would get it for all of my scrambling," yawned Kemmer. Linny's cousin gave a short, unkind laugh and said in mock mirth: "Oh, Arthur, you mean thing! Wouldn't you scramble? Well"—another laugh—"neither would I."

Conversation presently languished. All were busy men. It was a Saturday afternoon. The two young men had called at the Gray home to discuss with the two experienced lumbermen a proposed new building; the plans of which they had a contract for drawing; they were to spend the remainder of the day, evening and following Sunday perfecting drawings to be submitted to a certain committee on Monday.

George Gray himself was to take office that evening as incoming president of a commercial club. Henry Bean was to be toastmaster at the club's incidental banquet. It happened that Professor Mussmull was leaving within two hours to deliver an important address on civics to a learned society in a town 60 miles distant. Hoterick, the horticulturist, consulted his watch. An imported orchid was making its initial opening that evening; he was disappointed, as were one or two of the others, that his pleasure over the plant could not be shared by them.

There was a general movement from chairs—but the movement was checked. A shrill, excited, young voice was heard. It was at the telephone in the hall.

THE door had not been quite closed, after all. Linny's was the voice, tearful and dramatic and rage-high. She might have spoken lower, or not at all, had she guessed her listeners. But their previous silence had pointed to departure from the room and the house. Certainly her recital of facts was nothing for a normal girl to wish her male relatives to hear.

"Anne, where've you been for the last hour? I've been hunting for you like mad. Anne, I've got something to tell you! You know Hugg Brown and Bat Westby? I wish the two of them were boiled in ethyl! It was all Hugg's fault, though! I detest him worse than Bat and wish him worse luck!"

Anne may have put a query. At least four of the six listeners, who, for various reasons, did not care to interrupt the telephoner, jumped as Linny's cicada-high outburst tore into their ears.

"Good heavens, Anne, I'm getting at what happened as fast as I can. You remember last Wednesday night we were over at Claire's till all hours—well, I was just feeling a little humorous. And it seemed like a trivial joke to take Hugg's billbook out of his pocket. Say, tell me, Anne, tell me this: would you or anyone else expect Hugg Brown's billbook to have anything in it worth a second squint? Tell me!

"I give you my word, Anne, I thought it was only his cigarette case. That is, at first. You know, he's always got his good one in pawn and using some old leatherette article. But, anyway, that's what I thought I was soft-fingering from his pocket, and I had an idea of filling it up with dead butts. But he saw me take it. Or he says he did. I think someone else blabbed to him.

"YES, Anne, you're a little Houdini. That piece of leather was stuffed full, like a just-replenished gas tank, and Hugg says he'll have it back intact or put me in the hoosegow. Hugg is a cobra! I don't know how he ever got into our crowd! You know, Anne, our crowd may have its faults. But most of it is human, Anne. Human!"

Linny's youthful voice seemed to hold pure sorrow for one individual's lack of character.

"Hugg turns out not to be one of us. That's all. And as for Bat—yes, Anne, Bat took me home that night. And in the car he took the billbook from me. At that, I thought he was joking and would give it back in the end. But when I heard his unholy shout of joy at the contents—and when I got a glimpse of the platinum chain itself—Can't you guess, Anne, what that was? Exactly, Anne! Hugg had sneaked it from his mother's jewel case only three hours before. And you know Hugg was only one of several who had refused that week to lend Bat a few dollars—Bat was $200 to the bad over that motor smashup last month. Well, of course, Bat must have been looking for just such a find. I wonder, Anne, who else in our crowd has paid and paid and paid for knowing him!

"I went on my knees to him last night, and begged him to return it to Hugg. And he said there was only one way for Hugg to get it back, and that was by Dempsey stuff —nice news for Hugg, who weighs 112, poor shrimp, with Bat tipping the Fairbanks at 210, and besides used to be coach's pet at school.

"I've put my side of the case plainly before Hugg. You see, Bat simply defies me to prove that he took it from me. Still, that doesn't excuse Hugg for ordering me to do the dirty work and get it back to him, or take the consequences. Hugg says, too, that he's got only my word that Bat took it. And he's let me have only 24 hours to return it to his own hands.

"WHAT am I going to do, Anne?" A youthful voice became firm and vindictive. "Listen, Anne, Little Eliza will get off the ice, all right. She just phones you for a little aid. Claire Sloame is going to assist, too. Bat did her some dirt once. Besides, I told her if she didn't help me, I'd never speak to her again, and perhaps make her pay for that bracelet of mine she lost.

"You know, Anne, where Bat lives? That old red mausoleum on Elm street? His mother's not at home this week. You know, she does something in politics and clubs. Anyway, she's out of town, and Bat put the thing away at home. He had sense enough to know that Hugg could get a gang and waylay him in an alley, if it was on his person. But last night Bat snickered that his desk was used to questionable fillings.

"And around 10 o'clock tonight, while Hugg is calling on Claire—and she said she'd make it interesting enough to hold him in her father's library—why, I'm going to get into the Westby domicile by that hall window and jimmy that great mahogany desk that Bat smirks over when he mentions it. I don't know a lot about the inside of the house—Bat's mother won't stand for our crowd's parties—but with a flashlight and a screwdriver from mother's coupe, I can find the folding doors and the right pigeonhole, provided I'm not interrupted.

"And that's why I'm phoning you, Anne. Didn't you say that your mother's Minna is a cousin of Mrs. Westby's Greta? There's only the one maid on the Westby premises, and if she can be got out of the way. . . . Thanks, Anne! I'll do something for you some day. 'By! I'll ring you around 1 a. m. and let you know if I'm at home or in jail."

In his library, George Gray, his face flushed, said:

"Gentlemen, do not be alarmed. My daughter will not housebreak tonight."

"Lock her in her room."

KEMMER walked up a handsome, shadowy street. He knew that he was about to do a foolish thing. For a little fool of a girl; a girl with whom, too, he had only a perfunctory acquaintance; a girl with whom, moreover, he had no desire to become better acquainted!

It was true that in a way he was self-protected. What a poor devil of a hobo, or any stranger, could not do without inevitable disaster, Arthur Kemmer, member of the Rotary, Commercial, University, Architectural, Art and other clubs, might do, on a ten-to-seven shot.

Caught entering the Westby residence, in the absence of son, mistress and servants, he could offer any one of several excuses.

He could protest that he thought he was entering the house of a friend, pleading his six brief months' knowledge of the town. Or he could pretend, delicately, that he was a little under the weather. He could call upon half a hundred friends to help him by their united testimony that he had never done such a thing before, that he was not the sort of person to be a lawbreaker. They would say, and believe, that he must have been ill.

And there was the good old amnesia bunk. One must have a certain amount of social standing to use that with success. But he had the standing.

It was true that he hoped most sincerely that he would need neither yarn nor friends. Indeed, had he actually feared the worst, he would have been far from this old tree-shadowy street. He had, as has been said, a clear mind. It was this possession which gave him the right to disapprove of girls like Linny.

Linny was one of a long line, a horde, with whom he had come into contact during the recent few years.

He had met them in offices, street cars, on the rare occasions when he went to church with his mother back in his home town farther east.

At intervals, when in a congenial crowd, or even alone, he had pondered seriously on what kind of children would issue from such mothers. Not his children, he had declared.

He knew why he was doing this foolish action this night. He had reasoned it out: Partly because of his friendship for Burt; partly because the girl herself, hysterically shrilling into that phone, had been such a little ninny. What he was about to do was like—well, it was like helping a little, chattering, muddy dog out of a ditch.

He would put the recovered property, in a plain paper wrapper addressed to Linny, on the Gray hall table. No need for Linny to know who had served her. The little blase ninny might misunderstand his service.

ELM street, belonging to the oldest part of town, had lawns wide and thick, with privet and barberry hedges, hydrangeas and caladium. Bat belonged to what was known as an old family. His mother was the kind of widow for whom safe-deposit boxes and trust companies were invented. But Arthur understood well enough that only sons like Bat can spend far more money than can be cajoled out of a conservative widowed mother.

With humor not mellowed by this understanding, he walked to the front steps and door of the large brick house. Front door, be it remarked! No need to skulk until it was necessary. And later, an open approach at the start might be recalled as legal support.

He rang the bell. No answer. Again! None. Good! Faithful Anne had not failed a friend. He slipped around the terrace—to such a name it was justly entitled, with its massive stone balustrade—and readily made his way to the hall window which Linny had mentioned. The sill was high. But the feat was trifling for a lithe man in the thirties.

He sent his pocket flash up and down the hall with excess caution. But emptiness rang like a gong throughout the house.

In the doorway, he was about to flash the little beam over the room that he was entering when a sound stayed his hand.

One hand grasping a heavy curtain fold, he waited, startled. He could not place or define the sound.

To the left he edged, four inches, drawing the velvet folds about his person.

WHOEVER was in the room had no desire to be known. The one sly sound was followed by silence. Arthur waited.

He feared that it might be Linny. He had not much faith in a portly parent's ability to keep a girl locked in her room. He wished that this lack of faith had come to him sooner.

He regretted exceedingly the excuse he had made to Burt, an hour back, for getting away. He had said that a headache needed to be walked off. Engrossed in his drawings, Burt had nodded absently, not raising his green eyeshade.

There is no regret, of course, like that of a liar about to be found out. Kemmer wished devoutly that he was back at the desk opposite Burt, wearing his own green eyeshade. He began to blush over what Burt would think. Linny would blab the matter abroad, with laughter or a blase shrug of her thin shoulders. He'd cut a figure! He'd be——

There came a second shock. By this time, without the least sound, he had practically shrouded himself in the velvet curtain of the doorway. It was well. Someone else had crawled through the hall window and was approaching silently down the hall. And that someone, coming, coming closer, was about to enter—was entering the library. Kemmer, almost flattened against the jamb, had actual but unperceived contact with the person entering.

BY THIS time he was mastering the dark in that small degree of which the optical nerve is capable when light is nearly lacking. But it was more by a concentration of the six senses than by sight or by hearing that Kemmer knew that this third person—counting himself and someone already in the room—was making careful way toward the most important object in the room, the handsome old desk.

Then he heard again that first, small, sly sound. But now, instead of alarming him—oh, the courage induced by a curtain!—it gave him a malicious satisfaction. Number One—so he designated whoever it might be, man or girl, who was first on the premises—was undoubtedly as panic-stricken as himself. Number Two. And Number Three seemed to have been galvanized in his tracks.

Arthur could almost place the small, sly sound of Number One, too. It was opposite the door—at what he would say was the southeast corner of the room.

And then he had another shock. Number Two, had he fatuously styled himself? Surely there had been a squirming movement in the northwest corner of the room. That would make four people. His spine had a chill feeling. The chill feeling spread from spine to knees. As still as the doorjamb itself he stood. For now a fifth person was coming down the hall. And a fifth person was stepping noiselessly through the doorway into the library, almost touching him.

The fifth person who had entered the room must have gained some sort of shelter. There came a small sound, like a suppressed cough, from the southwest corner. The last to enter must have got behind a chair. A heavy, handsome, old rocker seemed to have been moved perhaps the sixteenth of an inch. Our fathers' rocking chairs were not moved even so little a distance without uttering a dignified creak.

ARTHUR KEMMER hastily made up his mind. Thank heaven, he had had gumption enough—no, to be honest, luck enough—to stay at the door. He might be able to unswathe himself from the velvet curtain, gain the hall, sprint down it and jump through the window to safety on the lawn and then the street—and then those safe bachelor quarters where his good friend Burt was engrossed in assiduous labor.

Absorbed, he had not heard fresh, careful footsteps from the window, down the hall—— Ah!

The unexpected happened. This last comer was warier than the others, and knew, moreover, that a velvet curtain hung at hand. Fingers reached, clutched, caught. A thin, small form flattened into supposed shelter. Oh—gurgle!

Gurgle that never rose upon the air.

THE MICROBE HUNTERS

One of the Great Mystery Stories of Human Existence; the Pursuit by Detective-Scientists of the Tiny Animals That Make Unceasing War Against the Race of Men — The Silent, Unseen Assassins That Kill Kings and Babies Brought to Book by the Man Behind the Microscope.

THIS may be called the great detective story of all history. The scene is the whole world. The time is the last two centuries. The villain is the germ of disease, the silent and unseen murderer that slays babies in warm cradles and Kings in guarded palaces. The detectives are the spectacled men of science who spend their lives studying the mysterious realms and dynasties of microbes on the point of a pin.

Two hundred years of work have brought science to the door of knowledge. This book, published by Harcourt, Brace & Co., tells vividly the romantic tale of the pioneers who have found the tiny animals and their followers who are seeking the weapons with which to fight them.

No one man or one century furnished the clew or found the solution to these mysteries. The janitor of the city hall in a little town in Holland started the quest. An Italian priest took up the work when the Dutchman was dead. A French painter was the third to carry the torch. He was Pasteur, probably the greatest of the line. Each one broke new ground, but each depended on the work done before him.

Not all the work is done in laboratories. In this story the sleuths pursue their quarry in the fever-ridden camps of Cuba, down miasmic African rivers, through the sunny fields of France and across the Russian steppes. The jungles of India and the cattle ranges of the United States know them equally well.

The story as told here has not a scientific word or phrase. No tale of adventure surpasses it in gallantry, in ingenuity, or in compelling interest.

By PAUL DE KRUIF

Scientist and Co-Worker With Sinclair Lewis in "Arrowsmith"

TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY years ago an obscure man named Leeuwenhoek looked for the first time into a mysterious new world peopled with a thousand different kinds of tiny beings, some ferocious and deadly, others friendly and useful, many of them more important to mankind than any continent or archipelago.

Leeuwenhoek, pronounced Lay-ven-hook, is now almost as unknown as his strange little animals and plants were at the time he discovered them. This is the story of Leeuwenhoek, the first of the microbe hunters. It is the tale of the bold and persistent and curious explorers and fighters of death who came after him. It is the plain history of their tireless peerings into this new fantastic world. They have tried to chart it, these microbe hunters and death fighters. So trying they have groped and fumbled and made mistakes and roused vain hopes. Some of them have died—done to death by the immensely small assassins they were studying—and these have passed to an obscure small glory.

Today it is respectable to be a man of science. Those who go by the name of scientist form an important element of the population, their laboratories are in every city, their achievements are on the front pages of the newspapers, often before they are fully achieved. Almost any young university student can go in for research and by and by become a comfortable science professor at a tidy little salary in a cozy college. But take yourself back to Leeuwenhoek's day, 250 years ago, and imagine yourself just through high school, getting ready to choose a career, wanting to know—

You have lately recovered from an attack of mumps, you ask your father what is the cause of mumps and he tells you a mumpish evil spirit has got you. His theory may not impress you much, but you decide to make believe you believe him and not to wonder any more about what mumps is—because if you publicly don't believe him you are in for a beating and may even be turned out of the house. Your father is Authority.

THAT was the world 300 years ago, when Leeuwenhoek was born. It had hardly begun to shake itself free from superstitions, it was barely beginning to blush for its ignorance. It was a world where science (which only means trying to find truth by careful observation and clear thinking) was just learning to toddle on vague and wobbly legs. It was a world where Servetus was burned to death for daring to cut up and examine the body of a dead man, where Galileo was shut up for life for daring to prove that the earth moved around the sun.

Antony Leeuwenhoek was born in 1632, amid the blue windmills and low streets and high canals of Delft, in Holland. His family were burghers of an intensely respectable kind, and I say intensely respectable because they were basket makers and brewers, and brewers are respectable and highly honored in Holland. Leeuwenhoek's father died early and his mother sent him to school to learn to be a Government official, but he left school at 16 to be an apprentice in a dry-goods store in Amsterdam. That was his university. Think of a present-day scientist getting his training for experiment among bolts of gingham, listening to the tinkle of the bell on the cash drawer, being polite to an eternal succession of Dutch housewives who shopped with a penny-pinching dreadful exhaustiveness—but that was Leeuwenhoek's university for six years.

At the age of 21 he left the dry-goods store, went back to Delft, married, set up a dry-goods store of his own there. For 20 years after that very little is known about him, except that he had two wives (in succession) and several children, most of whom died, but there is no doubt that during this time he was appointed janitor of the city hall of Delft, and that he developed a most idiotic love for grinding lenses. He had heard that if you very carefully ground very little lenses out of clear glass, you would see things look much bigger than they appeared to the naked eye. . . . Little is known about him from 20 to 40, but there is no doubt that he passed in those days for an ignorant man. The only language he knew was Dutch—that was an obscure language, despised by the cultured world as a tongue of fishermen and shopkeepers and diggers of ditches. Educated men talked Latin in those days, but Leeuwenhoek could not so much as read it, and his only literature was the Dutch Bible. His ignorance was a great help to him, for, cut off from all of the learned nonsense of his time, he had to trust to his own eyes, his own thoughts, his own judgment. And that was easy for him, because there never was a more mulish man than this Antony Leeuwenhoek.

IT WOULD be great fun to look through a lens and see things bigger than your naked eye showed them to you! But buy lenses? Not Leeuwenhoek. There never was a more suspicious man. Buy lenses? He would make them himself. During these 20 years of his obscurity he went to spectacle makers and got the rudiments of lens grinding. He visited alchemists and apothecaries and put his nose into their secret ways of getting metals from ores, he began fumblingly to learn the craft of the gold and silversmiths. He was a most pernickety man and was not satisfied with grinding lenses as good as those of the best lens grinder in Holland, they had to be better than the best, and then he still fussed over them for long hours. Next he mounted these lenses in little oblongs of copper or silver or gold, which he had extracted himself, over hot fires, among strange smells and fumes. Today searchers pay $75 for a fine shining microscope, turn the screws, peer through it, make discoveries—without knowing anything about how it is built. But Leeuwenhoek—

Of course, his neighbors thought he was a bit cracked, but Leeuwenhoek went on burning and blistering his hands. Working forgetful of his family and regardless of his friends, he bent solitary to subtle task in still nights. The good neighbors sniggered, while that man found a way to make a tiny lens, less than one-eighth of an inch across, so symmetrical, so perfect, that it showed little things to him with a fantastic clear enormousness. Yes, he was a very uncultured man, but he alone of all men in Holland knew how to make those lenses, and he said of those neighbors: "We must forgive them, seeing that they know no better."

Now, this self-satisfied dry-goods dealer began to turn his lenses onto everything he could get hold of. He looked through them at the muscle fibers of a whale and the scales of his own skin. He went to the butcher shop and begged or bought ox eyes and was amazed at how prettily the crystalline lens of the eye of the ox is put together. He peered for hours at the build of the hairs of a sheep, of a beaver, of an elk, that were transformed from their fineness into great rough logs under his bit of glass. He delicately dissected the head of a fly; he stuck its brain on the fine needle of his microscope—how he admired the clear details of the marvelous big brain of that fly! He examined the cross-sections of the wood of a dozen different trees and squinted at the seeds of plants. He grunted "Impossible!" when he first spied the outlandish large perfection of the sting of a flea and the legs of a louse. That man Leeuwenhoek was like a puppy who sniffs—with a totally impolite disregard of discrimination—at every object of the world around him.

There never was a less sure man than Leeuwenhoek. He looked at this bee's sting or that louse's legs again and again and again. He left his specimens sticking on the point of his strange microscope for months—in order to look at other things he made more microscopes till he had hundreds of them!—then he came back to those first specimens to correct his first mistakes. He never set down a word about anything he peeped at, he never made a drawing until hundreds of peeps showed him that, under given conditions, he would always see exactly the same thing. And then he was not sure! He said:

ANTONY LEEUWENHOEK.
First of the Microbe Hunters.

"PEOPLE who look for the first time through a microscope say now 'I see this,' and then 'I see that'—and even a skilled observer can be fooled. On these observations I have spent more time than many will believe, but I have done them with joy, and I have taken no notice of those who have said 'Why take so much trouble and what good is it?'—but I do not write for such people, but only for the philosophically settle. What experiments those solemn searchers made! Put a spider in a circle made of the powder of a unicorn's horn and that spider can't crawl out—so said the wisdom of that day. But these Invisible Collegians? One of them brought what was supposed to be powdered unicorn's horn and another came carrying a little spider in a bottle. The college crowded around under the light of high candles. Silence, then the hushed experiment, and here is their report of it:

"A circle was made with the powder of unicorn's horn and a spider set in the middle of it, but it immediately ran out."

Crude, you exclaim. Of course. But remember that one of the members of this college was Robert Boyle, founder of the science of chemistry, and another was Isaac Newton. Such was The Invisible College, and presently, when Charles II came to the throne, it rose from its depths as a sort of blind-pig scientific society to the dignity of the name of the Royal Society of England. And they were Antony Leeuwenhoek's first audience. There was one man in Delft who did not laugh at Antony Leeuwenhoek, and that was Regnier de Graaf, whom the Lords and Gentlemen of the Royal Society had made a corresponding member because he had written them of interesting things he had found in the human ovary. Already Leeuwenhoek was rather surly and suspected everybody, but he let De Graaf peep through those magic eyes of his, those little lenses whose equal did not exist in Europe or England or the whole world for that matter. What De Graaf saw through those microscopes made him ashamed of his own fame and he hurried to write to the Royal Society:

Leeuwenhoek answered the request of the Royal Society with all the confidence of an ignorant man who fails to realize the profound wisdom of the philosophers he addresses. It was a long letter, it rambled over every subject under the sun, it was written with a comical artlessness in the conversational Dutch that was the only language he knew. The title of that letter was: "A Specimen of some Observations made by the Microscope contrived by Mr. Leeuwenhoek, concerning Mould upon the Skin, Flesh, etc.; the Sting of a Bee, etc." The Royal Society was amazed, the sophisticated and learned gentlemen were amused—but principally the Royal Society was astounded by the marvelous things Leeuwenhoek told them he could see through his new lenses. The secretary of the Royal Society thanked Leeuwenhoek and told him he hoped his first communication would be followed by others. It was, by hundreds of others over a period of fifty years. They were talkative letters full of salty remarks about his ignorant neighbors, of exposures of charlatans and of skilled explodings of superstitions, of chatter about his personal health—but sandwiched between paragraphs and pages of this homely stuff, in almost every letter, those Lords and Gentlemen of the Royal Society had the honor of reading immortal and gloriously accurate descriptions of the discoveries made by the magic eye of that janitor and shopkeeper. What discoveries!

WHEN you look back at them, many of the fundamental discoveries of science seem so simple, too absurdly simple. How was it men groped and fumbled for so many thousands of years without seeing things that lay right under their noses? So with microbes. Now all the world has seen them cavorting on movie screens, many people of little learning have peeped at them swimming about under lenses of microscopes, the greenest medical student is able to show you the germs of I don't know how many diseases—what was so hard about seeing microbes for the first time?

But let us drop our sneers to remember that when Leeuwenhoek was born there were no microscopes but only crude hand-lenses that would hardly make a ten-cent piece look as large as a quarter. Through these—without his incessant grinding of his own marvelous lenses—that Dutchman might have looked till he grew old without discovering any creature smaller than a cheese-mite. You have read that he made better and better lenses with the fanatical persistence of a lunatic; that he examined everything, the most intimate things and the most shocking things, with the silly curiosity of a puppy. Yes, and all this squinting at bee-stings and mustache hairs and what-not were needful to prepare him for that sudden day when he looked through his toy of a gold-mounted lens at a fraction of a small drop of clear rain water to discover—

What he saw that day starts this history. Leeuwenhoek was a maniac observer, and who but such a strange man would have thought to turn his lens on clear pure water, just come down from the sky? What could there be in water but just—water? You can imagine his daughter Maria—she was 19 and she took such care of her slightly insane father—watching him take a little tube of glass, heat it red-hot in a flame, draw it out to the thinness of a hair. . . . Maria was devoted to her father—let any of those stupid neighbors dare to snigger at him!—but what in the world was he up to now, with that hair-fine glass pipe?

You can see her watch that absent-minded, wide-eyed man break the tube into little pieces, go out into the garden to bend over an earthen pot kept there to measure the fall of rain. He bends over that pot. He goes back into his study. He sticks the little glass pipe onto the needle of his microscope. . . .

What can that dear silly father be up to?

He squints through his lens. He mutters guttural words under his breath. . . .

Then suddenly the excited voice of Leeuwenhoek: "Come here! Hurry! There are little animals in this rain water. . . . They swim! They play around! They are a thousand times smaller than any creatures we can see with our eyes alone. . . . Look! See what I have discovered!"

Leeuwenhoek's day of days had come. Alexander had gone to India and discovered huge elephants that no Greek had ever seen before—

AN OUTLINE OF "MICROBE HUNTERS."

PAUL DE KRUIF'S great book, "Microbe Hunters," divides itself naturally into 12 chapters, and in these chapters is traced the steady, continuous growth of the scientific attack of disease through knowledge of the minute animal life which causes disease.

Head of the royal line of microbe hunters was Leeuwenhoek, the first man to see a microbe and one of the most human characters in the history of science.

After him came Spallanzani, a rather gay-hearted Italian priest, whose mind and abilities were far superior to those of Leeuwenhoek. His great contribution to knowledge seems now to be that he demonstrated that microbes must have parents.

The third great figure is Pasteur, who probably did more for the species of which he was a member than any other man. Pasteur was the first man to prove that some microbes are enemies of the human race, a fact unsuspected by either of his predecessors.

Then came Koch, even in Pasteur's lifetime a great and profound German scientist, who, although he was led into grave errors by nationalistic ambition, nevertheless is one of the benefactors of the human race.

Other great names are Roux, Behring, Metchnikoff (half genius, half insane) and Ross and Grassi, bitter scientific foes, who worked at the same time, but far apart, but whose combined efforts produced a knowledge which subjugated malaria.

Then there is Theobald Smith, the stout American whose fascinating experiments proved the connection between cattle ticks and Texas fever.

Walter Reed was the American army doctor under whose hand volunteer soldiers faced death more imminent and terrible than they did before the rifles of the Spanish army. One of the great stories of danger and adventure is this chapter.

Bruce, the dour Scot, who depopulated a whole country in Africa in his endeavor to overcome the tsetse fly.

And last is Paul Ehrlich, possibly the greatest scientist of them all, whose "magic bullet" has made life available for millions of men and women throughout the world.

but those elephants were as commonplace to Hindus as horses were to Alexander. Caesar had gone to England—but these Britons were as ordinary to each other as Roman centurions were to Caesar. Balboa? What were his proud feelings as he looked for the first time at the Pacific? Just the same, that ocean was as ordinary to a Central American Indian as the Mediterranean was to Balboa. But Leeuwenhoek? This janitor of Delft had stolen upon and peeped into a fantastic sub-visible world of little things, creatures that had lived, had bred, had battled, had died, completely hidden from and unknown to all men from the beginning of time. Beasts these were of a kind that ravaged and annihilated whole races of men ten million times larger than they were themselves. Beings, these were, more terrible than fire-spitting dragons or hydra-headed monsters. They were silent assassins that murdered babes in warm cradles and kings in sheltered palaces. It was this invisible, insignificant, but implacable—and sometimes friendly—world that Leeuwenhoek had looked into for the first time of all men of all countries.

This was Leeuwenhoek's day of days.

That man was unashamed of his admirations and his surprises at a nature full of startling events and impossible things. How marvelous it would be to step into that simple Dutchman's shoes, to be inside his brain and body, to feel his excitement — at his first peep at those cavorting "wretched beasties."

That was what he called them, and, as I have told you, this Leeuwenhoek was an unsure man. Those animals were too tremendously small to be true, they were too strange to be true. So he looked again, till his hands were cramped with holding his microscope and his eyes full of that smarting water that comes from too-long looking. But he was right! There they were again, not one kind of little creature, but here was another, larger than the first, "moving about very nimbly because they were furnished with divers incredibly thin feet. Wait! Here is a third kind—and a fourth, so tiny I can't make out his shape. But he is alive! He goes about, dashing over great distances in this world of his water-drop in the little tube. . . . What nimble creatures!

"They stop, they stand still as 'twere upon a point, and then turn themselves round with that swiftness, as we see a top turn round, the circumference they make being no bigger than that of a fine grain of sand."

Why is the sharp taste of pepper? That was what he asked himself one day, and he guessed: "There must be little points on the particles of pepper and these points jab the tongue when you eat pepper. . . . ."

But are there such little points?

He fussed with dry pepper. He sneezed. He sweat, but he couldn't get the grains of pepper small enough to put under his lens. So, to soften it, he put it to soak for several weeks in water. Then with fine needles he pried the almost invisible specks of the pepper apart, and sucked them up in a little drop of water into one of his hair-fine glass tubes. He looked—

HERE was something to make even this determined man scatter-brained. He forgot about possible small sharp points on the pepper. With the interest of an intent little boy he watched the antics of "an incredible number of little animals, of various sorts, which move very prettily, which tumble about and sidewise, this way and that."

And now to write all this to the great men off there in London! Artlessly he described his own astonishment to them. Long page after page in a superbly neat handwriting, with little common words he told them that you could put a million of these little animals into a coarse grain of sand and that one drop of his pepper-water, where they grew and multiplied so well, held more than two-million seven-hundred-thousand of them. . . .

This letter was translated into English. It was read before the learned skeptics—who no longer believed in the magic virtues of unicorn's horns—and it bowled the learned body over. What? The Dutchman said he had discovered beasts so small you could put as many of them into one little drop of water as there were people in his native country? Nonsense! The cheese mite was absolutely and without doubt the smallest creature God had created.

But a few of the members did not scoff. This Leeuwenhoek was a confoundedly accurate man: everything he had ever written to them they had found to be true. . . . So a letter went back to the scientific janitor, begging him to write them in detail the way he had made his microscope, and his method of observing.

That upset Leeuwenhoek. It didn't matter that these stupid oafs of Delft laughed at him—but the Royal Society? He had thought they were philosophers. Should he write them details, or should he from now on keep everything he did to himself? "Great God," you can imagine him muttering, "these ways I have of uncovering mysterious things, how I have worked and sweat to learn to do them, what jeering from how many fools haven't I endured to perfect my microscopes and my way of looking! . . . . ."

But creators must have audiences. He knew that these doubters of the Royal Society should have sweat just as hard to disprove the existence of his little animals as he himself had toiled to discover them. He was hurt, but—creators must have an audience. So he replied to them in a long letter assuring them he never told anything too big. He explained his calculations (and modern microbe hunters with all of their apparatus make only slightly more accurate ones) he wrote these calculations out, divisions, multiplications, additions, until his letter looked like a child's exercise in arithmetic. He finished by saying that many people of Delft had seen—with applause—these strange new animals under his lens. He would send them affidavits from prominent citizens of Delft—two men of God, one notary public, and eight other persons worthy to be believed. But he wouldn't tell them how he made his microscopes.

THAT was a suspicious man. He held his little machines up for people to look through, but let them so much as touch the microscope to help themselves see better and he might order them out of his house. . . . He was like a child anxious and proud to show a large red apple to his playmates but loth to have them touch it for fear they might take a bite out of it.

So the Royal Society commissioned Robert Hooke and Nehemiah Grew to build the very best microscopes, and brew pepper water from the finest quality of black pepper. And, on the 15th of November, 1677, Hooke came carrying his microscope to the meeting—agog—for Antony Leeuwenhoek had not lied. Here they were, those enchanted beasts! The members rose from their seats and crowded round the microscope. They peered, they exclaimed: "This man must be a wizard observer." That was a proud day for Leeuwenhoek. And a little later the Royal Society made him a Fellow, sending him a gorgeous diploma of membership in a silver case with the coat of arms of the society on the cover. "I will serve you faithfully during the rest of my life," he wrote them. And he was good as his word, for he mailed them those conversational mixtures of gossip and science till he died at the age of ninety. But send them a microscope? Very sorry, but that was impossible to do, while he lived. The Royal Society went so far as to dispatch Doctor Molyneux to make a report on this janitor-discoverer of the invisible. Molyneux offered Leeuwenhoek a fine price for one of his microscopes—surely he could spare one?—for there were hundreds of them in cabinets that lined his study. But no. Was there anything the gentleman of the Royal Society would like to see? Here were some most curious little unborn oysters in a bottle, here were divers very nimble little animals, and that Dutchman held up his lenses for the Englishman to peep through, watching all the while out of the corner of his eye to see that the undoubtedly most honest visitor didn't touch anything—or filch anything. . . .

"But your instruments are marvelous!" cried Molyneux. "A thousand times more clear they show things than any lens we have in England!"

"How I wish, sir," said Leeuwenhoek, "that I could show you my best lens, with my special way of observing, but I keep that only for myself and do not show it to anyone—not even to my own family."

• • • •

Those little animals were everywhere! He told the Royal Society of finding swarms of those sub-visible beings in his mouth—of all places: "Although I am now 50 years old," he wrote, "I have uncommonly well-preserved teeth, because it is my custom every morning to rub my teeth very hard with salt, and after cleaning my large teeth with a quill, to rib them vigorously with a cloth. . . ." But there still were little bits of white stuff between his teeth, when he looked at them with a magnifying mirror. . . .

What was this white stuff made of?

From his teeth he scraped a bit of this stuff, mixed it with pure rain water, stuck it in a little tube on to the needle of his microscope, closed the door of his study—

What was this that rose from the gray dimness of his lens into clear distinctness as he brought the tube into focus? Here was an unbelievably tiny creature, leaping about in the water of the tube "like the fish called a pike." There was a second kind that swam forward a little way, then whirled about suddenly, then tumbled over itself in pretty somersaults. There were some beings that moved sluggishly and looked like wee bent sticks, nothing more, but that Dutchman squinted at them till his eyes were red-rimmed—and they moved, they were alive, no doubt of it! There was a menagerie in his mouth! There were creatures shaped like flexible rods that went to and fro with the stately carriage of Bishops in procession, there were spirals that whirled through the water like violently animated corkscrews. . . .

Everybody he could get hold of—as well as himself—was an experimental animal for that curious man. Tired from his long peering at the little beasts in his own mouth, he went for a walk under the tall trees that dropped their yellow leaves on the brown mirrors of the canals; it was hard work, this play of his, he must rest. But he met an old man, a most interesting old man. "I was talking to this old man," wrote Leeuwenhoek to the Royal Society, "an old man who led a very sober life, who never used any brandy nor tobacco and very seldom wine, and my eye chanced to fall on his teeth, which were badly grown over, and that made me ask him when he had last cleaned his mouth. I got for answer that he had never cleaned his teeth in his whole life. . . ."

Away went all thought of his aching eyes. What a zoo of wee animals must be in this old fellow's mouth. He dragged the dirty but virtuous victim of his curiosity into his study—of course, there were millions of wee beasties in that mouth, but what he wanted particularly to tell the Royal Society was this: that this old man's mouth was host to a new kind of creature, that slid along among the others, bending its body in graceful billows like a snake—the water in the narrow tube seemed to be alive with those little fellows!

THE YEARS went by. He tended to his little, dry-goods store, he saw to it the city hall of Delft was properly swept out, he grew more and more crusty and suspicious, he looked longer and longer hours through his hundreds of microscopes, he made a hundred amazing discoveries. In the tail of a little fish stuck head first into a glass tube he saw for the first time of all men the capillary blood vessels through which blood goes from the arteries to the veins—so he completed the Englishman Harvey's discovery of the circulation of the blood. The most sacred and improper and romantic things in life were only material for the probing, tireless eyes of his lenses.

The years went by and all Europe knew about him. Peter the Great of Russia came to pay his respects to him, and the Queen of England journeyed to Delft only to look at the wonders to be seen through the lenses of his microscopes. He exploded countless superstitions for the Royal Society, and aside from Isaac Newton and Robert Boyle he was the most famous of their members. But did these honors turn his head? They couldn't turn his head because he had from the first a sufficiently high opinion of himself. His arrogance was limitless—but it was equaled by his humility when he thought of that misty unknown that he knew surrounded himself and all men.

"My determination is not to remain stubbornly with my ideas, but I'll leave them and go over to others as soon as I am shown plausible reasons which I can grasp. This is the more true since I have no other purpose than to place truth before my eyes so far as it is in my power to embrace it; and to use the little talent I have received to draw the world away from its old heathenish superstitions and to go over to the truth and to stick to it."

He was an amazingly healthy man, and at the age of 80 his hand hardly trembled as he held up his microscope for visitors to peep at his little animals or to exclaim at the unborn oysters. But he was fond of drinking in the evenings, and his only ill seems to have been a certain seediness in the morning after such wassail. He detested physicians—how could they know about the ills of the body when they didn't know one-thousandth of what he did about the build of the body? So Leeuwenhoek had his own theories—and sufficiently foolish they were—about the cause of this seediness. He knew that his blood was full of little globules—he had been the first of all men to see them. He knew those globules had to go through very tiny capillaries to get from his arteries to his veins—hadn't he been the man to discover those wee vessels in a fish tail? Well, after those hilarious nights of his, his blood got too thick to run properly from the arteries to the veins. So he would thin it! He wrote the Royal Society:

"WHEN I have supped too heavily of an evening, I drink in the morning a large number of cups of coffee, and that as hot as I can drink it, so that the sweat breaks out on me, and if by so doing I can't restore my body, a whole apothecary's shop couldn't do much, and that is the only thing I have done for years when I have felt a fever."

That hot coffee drinking led him to another curious fact about the little animals. Everything he did led him to pry up some new fact of nature, for he lived wrapped in those tiny dramas that went on under his lenses just as a child listens open-mouthed with saucer eyes to the myths of Mother Goose. . . . He never tired of reading the same story of nature, there were always new angles to be found in it, the pages of his book of nature were thumbed and dog-eared by his insatiable interest. Years after his discovery of the microbes in his mouth, one morning in the midst of his sweating from his vast curative coffee drinkings, he looked once more at the stuff between his teeth—

What was this? There was not a single animal to be found. Or there were no living animals rather, for he thought he could make out the bodies of myriads of dead ones—and maybe one or two that moved feebly, as if they were sick. "Blessed Saints!" he growled: "I hope some great Lord of the Royal Society doesn't try to find those creatures in his mouth, and fail, and then deny my observations. . . ."

But look here! He had been drinking coffee, so hot it had blistered his lips, almost. He had looked for the little animals in the white stuff from between his front teeth. It was just after the coffee he had looked there— Well?

WITH the help of a magnifying mirror he went at his back teeth. Presto! "With great surprise I saw an incredibly large number of little animals, and in such an unbelievable quantity of the aforementioned stuff, that it is not to be conceived of by those who have not seen it with their own eyes." Then he made delicate experiment in tubes, heating the water with its tiny population to a temperature a little warmer than that of a hot bath. In a moment the creatures stopped their agile runnings to and fro. He cooled the water. They did not come back to life—so! It was that hot coffee that had killed the beasties in his front teeth!

"Life lives on life—it is cruel, but it is God's will," he pondered. "And it is for our good, of course, because if there weren't little animals to eat up the young mussels, our canals would be choked by those shellfish, for each mother has more than a thousand young ones at a time!"

He passed 80, and his teeth came loose as they had to even in his strong body; he didn't complain at the inexorable arrival of the winter of his life, but he jerked out that old tooth and turned his lens onto the little creatures he found within that hollow root—why shouldn't he study them once more? There might be some little detail he had missed those hundred other times. Friends came to him at 85 and told him to take it easy and leave his studies. He wrinkled his brow and opened wide his still bright eyes: "The fruits that ripen in autumn last the longest," he told them—he called 85 the autumn of his life.

Leeuwenhoek was a showman. He was very pleased to hear the ohs and ahs of people—they must be philosophical people and lovers of science, mind you—whom he let peep into his sub-visible world, to whom he wrote his disjointed marvelous letters of description. But he was no teacher. "I've never taught one," he wrote to the famous philosopher Leibnis, "because if I taught one, I'd have to teach others. . . . I would give myself over to a slavery, whereas I want to stay a free man."

"But the art of grinding fine lenses and making observations of these new creatures will disappear from the earth, if you don't teach young men," answered Leibnis.

"The professors and students of the University of Leyden were long ago dazzled by my discoveries, they hired three lens grinders to come to teach the students, but what came of it?" wrote that independent Dutchman.

"NOTHING, so far as I can judge, for almost all of the courses they teach there are for the purpose of getting money through knowledge or for gaining the respect of the world by showing people how learned they are, and these things have nothing to do with discovering the things that are buried from our eyes. I am convinced that of a thousand people not one is capable of carrying out such studies because endless time is needed and much money is spilled and because a man has always to be busy with his thoughts if anything is to be accomplished. . . ."

That was the first of the microbe hunters. In 1723, when he was 91 years old and on his deathbed, he sent for his friend Hoogvliet. He could not lift his hand. His once glowing eyes were rheumy and their lids were beginning to stick fast with the cement of death. He mumbled:

"Hoogvliet, my friend, be so good as to have those two letters on the table translated into Latin. . . . Send them to London to the Royal Society. . . ."

So he kept his promise made 50 years before, and Hoogvliet wrote, along with those last letters: "I send you, learned sirs, this last gift of my dying friend, hoping that his final word will be agreeable to you."

So he passed, this first of the microbe hunters. You will read of Spallanzani, who was much more brilliant, of Pasteur, who had a thousand times his imagination, of Robert Koch, who did much more immediate apparent good in lifting the torments that microbes bring to men—these and all the others have much more fame today. But not one of them has been so completely honest, so appallingly accurate as this Dutch janitor, and all of them could take lessons from his splendid common sense.

PAUL DE KRUIF,
Author of "Microbe Hunters."

Leeuwenhoek's work was taken up by a brilliant Italian priest, Spallanzani, the subject of the second installment of "Microbe Hunters."

Sunday Night

Families Fast.
Let's Go Visiting.
Problems of Hostess.
The Rough Side of Bridge.

A GREAT many people adopt the tentative plan of fasting on Sunday night. After the noontime bacchanal, the lady of the house will get up and say: "This ought to run us for awhile," and she stacks the dishes in the sink in accordance with the zoning ordinance. Apparently, everyone is satisfied to shun supper, but at about 5:30 the committee on ways and means calls a conference in front of the great open spaces of the icebox. Somebody makes a crack about a foraging expedition, and the scheduled fast develops into a visit to Uncle August, who was seen coming out of the delicatessen store with his arms full of bundles.

Uncle August never knows how many friends or relatives he has until Sunday night rolls around and they begin to accumulate for supper. Sunday night is when the unexpected guest is expected.

The family migrates to Uncle August's home and greets him with, "Awfully glad to see you again," and, "How is little Mary?" when they mean, "Introduce me to a swell plate of spaghetti," and, "I don't believe I've met your potato salad." The gathering takes on the aspect of a mass meeting. Uncle August lives on the fourth floor of a cliff dwelling, and the nimble relatives get up there via the stairway, while the feeble ones use the elevator. The host resumes his friendship with several relatives whom he hasn't seen since the Philippine Insurrection, and there is one man whom he doesn't recollect having seen at all—a man who bears a striking resemblance to the panhandler who stands in front of the Century Express Building.

The wife draws her husband aside and says: "I intended to keep the rest of the chicken for tomorrow, but I will have to serve it now or they will think we are holding out on them."

During the course of the meal, one of the relatives gets up and says: "We will now hear from the delegation from California," and at the conclusion of the feed, all tender the host a rising vote of thanks.

IT has become quite a problem to entertain these Sunday night conventions. A society woman wrote to a newspaper for assistance in this matter, as guests were prevalent around her house and especially on Sunday night. She addressed a letter to the author of the "Home Hints Column" and said whereas this column provided recipes which enabled her to hold her guests during a meal, there were no instructions on how to hold them after a meal, and would the author kindly kick in with a little data to help prevent the coats-and-derby sprint which ordinarily closed her functions. The woman explained that her piano was out of tune, and it was practically impossible to keep her mah jongg set intact as her husband always walked off with the dice.

The "Home Hints" editor suggested running a bridge tournament. The hostess acted on the suggestion, but it developed into one of those rough-and-tumble affairs that terminated with the arrest of all contestants. The Monday afternoon papers printed a society item to the effect that Mrs. Bingleworth spent the week-end in Central District Holdover.

Quite a few people attended the function. "We're going to skirmish a few rounds of bridge," announced Mr. Bingleworth, after the meal was over, and got his revolver. Several guests paled at the prospect of playing bridge, but none flinched, and in 10 minutes they were calling each other sapheads, numbskulls and horsethieves with the usual cordiality. The peculiar thing about bridge is that the player's venom is directed against his partner and not against his opponent.

Mrs. Bingleworth was a weak, delicate woman whose husband was considerably bigger than she, but this did not deter her from playing. The game proceeded with only minor violence for the first few minutes until Mrs. Bingleworth's voice screamed: "Leave me in a one double, will you?" Several guests ducked under the tables. Mrs. Bingleworth, apologizing for reaching, leaned over and fetched her husband a sound smack on the chin. He kicked the table aside, but Mrs. Bingleworth got up like a man, thrust her left foot forward and feinted adroitly. Mr. Bingleworth pelted his wife with all the pillows he could find on the davenport, but she went over to the buffet and got the chocolate cake she had baked and threw it at him.

Meanwhile the other guests were tearing and clawing at each other. The police reserves tore into the house just as Mrs. Bingleworth was crowning her husband with the bridge prize, an Oriental vase.

THE gentlemen assisted the ladies into the patrol wagon and got in after them, and they all composed themselves for the jaunt to headquarters.

The desk sergeant looked at the bump on Mr. Bingleworth's head and demanded: "Who put the mess on this guy's kettle?"

"That dame there," replied a patrolman, indicating Mrs. Bingleworth with a billy. "She sloughed him over the coco with a Chinese shaving mug."

When He Was Six.
A Squirrel-Tender.
Goes to Chicago Fire.
In College, Then to War.

ALONE in Seattle at the age of 6, broke and indebted to the hotel in the amount of $26.50 for board and room. How many kids would have faced a situation like this with equanimity! But I never lost confidence that I would find a way out. I forget just now what I did do; suffice it to say that inside of seven years I was in San Francisco, playing a cornet, evenings, at Tait's on the beach, and in the daytime working in the park as a squirrel tender. In those days there were no benches in the parks and a squirrel tender's job was to keep the squirrels out of the trees so the people would have some place to sit. Inasmuch as there were 186 squirrels in this particular park and I had only one assistant, you may imagine that I was kept hustling. squirrels get mighty tired of staying on the ground and would employ every imaginable subterfuge in their efforts to climb the tempting trees with which the park was plentifully supplied. Outwitting them and keeping them on terra firma developed both my brains and speed and 10 years later, when my three runs of the length of the field won Yale a championship game, 4 to 2, an Associated Press commentator said, "Harvard was beaten in the parks of San Francisco."

In the fall of this year an S O S was broadcast from Chicago—that gargantuan metropolis was in flames as a result of a cow named O'Leary dropping a lighted cigarette in a roll of films.

(Editor's note: This must be a mistake. Mr. Lardner is writing about the year 1895; the Chicago fire occurred in 1871.)

(Author's note: There is a considerable difference of time between Chicago and San Francisco.)

Every city of importance sent a volunteer fire company to the rescue. The company organized in San Francisco was composed of myself and Bill Lange, later to become famous as a ballplayer and dancing instructor. This, of course, was before horses or camels were thought of, and Bill and I had to drag our hose cart East afoot. Bill was very little help, and by the time we reached our destination the fire was out and I was 16 years of age.

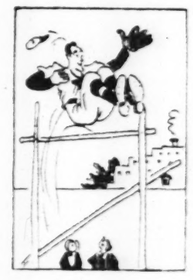
IT WAS now time to think of college. Stories of my all-around athletic prowess had appeared in all the papers and I received tempting offers from virtually every university of standing. I thought first of entering the Harvard Law School.

(Editor's note: It would have been impossible for Mr. Lardner at his age and with his credits, or lack of credits, to enter the Harvard Law School.)

(Author's note: That's why I thought of it first.)

Finally I decided to divide up my first year to the best advantage, going in the fall to Michigan, which needed a halfback with a sextuple threat, spending the winter at Amherst, where a high-class basket ball guard was wanted, and winding up in the spring at Tulane, which was anxious to land a good pitcher who could also pole vault, hurdle, throw the javelin and run as anchor man in the relay. With a schedule thus outlined I had leisure to write and enjoy myself in a social way during the summer months.

(Editor's note: Mr. Lardner, asked to explain the meaning of sextuple threat as applied to a halfback, said it meant a halfback who could not only kick, pass and run forwards, but also run backwards, act as field judge and announce the results of out-of-town games. He said that in all football history there had been only four really great sextuple threaters—himself, Marilyn Miller and the Mayo brothers.)



At this time Ada Rehan, the actress, was collecting autographs and pictures of taxicab drivers. There was a law in New York that every driver must have his picture pasted on his license card. As I was not driving a taxi and had never been to New York, she asked me to write a verse in her book. This was at a party she gave in Chicago and everybody was dying of thirst, so I wrote:

Enjoying it, you think,
With water, water everywhere
And nothing else to drink?
Alone, alone, all, all alone,
Alone on a wide, wide sea,
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

Miss Rehan was very much pleased and made the suggestion that we go home as she had a matinee the following day. She was then playing in "Stop! Look! Listen!"

It was now that the Spanish War broke out and I enlisted as a General.

Arthur had his hand hard upon her mouth, and had otherwise so grasped her body that she could not twist a thin shoulder or wiggle an ankle.

"Keep still!" he breathed grimly in her ear.

SOMEHOW, he knew that it was Linny. And her hair was so perfumed that her presence would betray itself to a dozen dark rooms. It was a mixed Parisian-named scent, too, that he detested; for six months it had been the rage among Linny's kind, and had assailed him in theater, restaurant and elevator.

Because of this close contact, he was afraid that his own clothes would reek of it. Good heaven, he'd have to give this suit away.

She struggled wordlessly. But it was like holding a skinny child. She had no chance. He was making ready to leap down the hall, incommoded as he was by her, when—stumble!

Not Kemmer himself. Someone in the room. A heavy foot had hit something heavier—like an old walnut leg of a chair.

"Hang it!"

Almost Kemmer let Linny go. That throaty voice sounded familiar. And it was no young man's voice! He became aware, too, that the girl in his arms had seemed to collapse, to be incapable of movement.

The speaker must have been the last to enter the room. And he seemed not a crafty person. He flashed a large pocket light over the room. He had careful, middle-aged movements. And his own light revealed him. Linny must have shuddered.

He disregarded two slight sounds which Kemmer caught. But he saw—he saw a foot.

Not his own foot. Another man's! Kemmer saw it, too. The leg to which this foot was attached was behind a revolving bookcase in the southeast corner of the room.

It was a thin, old-fashioned leg.

"COME out!" said Linny's father, commandingly. "Whether you're young Westby or a common burglar!"

Rather tremblingly, the leg came—also its mate, and a neat white head.

"Why—why, what are you doing here?"

"What are you, George?" tremulously retorted the addressee.

There was no reply. The flash lamp had come to rest upon something prim and white, with a bald spot, at one side of a huge brown leather couch in the northwest corner of the room.

The bald spot rose. A form that had been on all fours appeared.

"It's only me," a voice said, waveringly.

"You!"

"You!"

"You had a lecture in Oaktown!"

"I sent word I was detained by an accident."

A sneeze! A sneeze from somebody under a massive walnut desk.

Henry Bean crawled out somewhat sheepishly and was helped to his feet by six hands.

"Whatever that Bat fellow may be," he declared, with heat, "his mother is a poor product. Instead of gallivanting and leaving her house to be entered by anyone at all, she'd better stay at home and stand over a hired girl while the dust gets wiped from the hidden places in this room."

Speaking earnestly, he had moved his foot.

"Ouch!" said a voice resentfully.

Four electric torches were turned under a heavy armchair.

"It's me," said Linny's cousin, Burt, scrambling out and up. "No, I don't feel even a Platonic affection for my irresponsible cousin, Linny. I pity the man she marries. But I must say, Uncle George, you might have trusted me to help the little idiot out of her scrape—although I'll say I only by accident managed to evade Arthur and get here. But for you, Uncle George, to engage in anything so questionable—even risky"——

"RISKY, your feet!" snorted his uncle. "I've known Mary Westby since third grade in school. And I'd be glad if she caught me here, or that son of hers, either. And if you'll tell me what else I could do except try to keep my name and my child's out of the newspapers and save her from the consequences which she richly deserves—but which no father could make up his mind to let her incur, even if he had to break into an old friend's house, like a common lawbreaker! Had to send word, too, to the Rotarians that I sprained my ankle!"

It was Burt who suggested that they put hands upon what they had come for, and depart.

Five lights played over the desk. There came five grunts of satisfaction.

THE FIRST PAGE OF THIS MAGAZINE

MODERNIST influences in art are disclosed in the portrait of Cynthia by the Italian painter, Felice Casorati, which is reproduced on the front page of this week's Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine. Not a cubistic painting, yet it distinctly shows cubistic influence in the geometrical treatment of the piquant face framed by its modern bobbed hair, and in the unusual treatment of the draperies in the background. In these, as in the features of the sitter, a third dimension, a certain solidity, is obtained through this modern mood. While the work is modern, it is manifestly the painting of one who has mastered the technic of art, and not a strained and determined gesture in an attempt to be different. In particular, the painting of the hands is notable in its combination of fidelity to appearance and achievement of real, living structure beneath the surface: The picture came to St. Louis as one of the paintings exhibited in the annual International Exhibition, assembled by Carnegie Institute. It is loaned from the collection of Herbert Spencer Greims.

"Here's a rubber band," offered the cousin. "Seems to be intact."

The father put it into his pocket and then the five filed through the doorway. Kemmer thanked dead architects for double doors and velvet portieres. When, clumsily for the most part, and with audible grunts, the five had gone through the window at the end of the hall, Kemmer gave an exclamation.

Linny had set her teeth into his palm.

"Your hand became tiresome," she whispered viciously. "Who are you?"

"Doesn't matter."

"YOU'RE not Bat. You're too thin. You're not Hugg. You're too tall." She ran her free hand over his face. He regretted his tortoise-rimmed glasses. Still, these are fairly common.

She did not recognize him by them. But she flashed an unexpected electric torch. Too late, he tried to turn his face.

"What are you doing here?"

"I hardly know," he snapped. "Possibly primeval instinct—if you know what that means."

"I'm dumfounded," she said, oddly. "I never dreamed that you had an idea outside yourself and your future!"

"Really?"

"Well,"—defensively—"you rising young professional men are so fond of yourselves. It sticks out all over you. I always feel very sorry for your wives."

"Oh, you do?" Sarcasm rose to her bait.

"Well, the poor things—the wives, I mean—have to be so much on the job—helpful creatures, you know, who never become discouraged. You know all that junk you read in married-life stories."

"Hadn't we better be on our way?" he said with dignity.

Then he wished that he had not said that. Her way need not be his. He played his electric torch down the hall and followed the gleam. But she was quick to keep at his side.

"Don't leave me!"—crossly. "I didn't think the house would be so dark."

"Is that all you're thinking?" he demanded with asperity.

"No!" unexpectedly she retorted. "I'm—I'm so surprised I don't want to think. About all of you!"

"I hope your friend Hugg will be satisfied."

"I hope so, too. It was the tooth he minded worst."

"The tooth?" said Kemmer involuntarily.

"HUGG'S first baby tooth, which his mother had set with a tiny sapphire and hung on a platinum chain. Bat was so delighted to get it, and he threatened to take it to college to show everyone"——

"Was that the most valuable thing in that billbook for which we risked"——

"Oh, there was other stuff! There was a bill for Hugg's toilet water—he was wild for fear the fellows would find out how much he spends on that—and a charge slip for the electric horse that he was trying to learn to ride on at home in privacy—Hugg's always talking about renowned polo players."

"I see," said Kemmer grimly. "How pleased your father and cousin and the others will be when they learn"—

They had come to a cross-street.

"How did you get out of your room?" he asked

"Two nail files for unscrewing the whole lock." She waved a hand and began to run down the side street. "Good night. I want to get home first."

Arthur Kemmer rejoined his friend and professional associate, who, with an eyeshade, was bent over desk and architectural plans. Burt was scowling, as if the work was hard.

"Headache better?" he asked.

"Much."

KEMMER did not feel inclined for conversation with Burt. Linny occupied his mind. He found himself dwelling unwillingly upon what sort of a wife Linny would make a rising young professional man. He feared that she would be a distracting helpmeet. It was true, of course, that no man particularly yearns for a too-docile wife. Still, one likes to approach the future with a certain amount of trust and calm. Whereas, Linny——

He gave a sigh. He did not like the aspect of the future. It gleamed uncertainly, that future—like quicksilver.

On the other hand, it might prove to be real silver. He sighed again—helplessly, but not as if overdismayed. Linny had been a soft and scented armful. He rather regretted, now, that the evening was over. . . . The tooth marks in his palm still hurt. He looked at them, surreptitiously, and grinned. The little vixen! But could anybody really blame her? Somehow, he couldn't.

a company assembled in the taproom. It was just the hour he had ordered supper.

"Has a man in black been here?" he asked.

"No," they said.

"He will be," retorted Gamache, and strode into the private dining room. He bade the hostess serve the dinner. He ordered her to close the door behind her.

Her other guests gazed in terror at the mystery of that closed door. Suddenly they saw it open; out among them. Then they saw Gamache rise and bow as if to a companion. He took a seat again. The door closed, swung slowly to as the habitants crossed themselves. A long stick within the room, so the abbe explains, had helped Gamache to play his farce.

DURING a tempestuous and wild sea, continues Abbe Ferland's story, a young pilot found himself unable to steer his sloop and took refuge, in despair, in le Bai de Gamache. He had heard a thousand and one tales about Gamache, but the fear of certain death in those seas made him willing to trust himself in the retreat of the sorcerer. He was anxious to get some rest in the cabin of his sloop, but this seemed full of danger, for Gamache, seeing him in the harbor, had come down and invited him to come ashore. It might be perilous, said Gamache, but the sorcerer himself bore witness it was less perilous to trust than to defy him. So, more than half dead with fear, the pilot came trembling to the house, into which its master had preceded him.

His first glance showed the young man a stack of arms from floor to ceiling in le maison Gamache. The sight froze his blood.

Supper passed gayly enough. The pilot capped Gamache's stories with his own best. He thanked his host and announced that he was ready to return to the sloop and retire.

"No, my friend," said Gamache. "You will not go. The sea is too rough. You cannot leave the bay. The night is cold and wet. You are not going to sleep in the sloop."

"I have a good corner for you upstairs," he continued. "Tomorrow you can go, if you are still alive."

A straight ladder led to the loft. Gamache lighted the way. "There," he said, pointing within, "go to sleep and sleep as long as you can. The bed is of moss. The covers are of the feathers of geese and ducks and swans; because, you see, I have a steady hand and I never miss a shot when I pull the trigger."

GAMACHE closed the door and fastened it from the outside. There was no chance of escaping now. The pilot's voyage had been longer than usual. Perhaps it was but the prelude to a more terrifying voyage! It was necessary for the young sailor to keep awake, to be ready for the moment of danger. Alas, he was so young to die so soon. He thought of his mother. Who would take care of her now? He threw himself, fully dressed, upon the bunk and determined not to close an eye the whole night through. Yet, his voyage had been long. It had been superhuman work to bring his craft to port. Humanity overcame determination. The youthful pilot slept.

Terror followed him in sleep. He dreamed through a thousand perils. He had escaped from the cabin of the giant Gamache. The giant was pursuing him upon a burro. The youth threw himself into a sloop. He hoisted the sails and they filled with wind. In a moment more he would be beyond the giant's reach. . . .

There came a knocking at the door.

"It is Gamache himself," said a voice which aroused the boy from dreams. He looked up. Gamache was already in the room. In one arm he bore a musket. His other hand held a lantern. He was bending over the pilot, peering into the youth's terrified eyes, behind his great beard.

"Then it is true, all they say about this man Gamache," thought the pilot.

But the sorcerer seemed to divine his thoughts.

"Very well, coward! I have come to put an end to your misery," he said.

He lifted the gun and, turning, walked to the wall, where he hung the weapon up on two pegs. Then from his pocket he drew a bottle as he turned, and a glass also.

The latter he filled with brandy and, lifting it, the sorcerer drank a great health to his guest. He filled it again.

"Drink," he said. "You can afford to return the compliment."

Trembling, the young pilot swallowed something like liquid fire. He was expecting, perhaps, the taste of brimstone. It was, instead, eau de vie—and of not bad quality.

"TAKE a good one," Gamache was saying. "And after that, if Gamache comes to the attack tonight, defend yourself. I have loaded that gun hanging over there. I brought it to you purposely." He stalked from the room.

"Well, comrade," he cried, next morning, when the young pilot descended the ladder. "You were afraid last night. I saw that perfectly well. I wanted to do you some good. That is why I brought the brandy and left you the gun. I wanted you to sleep. You'll know me presently, and after this if any of those cowards tell you Gamache kills travelers you tell them that they lie. The devil, you must know, is not as black as he is painted."

If old Gamache died three-quarters of a century ago the tradition of his evil doings persisted until the present century. There were outlaws and wreckers on the island for some years after M. Menier bought it.

Though Louis Joliet had been driven from Anticosti by the British when they burned his home and factory in 1690, the island remained in possession of his descendants for almost 200 years. It was sold by the Joliets and their assignors in 1875 to an English company which had been organized to exploit what it believed to be valuable fishing rights. That concern had induced many Newfoundland fishermen to colonize upon it. In a year the dream had come to naught. The company was bankrupt. Only the aid the Canadian Government furnished them saved the fishermen's lives. In 1886 F. W. Stockwell of Quebec purchased the island, paying $100,000 for it, and he, in 1888, sold it to the Anticosti Island Company, Ltd., of London. Seven years later that concern found its bubble burst. Its dream of empire had gone wrong, and for $160,000, in 1895, it sold Anticosti to M. Menier.

He was one of the richest men in the world. A manufacturer of a world-known chocolate. To pay $160,000 for a plaything cost no effort. What he wanted was a game preserve.

But primarily it was a summer home. Such a hunting estate! In length the island approximates 140 miles, in width it is as much as 40 to 50. In all, 3789 square miles, with between two and three million acres of natural woods. There was already some game. Bear, fox, marten and otter had not been exterminated. They were to be protected. So were the trout and salmon streams. And M. Menier would build a chateau.

THERE was but one flaw in the plan. Among those Newfoundland fishermen, some had stuck. Other squatters were on the island. M. Menier didn't want them killing his game. They couldn't live otherwise. They didn't believe he had a moral right to deprive them of their livelihood for his pleasure.

They put it on patriotic grounds. Who was this M. Menier, a Frenchman, who thought his chocolate millions could make Anticosti Island a vassalage of France? Who was he, anyway?

They repulsed those sent to take them away. The Menier minions had moral grounds, also They said the habitants were wreckers.

And maybe they were right. There were skirmishes on the island. There was a battle in the courts. Fishermen and wreckers joined forces and hid in the most inaccessible sections of the island's forbidding south shore. M. Menier wondered where they had gone. In his yacht, Velleda, he started out to see.

Out of the darkness which overtook the vessel shone the alluring beacon of the wreckers—thus the story of that adventure runs. The captain of the Velleda was about to shape his course toward the beckoning lights when M. Menier had his suspicions aroused, and, taking a dozen men in the launch, started for the shore. They were fired upon by the wreckers. Menier returned to his yacht, got together a posse of his employes and, heading them, discovered the hiding place of the outlaws. There was a pitched battle.

Jingoes on both sides sought to make that episode a cause for war. But wiser heads prevailed in France and Britain, and there was a compromise, by which the Anticosti squatters went to homesteads in Western Canada.

In 1900 the courts handed down a decision which established M. Menier in his right by purchase as lord of the island. He decided now to build his chateau—in fact, rather a villa—and supervised the architects himself. He sought to maintain the medieval tradition and refused to use any nails in the place. Every board was screwed in place with screws of wood or iron. How much money he spent may never be known. The art objects in the chateau were alone insured for $800,000. Among them was a Gobelin tapestry, for possession of which M. Menier had once outbid even the late J. Pierpont Morgan.

Slowly the place developed. There were originally foxes on the island. M. Menier sought to protect the native stock and add to it. Silver-fox ranching produced more than 1500 pelts in one season. M. Menier brought a thousand farm settlers from France and sought to establish them "on shares." Other industries were undertaken. It was discovered in the small pulp mill built to give men employment when there was nothing else to do that the vast timber resources of the island were most valuable.

Golf links were built. Deer were purchased and established on the island. Senator Menier had a plan for introducing musk oxen and wild Siberian ponies to the isle to see what the result would be.

BUT in the meantime death had taken M. Henri, the elder brother, and Senator Gaston Menier had taken charge of the island. To him, as to his brother, it was a refuge, in earlier years. Then the long trip across the Atlantic Ocean just for the purpose of spending a few weeks on the island became too much. And when the paper company came along with its offer of $6,000,000 he was ready to accept.

Anticosti's tradition of misfortune was broken.. The riches that Louis Joliet sought in that place of shipwreck had been found—by a multi-millionaire of France, who did not need them.

Dunraven's Gay Life in the West

the shooting. Naturally, the old-timers were with Jim, and a consensus of their opinion is that 'English gold killed Jim for opposing the land scheme.'"

This bloody feud between two of the most noted characters in this region proceeded without, so far as anyone knows, the actual connivance of Dunraven. It simply formed the dark and inevitable background of his plan to seize the park. Jim was shot in the summer of 1874. He lingered until the fall of that year, and, though in the meantime Griff Evans and several others were arrested for the crime, no one was ever punished. Before he died, Jim, by his pen, made clear that the cause for which he was sacrificed was to free the park of the domination of foreigners.

HOW much Rocky Mountain Jim's death had to do with the abandonment of the game preserve project is only to be conjectured. At any rate, it stirred up great wrath against Dunraven and his friends, who continued to make hunting trips here at intervals until 1881 or 1882, when the game preserve idea was definitely given up. The gossip that Dunraven had used illegal methods to obtain the land and had fenced in portions to which he had no claim whatsoever finally led, in 1877 and 1878, to a bold incursion into the Dunraven territory. Alex O. McGregor, H. W. Ferguson and W. E. James were three of the doughty natives who, incensed at the Earl's arrogance, trekked into the park and squatted on some of the Earl's choicest lands. Other parts of the region were also being settled and Dunraven, on his visits, moved his hunting grounds farther and farther into the wilderness. On the north fork of the Thompson, he finally established what became his favorite hunting spot. This is now known as Dunraven Glade, and the site of the lodge, at the head of Triangle Mountain, is still a little-frequented spot.

Another plausible reason for the transformation of the Dunraven estate into a cattle ranch, besides the rapid settlement that was being made, was the disappearance of the game. There were no game laws, and the native hunters, unawed by the Dunraven crowd, invaded the park at will to hunt and fish. By 1880 the magnificent herds had largely disappeared and bear and mountain lion became only occasional phenomena.

Dunraven himself, in these parts, is now a semi-mythical character. Those remaining who actually saw and talked with the young lord may be counted on the fingers of one hand.

On Dunraven's last visit, he was accompanied, wrote Lamb, "by his inamorata, who was registered (at Dunraven's hotel) as Mrs. Munroe, the celebrated actress of London, Dunraven presuming on American stupidity and credulity to hide the true facts of their connection."

One day, on the authority of Abner Sprague, Dunraven and Mrs. Munroe were sitting at the long table at the Old English Hotel for dinner. Joe Jefferson, the great actor, who had been attracted to the park by the celebrity attending the Dunraven visits, entered the room. He knew Dunraven and he knew Mrs. Munroe, but he sat down before he observed them together. When their relationship occurred to him, he arose and left the table to protest against their presence in a hotel which housed his wife and children. Dunraven and his companion were promptly ejected from the Earl's own hotel, an incident which rankled for a long time.

For many years following Dunraven's last visit, the foreign influence was much felt in Estes Park. Dunraven left in charge of his properties one Theodore Whyte, known as Lord Whyte, though his right to the title is not clear. Whyte, even more than his employer, was fond of doing things in the grand manner. Indeed, in a sense, the feudal estate of which Dunraven dreamed was more nearly approximated for a while by his manager. Whyte, still courting the visits of the British aristocracy, established a polo field near the Old English Hotel and even organized tilting tournaments after the old fashion. He imported prize Herefords from abroad, and soon had a magnificent herd grazing in the mountain meadows. Riding horses of rare quality also adorned the place.

JUST as the Dunraven idea of an English game preserve had faded away, the conversion of the place into a ranch and a mecca for tourists failed as a commercial proposition. "Lord Dunraven," said Lamb, "never received any revenue from his blood-stained, crime-sodden investments in the park lands, and after his escapade with that prominent actress(?), Mrs. Munroe, and his unfortunate Valkyrie yacht racing against American competition, he never returned to the park."

The yachting incident to which Lamb referred was Dunraven's unsuccessful effort to lift the America's cup with his yacht, Valkyrie, which he brought to the United States in 1893 to race against the Vigilant. The Vigilant won the first two races, and Dunraven complained that the boats lining the course had cut off the breeze and interfered with the proper handling of his craft. He was seen no more in American sporting circles after 1895, when once again his Valkyrie failed to win, being beaten by Defender.

In the meantime, Whyte was playing fast and loose with the Dunraven estates in Estes Park. The opinion of the natives is that Dunraven's interests were poorly protected, and that Whyte, by his extravagance and grand and unbusinesslike methods, dissipated the Earl's money. It is estimated the Earl sank several hundreds of thousands into Estes Park. Whyte was succeeded about 1892 by C. Golding Dwyer, who continued to run the place into the ground.

FINALLY, in 1907, Dunraven sold Estes Park to F. O. Stanley of Newton, Massachusetts, and the estate entered into its final phase as a playground for the American tourist. To the new owner, Dunraven said: "I wish you luck of it. Estes Park has cost me a pretty penny."

What was really an incident in the life of a young nobleman had far-reaching effects. It opened to the world a region of noble and unsurpassed beauty. From the world throughout the summer comes a constant stream of tourists, health-seekers, scientists seeking the surcease of a mountain-locked inclosure where nature was most prodigal. The trails are well-beaten, the game is gone, but back in the range, just beyond the endurance limit of the tenderer tourists, is the wild solitude which lured Dunraven across the ocean.

Sunday Night, at Home or Visiting

"Give 'em the cell next to those stick-up artists," directed the captain. "Any more bridge cases, Haggerty?"

The next morning Mrs. Bingleworth and her husband were haled before the magistrate. She obligingly posed for photographers, but he tried to hide behind his hat. The picture was printed that afternoon and bore the caption, "Mrs. Bingleworth, husky society leader, who socked her husband for leaving her in a one double. Criminal trying to hide face behind hat is husband. X marks court-plaster."

Mrs. Bingleworth testified that her husband not only left her in a one double, but had failed to lead her bid the night before. This was enough for the judge.

"You're free," he told her, "join the atmosphere. And you, you ruffian," turning to Mr. Bingleworth, "I ought to send you out to the rock-pile and have you grate a few boulders."

Mrs. Bingleworth said she would not ask that "Home Hints Column" for any more information about entertaining guests, no matter if her home was designated as a polling place during the next election.

The objection to these Sunday night tournaments is that it keeps all available patrolmen on bridge duty in the exclusive residence districts, while the rest of the city goes on gunning and making moonshine in perfect indifference. If people must have bridge, they need not congregate to play it, but can remain in their private homes and hear it over the radio. And if there is a hitch in the transmission, this does not mean that a tube has blown out, it merely means that the players have taken to throttling each other.

No Extortionate Price For Permanence

A fair exchange is notoriously no robbery, but the price that women's hair used to pay for a permanent wave was a distinct extortion. The permanence of the waves used to demand so much of the natural beauty of the hair in exchange! But no longer—for there is today the Eugène Method.

This induces the sleekest, flattest of permanent waves without sacrificing any of the hair's life or lustre.

Many methods of permanent waving first drench the hair in chemicals, then bake it until it is fixed rigidly in form.

The Eugène Method winds the hair dry, then softens it with tiny jets of clean, white steam until the hair relaxes comfortably into the permanent, natural looking Eugène Waves. The hair then dries naturally and gradually, with no loss of suppleness.

True, the Eugène Method is slightly more expensive, but your hair's beauty is no part of the price.

May we give you a little booklet which tells more about the Eugène Method? Perhaps, too, we may be able to direct you to a shop where you may inquire first-hand about it. Just drop us a note or a post card, and we shall forward the booklet to you at once.

The Danger of Common Ills

Constipation and its attendant evils conquered—

Skin and stomach disorders corrected—

Glorious vitality regained—

through One Simple Food

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

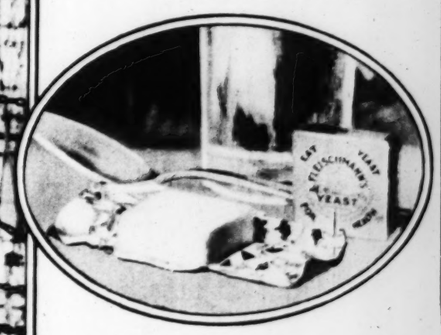
The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, nibbled from the cake. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before breakfast and at bedtime. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-915, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"MY SKIN WAS IN A POOR CONDITION and I was generally run-down. For days I never left the house. I began eating Fleischmann's Yeast. The Yeast not only cleared my complexion but changed me from a weak house flower to a strong woman. Now every day I walk five miles with my dog."

Mrs. Rod McMahon, Albany, N. Y.



THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion—clears the skin—banishes constipation.

"I HAD DIZZY SPELLS and a disagreeable rash on my skin. I had chronic constipation but did not know it until my physician told me. He directed that I eat Fleischmann's Yeast. In four months I was a new man. For ten months I have taken Fleischmann's Yeast daily. I don't get dizzy any more. My complexion is now clear. In a word, I feel in perfect health."

Leonard H. Dithrich, Pittsburgh, Pa.

LEFT

"ALL MY LIFE I have been bothered with stomach trouble. While home on leave, I got in the habit of eating Fleischmann's Yeast. Now I feel like a new man. I eat much more and perform my duties with much more pep."

RIGHT

"I DID COMPETITIVE SWIMMING and diving. I met with an accident which confined me in a hospital for a month. Afterwards I was very weak and tired easily. I decided I would make yeast a daily habit. After six months of yeast I was back in the swimming game."

Mrs. Betty Kurzweily, Chicago, Ill.

Here's a cooling summer beverage that is really good for you

DOWN from the land of the snow-clad pines it comes to you—glorious, golden, sparkling "Canada Dry."

Somehow it seems to make you cooler just to watch it dance and bubble in the dewy glasses. It's so clear and crisp and keen—like the cool of a mountain spring in the depths of the dark green forest.

You will relish this refreshing coolness on a hot summer's day and you will marvel at the wonderful flavor of this fine old ginger ale.

But there is another and even more important reason why "Canada Dry" is so good for you and why it has become, in four short years, the sensation of the United States. And that is its outstanding purity and quality!

For years and years this fine old ginger ale has been served in the great hospitals of Canada and it is now served in many of the leading hospitals in this country, including the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, the Woman's Hospital and the Presbyterian Hospital in New York.

A safe drink even for children

Physicians actually prescribe "Canada Dry" for their patients because of its purity and quality, and it has been approved by both the "Tribune" Institute and by Dr. Wiley, of the "Good Housekeeping" Bureau of Foods and Health.

The reason is simply because "Canada Dry" is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, and because it is one ginger ale that does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form.

A cooling drink for summer days

Drink "Canada Dry" with your luncheon these hot summer days and see how keen and fresh and cool it makes you feel the rest of the afternoon. Serve it at night-time with your dinner and note how it lures the lagging appetite. Sip it with a cracker or two just before retiring and know the peaceful calm that leads to deep and restful sleep.

Even people who used to say that they didn't like ginger ale have found a new delight in "Canada Dry." In purity and quality and in the witchery of its matchless flavor it is, indeed, "The Champagne of Ginger Ales."
